In this two-part book Taketani explores attempts to inculcate imperialist values through education in the works of Lydia Maria Child, Sarah Tuttle, Catharine Beecher, and others and the results of viewing the world through these values, as reflected in the writings of Harriet Low, Emily Judson, and Sarah Hale." - Book jacket.

Tales by Japanese soldiers of the Burma campaign 1942-1945 / [comp. by] Kazuo Tamayama and John Nunneley. 1st publ. – London : Cassell, 2000. 254 p., illus., 1 map. – Transl. from Japanese.

ISBN 0-304-35528-3

Contents: To Rangoon : January to March 1942 - Advance: March to June 1942 - Occupation: July to December 1942 - Arakan operations: January 1943 to March 1944 - Imphal and Kohima: March to July 1944 - Retreat: August 1944 to August 1945.

Note: "Over 305,000 Japanese soldiers fought in Burma between 1942 and 1945: 180,000 of them died. This book tells how the common soldier of the Imperial Japanese Army lived, fought and died in that terrible conflict. Here are straightforward accounts, sometimes moving, often shocking, of what it was like to fight a strange war in a strange country, far from home, short of food and weapons, confused, facing death from disease and starvation as well as enemy action."

"Sixty-two "tales", translated from the Japanese, trace the Burma campaign in chronological sequence and together offer a new perspective on a terrible war. Japanese soldiers, navy men, fighter pilots, and others were from a different culture, certainly, but they were not the devils of popular legend. Just like their enemies, they were frightened young men, fighting to the death a war they did not understand." "The Japanese are notoriously reticent about their involvement in the Second World War, and no similar volume has ever before been published, either in Japanese or English. Now, for the first time, the ordinary Japanese soldier tells his story." - Book jacket.

Summary: This book describes British policy in Southeast Asia between the outbreak of war in Europe in 1939 and the opening of the Pacific war at the end of 1941. The British government sought to preserve the status quo. Yet it was difficult for Britain to retain its position as the major colonial power in Asia when it had to pursue its struggle with Germany. The book shows that, unable to maintain effective naval or air forces in the East, the British drew on diplomatic resources to achieve their aims. The British wanted to avert the military expansion of the Japanese and to limit their penetration of the area. They had increasingly to rely on the United States, but had little control over American policy. It is this context that the book focuses on Britain's relations with the Netherlands East Indies, the Philippines, French Indo-China and Thailand. Nicholas Tarling's extensive analysis of British archives, together with documentary material on the foreign policies of other states, makes this an important reinterpretation of the origins of the Pacific war, which turned a European war into a world war. It is also the first time that the region as a whole has been considered in this context, and the interconnectedness of events explored. As a substantial study in diplomacy it is pertinent, invoking issues of continuing relevance to readers in international relations. Specialists in modern British history, Asian history and the history of World War II will also find the book invaluable.

Subject(s): Orwell, George, 1903-1950.

Authors, English – 20th century – Biography.

Journalists – Great Britain – Biography.

Note: D. J. Taylor's moving assessment cuts through George Orwell's iconic status to reveal a man who is uncertain about his writerly gifts and far less doctrinaire than previously thought. We meet a social critic who concealed a pronounced authoritarian streak, a supporter of classless society whose first thought for his adopted son was to enroll him at Eton. Orwell's journey through the literary world of the 1930s and 1940s is characterized by the myths he built around himself. Whether as reluctant servant of the Raj in 1920s Burma, mock down-and-outer in Paris and London, or courageous Spanish Civil War soldier (who when asked what he was fighting for, replied, "Common decency"), the circumstances of his life are sharply at odds with the image Orwell carefully and effectively stage-managed. As his friend Anthony Powell maintained, George Orwell was half in love with the thing he was rebelling against." "Drawing on a large body of previously unseen papers and numerous interviews with friends and others who knew him in his years of obscurity, Orwell, published for the centenary of his birth, is a human portrait of the writer too often embalmed as a secular saint: a man who combined modesty and a life of chilling detachment with warmth and gentleness, and who battled through illness to produce two twentieth-century masterpieces. – Book jacket

Note: "Warned by a Hong Kong fortune-teller not to risk flying for a whole year, Tiziano Terzani - a vastly experienced Asia correspondent - took what he called "the first step into an unknown world....It turned out to be one of the most extraordinary years I have ever spent: I was marked for death, and instead I was reborn." "Traveling by foot, boat, bus, car, and train, he visited Burma, Thailand, Laos, Cambodia, Vietnam, China, Mongolia, Japan, Indonesia, Singapore, and Malaysia. Geography expanded under his feet. He consulted soothsayers, sorcerers, and shamans and received much advice - some wise, some otherwise - about his future. With time to think, he learned to understand, respect, and fear for older ways of life and beliefs now threatened by the crasser forms of Western modernity. He rediscovered a place he had been reporting on for decades. And it reinvigorated him." – Book jacket.

VII, 108 p., col. illus. – (White Orchid books) – Publication supported by the Institute for Comparative Research in Human Culture, Oslo - T.p. verso. – ISBN 974-7315-76-9

Contents: Messengers to king and court - Grand imperial stage and the lesser stages - 1821 edict on marionettes - Appeasing the spirits - Orchestra - Individual characters - Art of making marionettes - Sublime masters of the stage - Pagoda festival

Note: In the 18th and 19th centuries, Burmese marionettes enjoyed a rare and powerful privilege as speakers for both kings and subjects. Never merely for entertainment, puppetry was a high art held in much esteem. Marionettes were means of making people aware of current events; a medium for educating the masses in literature, history and religion; a display of lifestyle and customs. These yoke-thei, "small dolls", enjoyed greater freedom of speech, dress and movement than live performers. They therefore played a significant role in the development of dance and dramatic arts. The author is a well known Burmese painter, and this lively book is liberally spiced with information about Burma and Burmese ways. It contains a systematic presentation of the Burmese marionette tradition, a tradition in danger of extinction.

ditto.: a holiday pilgrimage in Myanmar / Ma Thanegi. – Chiang Mai : Silkworm, 2004. 209 p., illus.

ISBN 9749575628 (pbk.)

Note: This is the story of an eighteen-day local bus pilgrimage to sixty pagodas across Myanmar. As the author settles into her bus seat, the aisle blocked with luggage, she trains our eyes on the collection of characters that, like it or not, will be her travelling companions for the whirlwind tour. This native tourist amuses us with her adventures of eating at roadside cafes, climbing up pagodas, bathing in rivers, shopping at markets, and sleeping on temple floors. Along the journey, she encounters deeply rooted cultural values and develops camaraderie with strangers that become like family for the duration of her travels." - book jacket.

The making of modern Burma / Thant Myint-U. 1st publ. – Cambridge ; New York ; Melbourne ; Madrid: Cambridge Univ. Pr., c2001. 284 p., index, bibliogr. p. [255]-271. ISBN: 0-521-78021-7 (hb.) ; 0-521-79914-7 (pbk.)

Contents: Introduction: the fall of Mandalay - 1 Kings and distant wars - 2 The Irrawaddy valley in the early nineteenth century - 3 The Court of Ava - 4 Empire and identity - 5 The grand reforms of King Mindon - 6 Revolt and the coming of British rule - 7 Reformists and royalists at the court of King Thibaw - 8 War and occupation - 9 A colonial society - Conclusion: the making of modern Bur-ma.

Note: Burma has often been portrayed as a timeless place, a country of egalitarian Buddhist villages, ruled successively by autocratic kings, British colonialists and, most recently, a military dictatorship. The Making of Modern Burma argues instead that many aspects of Burmese society today, from the borders of the state to the social structure of the countryside to the very notion of a Burmese or Burman identity, are largely the creations of the nineteenth century, a period of great change, away from the Ava-based polity of early modern times, and towards the "British Burma" of the 1900s. The book provides a sophisticated and much-needed account of the period, and as such will be an important resource for policy-makers and students as a basis for understanding contemporary politics and the challenges of the modern state. It will also be read by historians interested in the British colonial expansion of the nineteenth century. - Book jacket.

Note: The campaign in Burma was the longest and biggest ground war fought by the British and Americans against the Japanese. Including 1000 mile-long retreats and the great Allied victory at Kohima-Imphal, Burma brought the Allies a wealth of incomparably bitter combat experiences. Using the Imperial War Museum's archives, Major General Julian Thompson provides a gripping and unforgettable picture of what it was like to fight in this extraordinary conflict.

Note: "Shwe chi doe (pronounced schway-jee-doe) wall hangings have been made in the Mandalay area of Myanmar for more than 800 years. They are renowned for their beauty and quality of craftsmanship and have recently been "discovered" by art collectors and tourists from around the world. Yet little is known about them. Old and New Tapestries of Mandalay provides the first comprehensive description of these wall hangings, beginning with a historical overview of what they are, where they came from, and how they were used by Bamar royalty. The author describes the wide range of uses of schwe chi doe from ceremonial head-dresses to coffin covers and tapestries. The most common stories and motifs used in schwe chi doe are also described and richly illustrated with colourful photographs."

"The reader will be fascinated by the description of the production process, all of which is done by hand, including the making of special thread, sequins, and glass jewels. The tapestries of Mandalay, both old and new, are products of centuries of tradition. New artists, while remaining true to that tradition, have begun to develop new designs, themes, and motifs that promise to spark even more interest in this special textile art for years to come." - Book jacket.

Among insurgents : walking through Burma / Shelby Tucker. - London : Radcliffe, 1999. XXX, 386 p., 4 l. of plates.; illus. (some col.), maps, index, bibliogr. p. 359 to 366.

Contents: Itinerary: Dali-Oxford - 1. Fading Red Star - 2. The General's House Guests - 3. The Sons of Wahkyet Wa - 4. The Triangle - 5. Kumawng - 6. The Rivers - 7. Hidden Valley - 8. Arrest House - An Appreciation / Stephen Morse - Cartographer's Note / John C. Bartholomew - Chronological Guide to the Burmese Civil War - Note to the Author / Ronald Kaulback.

Note: "Shelby Tucker entered the Shan State of Burma through a border area of China closed to foreigners, crossed the Kachin Hills and left Burma via an area of India closed to foreigners. He was detained by Communist rebels, handed over to Kachin rebels and arrested by the Indian Army." "Among Insurgents is more than an adventure story. It describes the Kachins, the most important of Burma's "hidden colonies", of whom very little has been written, offers a brief and readable analysis of the Burmese Civil War, including its ethnic and religious dimensions, and examines the symbiotic relationship between the civil war and the international drugs trade. Shelby Tucker interviewed poppy farmers and leaders on both sides of the narcotics divide, and his report to the US National Security Council may have contributed to Washington's changed perception of the Burma Army as the main player in the trade." - Book jacket. - ISBN 1-86064-529-1 Junta - commercial interests - narcotics, forest and mineral resources - 8. The future - Civil rights abuse - Aung San Suu Kyi/Sein Win.

Note: The Burmese Civil War began 12 weeks after Britain granted Burma independence in 1948 and has continued ever since. This book defines its core causes for readers who are new to the subject or baffled by its complexities. Tucker draws on his experience as a trial lawyer to argue that Ne Win, and not the Burma politician hanged for the crime, murdered Aung San, and that the junta is the leading player in the country's flourishing drugs trade. Media emphasis on the junta's record of human rights abuse, he suggests, tends to obscure a strategic interest in ending the trade shared by all major powers. He surveys various scholars' assessments of the prospect of the peaceful devolution of power to civilian rule and concludes by proposing measures for assisting change in Burma. - Book jacket
