Abstract: Correspondence dated Apr. 10, 1940-May 28, 1945, reproduced from the California College in China records at Honnold/Mudd Library for the Claremont Colleges, Special Collections Dept.
William B. Pettus was president of the California College in China, 1916-1946. Joseph W. Stilwell was a U.S. Army officer who commanded the China-Burma-India theater during the World War II. In 1920, as the Army's first Chinese language student, Stilwell enrolled in the College of Chinese Studies in Peking (later renamed the California College in China), where he met Pettus and started a close, life-long relationship.

Vinegar Joe's war : Stilwell's campaigns for Burma / Nathan N. Prefer. – Novato, Calif.: Presido Pr., c2000. VIII, 312 p., illus., maps, index, bibliogr. p. 284-301.

ISBN 089141715X

Abstract: "Stilwell's campaigns in the China-Burma-India theater (CBI) were fought mostly by American infantrymen who, more by chance than design, found themselves fighting a "forgotten war." The distance from home and the sparse media coverage contributed to the ease in which this campaign faded from public awareness. There were no sweeping armored thrusts to report. There were no great battles of encirclement, either. It was battle at its most primitive, pitting ground soldiers against each other in harsh conditions of climate and terrain. It was a war in which the main ground supply and transportation routes depended on mules and horses." "Stilwell's campaigns continued throughout the end of the war and resulted in the opening of the overland route to China. Prefer's masterful account of Stilwell's campaigns sheds much needed light on this crucial theater of World War II." - Book jacket.

Étude linguistique de nissaya birmans (traductions commentées de textes bouddhiques) / William Pruitt ; sous la direction de Denise Bernot. – 1991. – Doct. (nouveau doctorat) (ét. ind. ext-orientales), inalco, 1991. – Other variant titles: A linguistic study of Burmese Nissayas (translations, with commentaries, of buddhist texts).

Abstract:

Word-for-word translations (nissaya) from pali into Burmese have been used for centuries in Burmese monasteries in teaching the monks and lay children. From the middle of the seventeenth century, nissayas have helped westerners in their study of burmese, buddhism and the Burmese judicial system. by comparing five versions of a nissaya with one another, with two other nissaya of the same pali text and with a modern, uninterrupted translation, it was possible to partially analyse literary burmese. the manuscripts and printed texts also supplied material for tables of abbreviations , spelling variants, and punctuation.

 Training Zomi Christian leaders for missions to Hindus and Buddhists / by Pum Za Thang Tombing. - 2002 X, 146 p., bibliogr. p. 137-146. - Tulsa, Okl., Oral Roberts Univ., School of Theology and Missions, D.Min. thesis, 2002
 Abstract: The purpose of this research project was to train and equip the Zomi Christian leaders in India and Myanmar for missions. It was designed ... to train evangelists and missionaries cross-culturally for missions to Hindus and Buddhists. The hypothesis of the project was that contextualized and research-based missionary training would improve Christian leaders' biblical concept of effective missionary work. The project addressed how the missionaries of Zomi churches faced cultural, ethical and religious problems among the Hindus and Buddhists. The Zomis are former headhunters from a non-caste animistic religious group with their own household government. After the arrival of Christianity, these headhunting tribes had become hearthunting Christians ...
