Reasons every one should deposit their Savings in Banks.

1. If money is kept in a private house it attracts thieves. If thieves come to take money they may take lives as well.

lear the lurgest

- 2. If money is kept in a house or in a hole in the ground the possessor earns no interest. On all money deposited with Banks, a depositor receives interest which is paid half-yearly.
- Money deposited in Banks is more readily available and gives the owner less trouble than money kept in a house or buried: because if he wants to make a payment, instead of opening boxes and counting coins and notes, he writes a cheque and the Bank takes all the trouble for him. Similarly if a depositor receives paymen by a cheque, instead of going a journey and collecting the money himself, he sends the cheque to his Banker who saves him the trouble without charge
- 4. Keeping money on Deposit with a Bank costs nothing but on the contrary yields a bi-annual return Money kept in a house or buried costs much time and trouble. and if strong rooms or vaults are built or Iron Safes purchased the expense is considerable
- If the custom of depositing savings with Banks were generally adopted by natives of India, I calculate that they would in the aggregate be richer by about Rs. 1 crore per annum. This is gate be ficile by accurate an average of Re. 1 per head UNACONIY, and allowing for an average return of interest at 3 per cent.

6. The Commercial Bank of India Limited, makes provision for all classes of investors. This Bank has the largest capital of any of the Banks in India which allow interest on similar terms and has Branch establishments in Bombay Calcutta, Karachi, London, Murree, Rawal Pindi, and Rangoon, the Head office being

The best patent Medicine yet discovered, approved and certified after experiment by eminent physicians as invaluable specific.

BLOOD SYRUP.—is a marvellous remedy for complete loss of manhood, nervous debility, spermatorrhora seminal weakness, prostration caused by extreme labour or other causes, such as indigestion, intemperance, im moderate indulgence in evil habits, mental anxiety, &c., and for the several discases of the productive organs. BLOOD SYRUP.—gives vigour, improves the weakness of the intellect and understanding, makes the imagination active and improves retentive powers.

BLOOD SYRUP.—is a wonderful preparation for removing entirely the after effects of released habits, the degranisation of blood, the want of metive power, and is a rebuilder of health.

BLOOD SYRUP.—is an infallible remedy for improving blood eruptions of the skin, old sores, rheumatism, removes any obstruction or irregularity of the system, and cures other female diseases.

MLOOD SYRUP.—is an infallible remedy for improving blood eruptions of the skin, old sores, rheumatism, revous disorder, depression of spirits, loss of energy, scrotulous constitution and unrefreshing sleep. &c.

BLOOD SYRUP.—also contains some electric preparation in it by force of which it acts like miracle in the human system and produces some shining sensation just after the medicine is taken and so the patient must feel its effect in the course of two or three days; unlike the ordinary patent medicines its effect is lasting. It cures disease of its own kind for ever without fear of relapse.

BLOOD SYRUP.—is void of any poisonous substance such as quinine, sulphur, arsenic, mercury, &c. It has a most curious quality to produce cheerfulness of mind, improve appetite and remove costiveness and to restore full strength of body.

BLOOD SYRUP.—such an invaluable medicine was never known to the world before. Its powers are un limited and infinite. Male or female, boy or girl, young or old, all patients can use it freely.

THE DOINGS OF MR. A. M. BOSE IN ENGLAND.

As we ventured to guess, Babu Ananda Mohan Bose had much to do with the Liberal victory in Wiltshire. The successful c'indidate, Lord Fitz Maurice, in a letter to him, acknowledges it in these to be tyrannical for any length of time. We have safeguards innumerable to pro-prominent Liberal, who was Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs during Mr. Glad-stone's administration. He and Babu the Secretary of State. Ananda Mohan are now great friends; and Placards, with large types, were put up, announcing that "the iron. A. M. Bose, M. he Government! A. will speak." They all call him Honour-able, against his protests. The Wisbech that we have not to depend solely upon spoke to them in a foreign language with so much pathos and eloquence (applause.)

In its editorial comments, the Advertiser remarks that "the chief speaker was the Hon. A. M. Bose, late a member of the Bengal Council", and that "Mr. Bose advocated the interests of his country with marked eloquence and ability.'

We are sorry to learn that there will be no special Indian Resolution at the Leicester Annual Meeting of the National Liberal Federtion, as their rules require two months' previous notice and circulation of any Resolu ion to be moved. So, Babu Ananda Mohan Bose will be deprived of moving a a formal Resolution on Indian subjects. Practically, however, this will make no difference. As a matter of fact, the Liberal Federation expect a very good piece of oratory from him, and so they have invited him. They have also done him a special honour. On the first day of the meeting it is usual to invite a few of the more distinguished delegates to address some county meetings in or about the place where the Federation is held, and Babu Ananda Mohan has heen selected as one of these few. We can guarantee that Babu Ananda Mohan will not let slip this

But there was yet this difference. The Resolution that was condemned, was passed by the Indians, and the one that we are referring to, was passed at a meeting of Englishmen. Well, it was, first of all, a public meeting. Secondly, it was a meeting of Englishmen. It was presided over, not by a disciple of Mr. Hyndman, but Mr. Todd, a Justice of the Peace, once a County Councillor for Cambridgeshire. The Resolution was moved by Mr. Cross, a pueca Englishman, and was seconded by Mr. Foster, another pueca Englishman; and it was unanimously adopted by this public meeting of Englishmen. Now to the Resolution; it was as follows:-

This meeting strengly condemns the Forward Military Policy as well as the re-actionary and repressive Internal Policy adopted by the present Government in India, as alike unworthy of the traditions and honour of England and fraught with danger to the safety of the

Let us repeat: The above Resolution was unanimously adopted at a public meeting "amid a scene of great enthusiasm by a large gathering," every member of which, except the speaker Babu Ananda Mohan, was an Englishman.

The British Committee of the National Congress has at last found an opportunity of organizing a meeting at Oldham on or about the 17th, to utilize the services of the part of the Committee can be easily accounted for. Let us mention here a singular circumstance in connection with the presence of Babu Ananda Mohan in England. He went there to find work waiting for him. His advent was followed by spontaneous invitations from many quarters, even from parties who were uttterly unknown to him. The British Committee had, however, hitherto no opportunity of inviting him. We are glad to learn that God has given us a lady worker who does not, like Mrs. Besant, eschew poli-Lieutenant of Cambridgeshire, is a most devoted and earnest worker and a good speaker. How ours, and we have every liberty here. How then do the repressive measures affect us? It is because we are a bad lot; we quarrel amongst ourselves and maintain these lots of Civil and Criminal Judges and the Police. If we could be good Vaishnavas and did our duty to one another.-if we could live in peace with our neighbours and pay our taxes,—even the existence of re-pressive laws would not be known to us.

So, you see, we have yet a way out of the difficulty,—a way which is open to us, namely, for ourselves to be as good as we ought to be in a country where Lord Gauranga appeared. Let all of us follow the teachings of Lord Gauranga, and this will not only make all repressive laws inocuous, but better our prospects in the

Then, there is no harm in relying on the virtues and good feelings of Englishmen. For Englishmen, with instincts of fairness, and Englishmen. with good feelings for us, have not as yet disappeared from England. They do exist, if not strong in combination, at least as strong in numbers as ever.

There was a time when one Englishman protected the three hundred millions of Indians from the actions of high-handed officials. From the deposition of a prince to the oppression of an indigo-planter, nothing escaped his lynx-eye. The result was that none was harassed but everyone was benefited. His vigilance served the officials and the people alike. The former found in that vigilance a motive to be law-abiding, and the latter, the protection that they needed.

That illustrious Englishman not only afforded protection to the people from petty oppressions, but also secured for them the germ for future emancipation we mean, the Indian Councils Act. Need we mention the name of Charles Bradlaugh, whose image is enshrined in the hearts of the Indians? He died, and his mantle fell upon Mr. Caine. He would have done as well; but he was defeated and Mr. Roberts is doing his work. It is often alleged that the future before us is dark, and there is not a ray of hope to enliven the gloom. No, that is not it. If Providence gives us one Brad Babu Ananda Mohan. Of course, we are now beating our breasts in sorrow; but only a few years ago we had wed-nigh secured the prize. The prize slipped out of our hands, no doubt; that was oecause we did not deserve it. It was Mr. Gladstone who is responsible for the farce of the local self-government that we have got now. If he had not intervened, Charles Bradlaugh and our other friends would have extorted more from Lord Cross.

Ponder on what he says in the above. Despair does not suit men who have a noble country like India. Starve yourself to find funds for the purpose of awakening the con-science of Englishmen to their duty. Let Babu Ananda Mohan and a few others be stationed in England for some time; let them help the Liberals to attain to their original position which they have lost; and India will get what it deserves. The Liberal candidates for S. E. Durham and N. Wiltshire, Alderman Richard and Lord Fitz Maurice respectively, owe their success, to a considerable extent, to the services of Babu Ananda Mohan Bose.

THE BENGAL TENANCY BILL. Besides the Calcutta Municipal Bill, Sir Alexander Mackenzie leaves behind him another legacy to he people in the shape of the Bengal Tenancy Act Amendment Bill. We were under the impression that sufficient time would be given to the lakhs of Government or Khas Mahal ryots in Bengal, who are vitally interested in its provsions, to represent their views on the subject. But Sir Alexander is in a hurry,very great hurry-to go home; so, rather the interests of so many helpless creatures should suffer than the pleasure of witnessing the completion of his labours in this connection before his depar ure from this country should be given up. As in the case of the Municipal Bill, the principle of the Tenancy Bill also is almost revolutionary in its character; for, if the Ideal that was practised and preached by the Prophet of Nadia. But it is possible. What the temporarily-settled estates and Khas Mahals will be placed at the absolute mercy of the revenue officials.

the most valued and sacred rights that the occupancy ryot has acquired under the Bengal Tenancy Act. Under the existing law, the rent recoverable from occupancy ryots must be presumed to be fair and equitable unless the contrary is proved. So, before the rent can be enhanced it must be establishafter going through a certain procedure, with a pre-conceived object in view.

The innovation, referred to above, is then this: The control of the judicial officers (the Special Judge and the High Court) over the action of the revenue authorities in the matter of settlement of fair rent is proposed to be entirely swept away by the Bill. The High Court strongly objected to this innovation, and so did the Landholders' Associations in Bengal; and the Government has agreed only so far as to modify the Bill in this respect concerning the permanently-settled estates.

Here let us en passant refer, with much regret and surprise, to the change of front of the Committee of the British Indian Association in this connection. When the Road Cess was first sought to be imposed upon the Zemindars in Bengal, the British Indian Association opposed the proposal with great vehemence, as they alone were proposed to be fleeced. The Government, however, changed its tactics. and suggested that the Zemindars alone would not have to pay the cess, but that it would be shared in by the ryots also. If the British Indian Association had stuck to their original resolution, the probability is that the Government would have given up the idea of imposing the cess in this Province; for, the authorities in those days had some regard for indian public opinion, and the British Indian Association carried a good deal of influence over them. Unfortunately, they swallowed the bait, and the cess was imposed practically with their consent, and the thin end of the wedge inserted into the fabric of the Permanent Settlement.

A similar proposal was also made to the British Indian Association by Sir Alexander Mackenzie when he intended to amend the Bengal Tenancy Act His Honour was for abolishing the operation of the Civil Procedure Code in the settlement of rent both in permanently-settled and temporarilysettled estates and Khas Mahals; and he suggested to the Association that both private landlords and Government should avail of this method and procedure for settlement o' rents in their respective estates. The Committee of the B. I. Association, however, thanked the Lieutenant-Governor for of the elected Commissioners, but that, at official members was drawn to it by a new official member and they admitted that

It is my conviction that if facts relating to India are properly placed before an English constituency direct and face to face—our appeal will meet with a generous response from every true British heart. But the battle will not be won in a day. There is need for patient, persevering, loyal and earnest work for many a long day.

Ponder on what he says in the above proposal for the alteration of the procedure improvement upon the existing procedure."

We are left quite in the dark as to the personalities of those "several Muffasil members" who succeeded in persuading the prefer a Revenue Officer to a Judicial in matters relating to the settlement of rent. As expected, however, this change of front was very "satisfactory" to Sir Alexander Mackenzie, though he was unable to oblige the Committee as the matter had passed out of his hands. The ryots and zemindars of the permanently-settled estates are thus saved from the operation of the provision it is the ryots of the temporarily-settled estates and the Khas Mahals who will bear the whole brunt of it.

Be it recorded here that the judicial control is more needed in the temporarily-settled estates and Khas Mahals than in the permanently-settled Zemindaries; and it is there that the Revenue Officer is proposed to be left the sole master of the situation. What will happen, is this. The Subordinate Revenue Offices (Deputy or Sub-Deputy Collector) will settle rents, according to the instructions of the Collector or the Settlement Officer; and the appeal against his decision will lie to the same Collector or Settlement Officer who issued the instructions! Is this not a beautiful arrangement?

We shall make the position still more clear by a concrete example. Take the case of the present settlement of Kharda Khas Mahal (Puri). There the Government has decided that the rents of the ryots should be enhanced three annas in the rupee. The Settlement Officer and his assistants have no option but to carry out this "mandate". Under the present law, if the Assistant Settlement Officer proposes the enhanced rent to the tenants and if they refuse to accept it, then he has to enhance the rent judicially after the record of evidence, and his decision is appealable before the Special Judge, who is not fettered by the mandate of the Executive Government. The aggrieved ryot has thus every chance of obtaining impartial justice. But, by the provisions of the proposed legislation, the Revenue Officer, in all cases of non-acceptance, will go through a mere formal process of classifica-tion of soil, rate-fixing, rate-publishing &c which is unfettered by judicial control, three annas in the rupee. Of course, there is an appeal against his order or decision, but who will dispose of it? The same Collector or Settlement Officer under whose direction he enhanced the rent! Surely, no Settlement Officer is such a fool, specially in view of the Government mandate, as to cancel his own instruction; so this appeal would be a mere farce, and would only add to the litigation cost of the unfortunate ryot.

Under the existing Act, the Revenue Officers have to work in constant dread of the Special Judge, and they are bound to curb their zeal to a considerable extent. But the proposed law will make them the sole masters of the situation. They will be at liberty to do anything they like with the rights of the ignorant ryots.

In Khas Mahals, the Collector, as representative of the Government, is the landlord; and the appeals of the ryots against the settlement of rents, made by his subordinates under his own instructions, will lie to the landlord himself. So, the "my dear Konstam" principle is going to be legalized! Sir Alexander Mackenzie says that the great object of his amendment is to curtail expenditure and economize time in making big settlements. But, we think, the administration of unadulterated justice is above all considerations. Would the Government allow a private landlord to enhance the rents of his ryots through his Amlas, and then decide for himself whether the enhancement had been properly made or not? It any Zemindar makes such a proposal to the Government, he will be taken or a mad man. But what is madness in a private Zemindar, is supreme wisdom in the ruler of a Province. Sir Alexander talks of curtailing time and expense. But will not the definitions of "prevailing rate and "excess area," proposed in the Bill, ensure great economy of time and reduction of expense in the working of the Settle-

We shall take up the last ground first. If there is not a sufficient number of European Commsisioners in the Corporation, the fault lies with themselves and the Government. We can would never have struggled for political privileges, and grown by the process. For, be it known, it is this struggle alone which be it known, it is this struggle alone which secures the growth and progress of a nation.

First of all, the British Government is him to England merely to experiment on it.

Secures the ground for this recantation? Says the effect that they will do their duties protein the matter home to him. This creed led the secretary to the Association in his perly. But the real fact is that they do not letter, dated the 14th Jappary. "My Comcare twopence for the Municipal affairs of the town. They live in European quarters important communicatious on the subject which require no improvement; or, if anyfrom several Muffasil members of the thing be wanting there, a word from the Chairman is enough to extort the sanction of any amount of money required to get it. The for the settlements of rents, and transfer of services of the Commissioners are thus rethe right of appeal on questions relating to quired mainly to look after the places inhabited by the lower classes of the Indian po-pulation. But will a European Commissioner agree to visit a dirty lane or a latrine in Burrabazar or Goabagan? Mr. Risley says that as Port Commissioners the Europeans do very well. That is because they understand and are directly interested in the business relating to the Port. astute Committee of the B. I. Association to But what is there in the Municipality to attract them there? That the authors of the Municipal Bill are fully aware of this utter apathy on the part of the Europeans, is evident from the fact that they have made a provision for feeing those European Commissioners who would attend the meetings of the General Committee. Fancy that the members of the General Committee are to be induced to attend Municipal meetings by the payment of money! It is thus clear that if the number of European Commissioners is so small in the Corporation, it is because they do not choose to be there.

But granting that the Indian rate-payers do not elect the Europeans, why does not the Government avail of its right of nomination to the fullest extent in favour of the latter? We don't want a single nominated Indian Commissioner; let the Government nominate the entire 25 from among the European community. There is thus no necessity for changing the law on the ground that the present system bars the way of the Europeans to the Corporation. But does Sir Alexander Mackenzie or Mr. Risley seriously believe that the affairs of the town will be better managed if the European element preponderates? As we said above, what is there in the Municipality to interest a European in its work? The Indian Commissioner is differently circumstanced. If he does not do his duties properly, his constituents will make his existence intolerable. And then, he is personally in-terested in seeing that his ward is kept wellcleaned, well-watered and well-lighted.

As regards the other ground, it is a mere assertion on the part of half-a-dozen European medical officers that the city has not mproved since the last two decades; but it s a fact that the Calcutta of to-day is heaven compared with what it was when its destinies had been placed in the hands of the executive. The best way of disposing of this matter is for a number of rate-payers to file an affidavit to the effect that the charge that Calcutta has not benefited by the managewith the foregone conclusion in view, ment of the present Corporation, is not namely, to secure an enhancement of three annas in the rupee. Of course, there believe that, if the control of the Municipality were placed in the hands of a strong executive, as proposed in the Bill, it would be impossible for a large number of people to reside in the city.

It is not the good fortune of every ruler to confer boons upon the people committed to his charge; but, surely, he can avoid doing them vital injury. Sir Alexander Mackenzie has not been able to do one good act during his rule of nearly two years. We do not blame him for it. But why should he fasten upon the people a measure which they regard in the light of a national

of the Hon'ble Mr. Chitnavis:—

Mr. Chitnavis made a long and rather rambling speech, in which he touched upon so many subjects outside the range of the Budget that Sir James Westland appealed to the Viceroy on a point of order. The hon'ble member, he said, had begun to discuss theories such as the payment of land revenue in kind,—theories which had been exploded years ago.

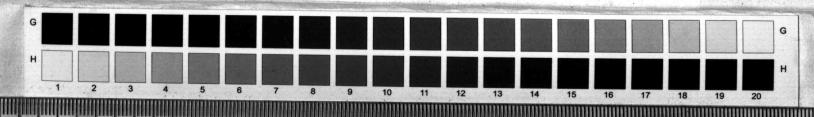

The Viceroy, while expressing sympathy in a way with Mr. Chitnavis, who had this one opportunity of expressing his views, remarked that some of the matter in his speech was scarcely within the scope of a discussion on the Budget Statement.

Budget Statement.

Mr. Chitnavis bowed to this decision; and omitting that portion of his speech which was pessimistic in tone, he concluded by a graceful reference to the Viceroy's retirement, and wished him the blessing of health to continue a distinguished career at home.

Yes, Sir James Westland called Mr. Chitnavis to order; but was he justified in doing it? It is true that the theory of the payment of land revenue in kind is now exploded; but there is no doubt of it that the Central Provinces and other Indian Provinces owe their famines and chronic state of poverty mainly to the unsympathetic and rigorous system of the payment of land evenue introduced by the present rulers. Mr. Chitnavis was thus quite within the cope of his subject when he referred to the ancient method of the payment of land revenue. But, if Mr. Chitnavis travelled out of his point, so did Sir Griffith Evans and Mr. Nicholson in a more outrageous

So, the table has at last been turned. When the plague was at its height last year, the Bombay Government fell foul charging it with parsimony, want of sanitary knowledge and so forth, though it stood manfully by its duties at great sacrifices at a time of great crisis. The Government then appointed a Committee to supersede the Corporation to do the working for a year, and the Corporation has now presented to the world a review of its labours which is summarised above.

The case is certainly one that deserves consideration at His Excellency's hands.

But how did Babus Bhubaneswar and Debendra manage the affairs of the estate with less than half of that amount? The

> > THE attempt of Mr. Justice Ranade to introduce a reform in the Bombay University examinations, has disturbed the mental equilibrium of the Times of India. Thus the Bombay paper seeks to demolish Mr. Justice Ranade by these words:—

> > He (Mr. Justice Ranade) stands as the anxious parent and says that he can no longer pear to see his son ruined in mind and health by not being permitted to pass his University Examinations piecemeal.

The above remarks are evidently sarcastic in tone, and intended to raise a laugh at the expense of Mr. Justice Ranade. But we utter a simple truth when we say that not only Mr. Justice Ranade but every Hindu parent all over the country feels in the way to which the Times has aken objection; for, his eyes have at last Brojendra Babu, was dismissed. THE English press, generally speaking, have condemned the action of Lord George Hamilton in refusing India assistance, and sometimes the condemnation has been expressed in very strong terms. Thus says the Bradford Observer :--

It is not Imperialism, it is mean and cruel tyranny not only to force our rule upon India, but to make the impoverished population coin the very means of our lordship out of their scanty pittance.

This is what the Weekly Times and Echo says :-

The policy of the Government is mean and dishonest, and it will lose us India one day. It goes out to the world this week that a Government which has taken the money of the English workmen by millions to put into the pockets of Irish and English landlords, has neither a crust nor a penny to spare for the starving millions of India, but insists that they shall pay for a war which is only to be defended on the ground that it was undertaken for Imperial purposes. Every anna taken from the native of India, is wrung from his absolute necessary expenditure on food. He has no luxuries upon which he can economise when taxation is heavy and food

THE readers of this paper are aware that a sensational news of attempt at wrecking a train was received from Chittagong. It was found that heavy stones were placed on the Assam-Behar Railway line near the Mirsarai Railway Station, evidently with the object of wrecking the train. We now understand that big Behar estates, it seems, are now to exist for the maintenance of a number of European Officers.

the culprits have not only been arrested, but have confessed their guilt and have been placed on their trial. The case for the prosecution is that the Station Master of Mirsarai, Babu Kanchan Kumar Mukerjee, had a grudge the culprits have not only been arrested, but against a certain tradesman, and with a view to put him into troubie, he got the stones placed on the railway line with the help of his menial staff and not to do any harm to the railway train.

HIGH COURT: CRIMINAL BENCH .-APRIL.-1.

(Before Justices Ameer Ali and Henderson.)

A CONVICTION SET ASIDE.

In the matter of Empress vs. Chatter Sing their Lordships delivered the following judgment which deals with the facts of the case: "The petitioner in this case was convicted by the Deputy Magistrate of Singbhum under section 417 I. P. C. and sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment along with another person Ramdhani. Both of them appealed to the Judicial Commissioner who upheld the conviction of both and reduced the sentence to one year's imprisonment in each case. On the 3rd March, 1898, the petitioner Chatter Sing obtained a rule from this Court calling upon the District Magistrate to show cause why the conviction and sentence in the case should not be set acide on the ground that the be set aside on the ground that the evidence did not warrant the conviction. We have examined the evidence against him, and we have heard the learned counsel for the Crown. It appears to us that the evidence adduced with the object of bringing home the guilty knowledge against the petitioner is not sufficient to warrant his conviction. It appears that these two rings were accepted the complainant, a man of some position and experience, as genuine rings made of gold. This man Chatter appears to have been in the shop of Ramdhani when Ramdhani gave these two rings to the complainant, and Chatter seems to have stated that they were made of gold. If does not appear from the complainant's statement that any opportunity was given to Chatter to test the ornaments to find out that they were or were not made of gold; nor does it appear upon the evidence what experience the accused had in the matter of the gold. So far as the evidence of complainant is concerned, that evidence not only meagre but insufficient to warrant a conviction in the case. The only other evidence is that of Golam who is said to have taken these ornaments to Chatter afterwards. He says that the accused rubbed these rings with a stone and told him that they were gold. But, again, there is nothing to snow that these articles were not plated with gold or were not so concealed as to furnish an indication of their being made of real gold. In the second place it does not show that this man is such an expert as to be able to say merely by the ordinary test applied to this country that they were gold. Guilty knowledge and dishonest intention must be brought home to the accused sufficiently by the evidence before he can be convicted. This has not been done in this case. It appears to us upon the evidence that the conviction cannot stand. We accordingly set aside the conviction and sentence, and direct that the petitioner be set at liberty."

AN ILLEGAL ORDER OF A SESSIONS JUDGE.

In the case of Empress vs. Taki Mahomed their Lordships delivered the following judg-

'In this case certain persons were prosecuted before the Deputy Magistrate of Naraingunge on various charges under sections 447 426 etc., and they were acquitted in February 1897, by the Deputy Magistrate under section 245 Criminal Procedure Code. On the 4th June, 1897, the Sessions Judge directed a further enquiry in Taki Mahomed's case. On the 7th March, 1898, the petitioner obtained a rule from this Court upon the District Magistrate to show cause why the order of the Sessions Judge should not be set aside as not warranted by law, and in the applica-tion to this Court the cause of delay in moving this Court is set out. No cause is shown against the rule. It appears to us that the order of the Sessions Judge is not warranted by law. If the Sessions Judge was of opinion that there was a miscarriage of justice in the order of acquittal by the Deputy Magistrate, his proper course was to refer the case to this Court. He had no jurisdiction to order a further enquiry on his own account. We, therefore, set aside the order of the Sessions Judge, dated 4th June, 1897, and direct that the order for further enquity be set aside." Babu Promothe Nath Sen appeared for the

IS A MOOKTEAR A PLEADER UNDER THE EVIDENCE ACT?
This question was discussed in the appeal preferred on behalf of Abbas Peada and Chiru Gain, who were convicted by the Sessions Judge of the 24-Pergannas accepting the unanimous verdict of the jury and sentenced under sections 346 and 365 of the Indian Penal Code (kidnapping and wrongful confinement in secret) to rigorous imprisonment for 4 years and 3 years respectively.

Babu Dasarathi Sanyal appeared on behalf of the appellants and Mr. Leith, Deputy Legal Remembrancer, for the Crown.

The facts of the case are shortly these:—There was a case of kidnapping a girl named Lakhi against the appellants in the Court of the Deputy Magistrate of Diamand Harbour. The 30th August was fixed for the hearing of the case. On the night of the 20th August, the girl Lakhi with her husband Nabakumar and 2 or 3 other persons were coming to Diamond Harbour from their village Kontola. On the way; they met the appellants and others of their party, who were alleged to have assaulted Nabakumar and forcibly taken away the girl and her husband. They were kept in the house of the appellant Abbas for the night. In the morning the husband was let go, but Lakhi was taken to a village, named Jhampaberia, 10 to 12 miles off, and there kept in the house of one Abbas for several days, and from that place she was taken to a village, named Kalikapota, where she was kept for some days and afterwards given up to her relations. The vakeel contended that the learned Judge has not directed the Jury at all on the question of law arising in the case. No explanation of the sections 365 and 346 was given. The intention to confine in secret ought to have been prominently brought to the attention of the Jury. The vakeel referred to the evidence of the father who deposed that he visited the girl 3 times only during her confinement. Various cases were cited in support of the proposition. Next objection was taken to the Committee. Government are not aware of any case appellants being put upon their trial, on severals charges as being opposed to the provision of the Criminal Procedure Code. Lastly, it was contended that the Judge should not have allowed to go in the evidence of the muktear Kedar Nath, who was formerly the muktear of the appellants in the previous case, and who deposed to certain facts which came to his knowledge in the course of his pro-fessional engagement. The vakeel submitted that under section 126 of the Evidence Act, the pleader or muktear could not disclose any communication so received, and it would be a dangerous precedent if they were allowed to do so. Similar objection was taken to the evidence of the muktear Hem Chandra and his clerk.

Mr. Leith, on behalf of the Crown, said that under the law the Judge has to record the "heads of the charge." The sections of the law were referred to and that was quite sufficient. If the verdict of a Jury was set aside on such ground the Jury trial would be a farce. As regards the second objection, the several offences were committed in one transaction. Section 239 would be applicable. Lastly, the privilege under section 126 of the Evidence Act was not applicable to muktears but pleaders. The legislature has intentionally omitted the word—"Muktears."

BabuD. Sanyal in reply submitted that it was the duty of the Judge to explain the lawa duty cast upon him by legistature. The heads of the charge must contain materials for the High Court to see if explanation was sufficient or correct. A similar contention was raised in a similar case by Mr. Leith, but he was overruled (vide the case Empress vs. Tomy 1. Cal. W. Notes). For the meaning of the word 'transaction' he cited I. L. R. 15 Bombay. Lastly, the word 'pleader' as defined by the Criminal Procedure Code includes a mukhtear. The muktears for the purposes of a criminal trial are clothed with the rights of a pleader. They, in fact, do the duties of a pleader

Their Lordships after hearing both sides reserved judgment.

BOMBAY LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL. SPEECH BY IH. E. THE GOVERNOR.

H. E. the President, in opening the proceedings said: My attention has been called to a letter signed by Mr Roughton in a newspaper of the 25th. In regard to the complaint he makes 1 can assure him and others that there are no grounds whatever for them. 1 never said Europeans were not to be employed by Government, and 1 am sure no less are the public appreciative and deeply grateful for the immense and unceasing efforts that have been made by so many private gentlemen, and I am by so many private gentlemen, and I am well aware that the confidence their action has given to the public has been of the greatest service. Conspicuous have been the efforts of Mr. Roughton and Mr. R. Macdonald and many others too numerous to mention, I am fully confident that those efforts will in no way be relaxed, and the time for recreation, which has been so unsparingly given, will continue to be given in the same ungrudging will continue to be given in the same ungrudging way, and kindly and sympathetically used to guide matters as they are now being aranged.

INTERPELLATIONS.

The following questions were then answered by Honorable Members:—
The Hon. Mr. Bhalchandra asked: Will the Government be pleased to consider the advisability of preventing the sale of intoxicating liquors to persons under fifteen years of age, whether accompanied by their parents and guardians or not?

In reply Mr. Nugent said: Great practical difficulties would be involved in enforcing a prohibition of the kind suggested by the Honourable Member. Shopkeepers have seldom, if ever, the means of ascertaining the exact age of purchasers, and most of the consumers of liquor in this country are probably ignorant of their own age. It would be unjustifiable to attach a penalty to acts regarding which there is no certainty whether they do or do not transgress the law or conditions of their license. Government will gladly consider any suggestion by the adoption of which the consumption of intoxicating liquors by young persons would be legitimately liquors by young persons would be legitimately discouraged, but for the attainment of this result public opinion must mainly be depended on.

The Hon. Mr. Parekh asked: Are Government aware that in some districts agriculturists find at present much difficulty in the disposal of their agricultural produce?

The Honourable Mr. J. Nugent said:—Government have received no reports to the effect of the statement of the Honourable Member, but are aware that restriction imposed under the Epidemic Diseases. Act on free communication with various towns must to some extent intefere with the free movement and disposal of produce.

The Member also asked: Will Government be so pleased as to extend the time for the payment of the instalments of the Government land revenue which have become due? which have become due?

In reply Mr. Nugent said. In any cases in which agriculturists experience difficulty in disposing of their produce, Collectors have, subject to the agriculturists experience dimently in disposing of their produce, Collectors have, subject to the sanction of the Commissioner, power to fix such dates for the payment of the instalments as they may deem expedient, and they will exercise the power if sufficient reason exists. Special orders from Covernment are not needed

The Hon. Mr. Parekh asked:—(a) Are Government aware that, notwithstanding the directions in paragraph 49 of the instructions issued by them for he guidance of district and other officers in matters of plague administration, travellers coming from uninfected areas with certificates from local authorities that they were during the ten preceding consecutive days continuously within uninfected areas, and who bear no suspicious symptoms, are subjected to detention and disinfectin?

(b) Government have heard no complaints of loss of property, and have no reason to believe that the arrangements made by the local officers have failed to project property.

to protect property.

Mr. Daji Abaji Khare asked: Is it a fact that the Mamlatdar of Belgaum Taluka has issued orders to the village officers to treat any death in the village as a Plague death and to compulsorily remove and segregate out of the village, inmates of the house in which any death might occur for ten days?

which any death might occur for ten days?

His Excellency the President said: The complanit is not quite accurate. The Collector of Belgaum, planit is not quite accurate. The Collector of Belgaum, on 26th January last, issued an order that in villages within fifteen miles of Belgaum town, where the mortality was unusually high, deaths should be treated as plague deaths. The Assistant Collector reported that the order was leading to hardships in one village, and the Collector modified the circular so as to include only plague deaths or deaths for which no cause could be assigned, and, therefore, suspected to be plague. The change was made a little more than a fortnight after the order omplained of was issued. omplained of was issued.

INTIMATION has been received that the Russian Government have prohibited their Mahomedan subjects from visiting the hedjaz during the present pilgrimage season.

In reply to a letter form the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, the Bombay Government say that inoculation is being given a fair trial, so much so, that the number of inoculation stations is far in excess of the demands for operations. They see no objection to the Plague Committee exempting from compulsory removal or detention persons who have been successfully inequalited. persons who have been successfully inoculated within the preceding four months, providing their effects and clothing be properly disinfected.

FORTY-EIGHT Municipalities in Madras have adopted special precautions against plague in-fection, and ten other municipalities hitherto inactive have been called upon by the Government to follow suit.

In commercial circles now-a days at Delhi, says the Tribuue, a vague sort of uneasiness prevails. Other Sahukars are now on the alert and do not give much credit. Business is carried on by cash payments which is difficult to continue long.

On Wednesday Mr. Webb committed three Mahomedans to the Sessions on a charge of setting fire to three plague ambulances, the plague ward office and the gallows screen near Oomercarry jail on the 9th instant. This was the last riot case before a Magistrate of the 147 persons arrested for rioting, consisting of 273 Mahomedans and 74 Hindus. Eleven Mahomedans and three Hindus were committed to the Session, 144 Mahomedans and 61 Hindus were convicted and sentenced to terms of imprisonment ranging from one month terms of imprisonment ranging from one month to four years, and 18 Mahomedans and 10 Hindus were discharged.

NO BUILDING BIG ENOUGH.

PROBABLY the two women whose names we are PROBABLY the two women whose names we are about to mention (by their good will and consent) never saw or even heard of each other. A broad bit of sea-water rolls between the places where they severelly live. Still the world is getting smaller every day, and it is quite possible they may meet; if they do, they will have a common subject for a talk. Without waiting for that, however, we will let the reader into the secret (so far as it is a secret) right on the spot.

The first lady to be named resides at Bishop's Nor on, neer Kirton, Lindsey, Lincolnshire, and in a letter dated the 16th of the blustering month of March, 1893, she says, "I trembled from head to constipated, intervals of ten days sometimes elapsing between the actions of the bowels. No laxatives or enemas availed to relieve this condition, and I became more feeble and prostrated day by day. My illnese began in August, 1892, and after four months' suffering I was completely cured in December by your remedy. Indeed it was not necessary for me to take quite one bottle. If any one who reads this your remedy. Indeed it was not necessary for me to take quite one bottle. If any one who reads this little statement of mine wishes to know more about my case, I will gladly answer inquiries. (Signed) Mrs. M. G. Walsham."

The second lady, writes from her home No. 12, Horgan's Buildings, College Road, Cork, dating her letter the 27th of the sunny month of June, 1893. She says, "Everything was a trouble and a burden. For nights together I got no sleep. I couldn't bear the noise of the children. I had no desire for company; I wasted to be alone in my misery. I often thought I was going to die. I was in this way for nearly twelve months."

Now this was bad; very, very bad. When a woman cannot bear the noise of her own children—which of all noises is least observed by a mother's ear—why her nerves are, as we might say, all gone to pieces. And, inasmuch as the nerves are only a part of the body, it follows that the whole system is badly out of order. And so it was. "The complaint," she says, "came on in October, 1890." It was marked by failure of the appetite, pain and weight in the chest after eating, a sinking feeling at the pit of the stomach, biliousness, flatulency, and other signs with which the readers of these articles are so sadly familiar.

Of the progress of the malady and how low it reduced her she has already spoken. The end of other signs with which the readers of these articles are so sadly familiar.

Of the progress of the malady and how low it reduced her she has already spoken. The end of it all—a happy end, thank Mercy—was like this. "In September, 1891," she adds, "my husband persuaded me to try a medicine he had heard and read so much about. I did so and soon found relief—a relief that none of the other medicines I had used were able to give me. My lost appetite came back, and my food digested easily and strengthened me. You hardly need be told that I continued taking the medicine, and soon I was well as ever I was in my life and have ailed nothing since. Yours truly, (Signed) Mrs. Lucy Carrol."

Woman, like men, never agree on all the topics which come up in conversation. It would be a dull world if they did. But these two will agree that they were afflicted with the same complaint—indigestion and dyspepsia: and that Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup, which restored them both to health, is one of the very best friends in time of trouble that their sex ever had.

And what is more, if all the women in this kingdom who think the same were collected in one meeting, no building could be found big enough to accommodate them.

HOLI IN ENGLAND.

LONDON seems to be threatened with an Indian social invasion. Scarcely had the interest excited by the beautiful performance of "Sakuntala" subsided, when Kumar Udaya Vira Singha Raghubansi and Munshi Kashi Prasad invited Society to a celebration of Holi.

Many distinguished people were present, including old Anglo-Indians, members of the bar and clergy, the arts and professions, with here and there an Indian student in the costume he had brought to be presented at court. Kumar Raghubansi received the guests with his friend Munshi Kashi Prasad, both attired in splendour. The entertainment was given at the new "Tea and Tiffin Bungalow," 170 Bond Street, which is just now much in fashionable

A long line of carriages deposited their freight of loveliness and wealth, each face beaming with the anticipation of a novelty; -guests were sprinkled with perfume and powered with silver 'confetti' and even the staid English conventionality was broken through in the general spirit of enjoyment.

Many beautiful dresses were worn by the English ladies, notably that of Mrs. French Sheldon, the distinguished author and explorer, who was gowned in white satin brocade, bordered with masses of natural violets and many wore real masses of natural violets, and many wore real diamond ornaments.

After an hour passed in conversation and introduction, Kumar Raghubhansi gave in the graceful style and well-chosen words that always mark his addresses, a short account of the origin and observance of Holi and a welcome to the guests which was followed by the songs of the Holi festival.

Other songs were given in Hindi, Gujrati and Hindustani, by T. J. Desai, Diwan Mathra Dass and Syed Zeauddin Ahmed

WHATEVER other effects the Cheragan Fair at the Shalimar Gardens may have, says the Tribune of Lahore, it has had the undoubtedly good effect of giving the Hindus and Mahomedans an opportunity of demonstrat-ing the restored friendliness between them. During the last few years the Hindu-Mahomedan question was raised in connection with the fair, and the attendance of Hindu holiday-seekers and spectators was small. This year matters took another turn. The city was almost entirely denuded of its inhabitants, both Hiudus and Mahome dans. Hindu vendors of sweets opened stalls at the fair and were largely patronised by Maho-medans. Chhabils were erected by both Hindus and Mahomedans, and they were invited without distinction everywhere. Every man, however ingorant, was repeatedly saying that the Hindus and Mahomedans were now united and all past differences were forgotten Some interesting reports were also flying about. It was given out that the Hindus and Mahomedans had jointly announced, by bear of drum, that the greatest cordiality was to prevail at the fair and that the people were more than willing to obey this direction.

Everywhere Hindus and Mahomedans were equally anxious to display the good feelings they bore to one another, and to assure themselves that these feelings were reciprocated. From Delhi, Rai Bareilly and other important centres the reports are of the same nature

It would appear that a pumping engine, erected immediately outside the figtting shops, was being tested to pump gas into the gas reservoirs of passenger vehicles for lighting them, when the engine, which had probably got an unduly high pressure on, suddenly exploded, its heavy cast-iron framework being shattered, and the heavy fragments propelled with considerable force in all directions. One of these weighing fellall directions. One of these, weighing fully fifty pounds, struck a chargeman named Gordon, who was working the gas engine, and hurled him bodily into an adjoining engine and hurled him bodily into an adjoining engine room, a distance of some thirty feet from where he stood, while another heavy fragment of metal struck a native fitter named Gool Mahomed, killing him on the spot. FLEET STREET, LONDON, MAR. 10.

A FULL-DRESS DEBATE.

THERE was a full-dress debate in the Lords last Monday on the Indian Frontier business. The debate was of singular interest and characteristic ability. Long before the commence-ment of the sitting, the corridor was lined with strangers and the rapid arrivals of Peeresses gave a further indication of the importance and interest attaching to the event. When Lord Roberts rose from the corner of the front crossbench at half past four, the occupants of the Peeresses gallery included the Duchess of Devonshire, the Duchess of Portland, the Countess of Somerset, Countess Spencer, the Dowager-Countess of Dudley, the Marchioness of Lansdowne and the Marchioness of Ripon. Hardly a vacant seat was visible in the two side-galleries set apart for members of the other House. Lord Salisbury's indisposition prevented his attendance; and it had been expected that the Duke of Devonshire, who early took his place on the Front Ministerial Bench, would have followed Lord Roberts. instead of the Under-Secretary for India.
The Earl of Kimberley and the Marquis of Ripon figured among the occupants of the Front Opposition Bench who had arrived be-

The speech may be summed up in a sentence. It was a defence -ardent and emphatic, not to say, a little impatient-of what is known as the Forward school in Indian policy. In more than one sentence, Lord Roberts laid it down as absolutely necessary that Great Britain should extend her empire over all the peoples and all the regions that stand between her Indian Empire and the frontier of Afghanistan.

The next morning, the "Paily News" came out with a long critique or the speech of Lord Roberts, and this is what it said:

We regret that Lord Roberts did not take the opportunity of windrawing the unfounded imputa-tion of complicity in the Afridi rising which he had made against the Ameer of Afghanistan. We regret also that as Lord Roberts did not feel himself precluded by his official position from laying down reme views of Indian policy in the Legislature, ne was not answered by the Commander in Chief, who could easily have demolished his military arguments. We are, however, bound to admit that the views of the Government, as expressed on behalf of the India Office by Lord Onslow, are far more prudent and sensible than the views of Lord Roberts. And when Lord Roberts deprecates the subject being made a party one, we can only declare our satisfaction that his scheme of advance at all costs, with no excuse, is repudiated by both the great parties in the State. Lord Roberts's history is fragmentary and erroneous. When he talks about the 'non-interference' of forty years ago, he forgets that Lord Lawrence was Viceroy thirty years ago, and when he describes the conduct of that great man as "selfish," he forgets himself. We have never been able to understand what is meant by calling Lord Lawrence's policy obsolete. It may have been right or wrong, though we think that subsequent events have conclusively shown it to be right. But right or wrong, it rested upon the relative position of mountains and valleys, which has not changed since 1867, or in recorded precates the subject being made a party one, which has not changed since 1867, or in recorded time. The advance of Russia, a out which Lo.d Roberts said a good deal more than was wise, has nothing to do with it. Lord Lawrence had that in his mind, and his deliberate opinion was that next to the mountains themselves, the best harrier against invasion was the friendly was that next to the mountains themselves, the best barrier against invasion was the friendly independence of the border tribes. Nor did Lord Roberts even mention the Pamir Treaty with Russia, concluded only four years ago, which removed all ground for the annexation of Chitral. He speaks of the "cruel misery", inflicted upon innocent people by burning their houses and detroying their crops. The language is not too strong, though it comes oddly from him. But that is just what Sir William Lockhart has been doing in the Tirah Valley, and that would in the Tirah Valley, and that would never have been necessary if the wise decision of the late Government had been maintained, "The only years, and his nonmartion as Viceroy wo British officer," says Lord Roberts, "who ever ventured to enter Afridiland before Sir William Lockhart's force went there, was punished by being removed from his appointment." We regreat that any punishment should have been required. But its infliction has been abundantly justified.

Lord Roberts, like his friend and pupil, Sir

George White, appears to be incapable of learning from experience. Confronted with the melancholy failure of the forward policy, he replies that it failed because it was not pushed far enough. He would go, as Sir Lepel Griffin once put it, from the Indus to Candahar, from Candahar to the Hindu Koosh, and from the Hindu Koosh to bankruptcy. He quotes the Duke of Wellington as having said that "we must be able to see the other side of the that "we must be able to see the other side of the hill." If the Duke did say so, his meaning is obscure. What he was a commonly credited with having said, is that strategy must be largely a process of guessing what lay on the other side of the hill. But strategy altered since the days of Wellington. When Lord Roberts says that the forward policy is one of "peaceful conquest" he severely taxes the receptive powers of ordinary minds. Peaceful conquest is, we presume, the introductory step to Mr. Curzon's "pacific control" and is form of "no campulsion, but you must." A display of overwhelming force may ensure submission. But it involves neither contentment nor acquiescence, and produces no lasting result. Lord Roberts repeated the old allegation that the road to Chitral was made with the consent of the people. The statement has been refuted as often as it has been made. So far from consenting, the Swatis attacked the British forts, and had to be put down with a strong hand. Lord Roberts' professions of impartiality cannot be regarded as serious. His whole speech was vehemently controversial; and while he deserves credit for his courage in adhering to a discredited system, his assumption of a judicial attitude is absurd. To sneer at the opponents of annexation as "comparatively ignorant of the subject," is simple impertinence. Is Sir Donald Stewart ignorant of the subject? Or, Sir James Lyall. Or Sir Lepel Griffin? Or Sir Dennis Fitzpatrick? If Lord Roberts wishes to be treated with the respect he undoubtedly deserves, he should show a little more respect for others, not less distinguished than himself. His own opinions, as Lord Northbrook showed, have undergone a remarkable change; and though there is no disgrace in that, the fact might make him a little more modest in the exposition of his present theories. The financial point of view he pronounces himself unable to take. Yet, it is vital; for, we have no moral right to carryout costly experiments which impoverish the resources without alleviating the condition hill," If the Duke did say so, his meaning is proposals of the slightest value, and he declared in the terms of Lord George Hamilton's des-patch, that the policy of the Government was to avoid any further control of the tribes.

INDIAN POST OFFICE BILL. The "New Age" has a very smart article headed "What are we coming to?" on the New Postal Bill of India. It says :-

The hitherto unrestricted circulation of British newspapers throughout the British Empire will receive a rude check by the passing of the new Postal Bill of India. The Bill is, of course, another of the reactionary measures which Lord Elgin and his Council are adopting in order to stamp out sedition in India. One section (23) of the Bill provides that "any officer in charge of a postal office, or empowered by the Postmaster-General in this behalf, may open or unfasten any newspaper or other article in course of transmission by post. other article in course of transmission by post, which he suspects to have been sent in contravention of any of the provisions of the Act, and either detain or destroy such article at pleasure." The Act referred to in this section is that prohibiting the trans mission by post of any obscene, indecent, or grossly offensive matter to which seditious and defamatory writing has recently been added. Another section (26) empowers the Governor-General o any such authority, to intercept and dispose of any postal article or class, or description of articles in course of transmission by post. This is a most impudent attempt to tamper with the privacy which the British postal system has always enjoyed and that, too, solely because the present Govern-ment of India has shown itself utterly unsuited and unfit for its onerous duties. It has now sunk so low as to wish open private letters in order to safeguard itself from the evil results of its misrule. Since seditious utterings and seditious wrking in India are now punishable by law, there can be but one object for this new Postal B ll, and that is to prevent the circulation among Indians of British newspapers and pamphlets which may have in the eyes of the Indian Government a tendency o foster what it chooses to think sedition. Radical o foster what it chooses to think sedition. Radical, Socialist, and other papers giving expression to advanced thought will therefore have to run the gauntlet of the censorship of the Indian Government. Papers containing criticism adverse to its rule are liable to be detained or confiscated. We also see no reason to suppose that our private letters will escape official prying. The word "article" in the code has a susp ciously unlimited meaning is the nost-officer considered limited meaning. Is the post-officer considered competent to judge what is seditious and what is not? The whole matter requires urgent investigation, and we feel sure that the British press, which has been, and continues to be, jealous or which has been, and continues to be, jealous of any appearance of any attempt to curtail its liberties, will demand an explanation from the Secretary for India. We must not be content with a repetition of the quibbling of Lord G, Hamilton. It is all very well to assure us that these new laws in India are to be worked "with leniency", but we would rather not have laws which admit of contraction or expansion. The fact of the matter is the Indian Government is in a blue funk. An Englishman writing from dissatisfaction with the peaceful conditions and content under Lord Ripon's administration to learn what methods suit India best.

MISCELLANEOUS. Private cables, it is said, have reached the city, stating that the Indian Government had forwarded a recommendation to the Home authorites, advising the adoption of the Lindsay plan for the establishment of a fixed exchange between England and India. Leading men in the city are unanimous in condemning Mr. Lindsay's proposal as utterly impracticable and dangerous. I hear that Lord Cromer had refused the offer of the Viceroyalty of India, being anxious to remain in Egypt till Khartoum is re-conquered, and then to return to England. It is probable that Lord Bal-four of Burleigh will get the next offer of the post. His reputation as a sensible, pleasant, and high years, and his nomination as Viceroy would Commund general approval.

The result of the London County Council election has been a victory of the Progressives over the Moderates by a majority of 22. The "Morning Post" (a Tory paper) with attempted cheerfulness acknowledges that it is a Government defeat, and no good can result from blinking a plain fact.

A good story is being told of one of the can lidates for the London County Council. The constituency which he sought to represent, contained a good many electors of sporting proclivities; and in addressing them, he dilated on his great interest in sport. A voice— "what have you backed for the Waterloo cup?"

The candidate:—"Although, I love sport I never myself bet on horse races." Of course, here was a loud laughter; for you know the Waterloo cup is a dog race. But the the Lecturer did not know this. He looked non-plussed, and grinned.

This puts us in mind of the late Col. North—"the Nitrate King." who thus finished his election speech at Leeds: "Gentlemen, before I conclude, I would strongly advise you to back my mare Philomel for the Steward's cup. Put your shirts and boots on her. She is sure to win. Take my tip, and back her and you will find yourselves

Strange to say, thousands did back Philo mel but did not find themselves "in clover" for, the mare lost,

"THE HINDU SYSTEM OF RELI-GIOUS SCIENCE AND ART.

BABU N. K. Bose, District Magistrate of Dinappore, thus writes to the author of the above book:

Thave read your book, "The Hingu System of Religious Science and Art" and have made an analysis of its contents which, I trust, may assist your readers in grasping the grane truths of religion treated in your book. The altimate conclusion that western science has arrived at, regarding the Deity, is stated by Herbert Spencer as follows:-'One truth must grow ever clearer—the truth that there is an Inscrutable Existence everywhere manifested, of which he can neither conceive the beginning or end. Amid the mysteries which become the more mysterious the more they are thought about, there will remain the one absolute certainty, that he is ever in presence of an Infinite and External Energy from which solved his great enigma.

The Hindus think that as there are laws governing the material or sensual world, there are also laws which govern the spiri-tual or super-sensual world. The Hindu Darsans and Shastras treat of three things :-(1) Cosmology, or the doctrine of the universe.

(2) Psychology, or the doctrine of the soul. (3) Theology, or the doctrine of God. In Europe, there has always been a conand religion) and, to a smaller extent, between Cosmology and Psychology (Physical science and metaphysics). In the Hindu Shastras, there is no such conflict; the same theories explain Cosmology, Psychology and Theology. I need here allude to the theory of Purush and Prakriti, and that of the three Gunas, which the author has so lucidly explained in his "Treatise on the Hindu System of Moral Science." According to the Hindus, just as the material world is perceived by six senses, including the Manas, there is a seventh sense (called buddhi) by which spiritual facts may be perceived and systematized into law. The existence of buddhi or spiritual sense s not an invention of the Hindu Rishis, but is a belief common to all religions of the world. Even the great philosopher Descartes (if we are to believe the author of the 'Chariot of the Flesh"), admitted the existence of a higher sense. A summary of Descartes' chief conclusions is thus given in the book, quoted above.

"The lower orders of life have a varying number of powers of perception, which are termed senses.

"The higher orders of life have five. These senses diminish in power as they increase in number, being relieved one by the other.

"No deterioration in sense-power is known o have taken place without causing deterioration to the possessor, unless at the same time accompanied by the development of a new perceptive faculty.

"Man alone is credited with being an exception to this rule. He is inferior in keenness of sense to the animal below him, yet superior in power. It is also noticeable that the savage is in like manner superior to the civilized man. It is, therefore, probable that man is the possessor of a sixth sense, as yet imperfectly developed and unequally distributed.

It is by the development of this spiritual sense, according to the Hindu system, that spiritual truths are discerned. There are many Shastras (e. g., the Tantras) which teach us how this spiritual sense can be developed; how by developing this spiritual sense, one can, without the aid of material science, control the force of nature. Some Beings are born with such perfectly-developed spiritual sense that they discern spiritual truths without any seeming effort. Perfect subjugation of the body is essential to the development of the spiritual sense. For the successful use of this faculty, one should be able to keep his body under perfect control, should be perfectly unselfish, pure and free from pride.

The teachings of all systems of Hindu religion agree in this that the ultimate state of the soul to be aimed at, is union with Divine Life, union which gives eternal Peace. But Divine Life may be looked at from two points of view, - one as Supreme Intelligence and the other as Supreme Love : as former, he is Impersonal; as latter he is Personal. For the sake of scientific method, such a distinction is made, although, in fact, there is no such distinction. The system of spiritual science which looks upon Divine Life as Impersonal is called Adwaitabad or the monistic system,—and the system of spiritual science which considers Divine Life as Personal is called Dwaitabad or the dualistic system. The former may be called Gnana Yoga and the latter Bhakti or Karma Yoga. True religion knows no distinction between these two Yogas; and (to quote from Yoga Vashisata Ramayana) as the two wings of a bird ensure its motion, so do Gnana and Karma lead to the attainment of beatitude.

As, thus, there is a two-fold spiritual science (Tattwa-gnan), there is also a two-fold spiritual art of Paramartha Sadhan, i. e., the realization of spiritual truths. Isvara is both Law and Lord. In the gnan method of achieving union with Divine Life, pure reason in the chief guide, - more is thought of Divine Law pervading the universe and of duty to be performed. In the Bhakti method of achieving union, pure emotion is the chief guide,-more is thought of Divine Love. According to the gnan method, union with Divine Law is achieved by renunciation. Some seek renunciation by being recluses and living away from objects of all desires; others, by living in the midst of worldly affairs, but at the same time, subduing all outward-going energies and harmonizing all the constituents of man till they vibrate in perfect attunement with the Supreme Self. Some regard the body as the enemy of the spirit, and therefore mortify the flesh. There are others who regard the body rather, for the time being, its help-mate. Without the aid of matter, the spirit on earth is powerless; and, as a bird, deprived of its plumage, can no long-er leave the earth, so the spirit, when the body is injured or weakened, becomes prey to passing delusions and is unable to accomplish any work. The teaching of the Bhagavat Geeta is to lift the human soul from the lower levels of renunciation where objects are renounced, to the loftier heights where desires are dead,—where both body and mind of man are actively employed in discharging the duties that fall to his lot in life.

The Bhakti method thinks more of Love towards the Deity than the performance of one's own duty. The Bhaktas say that God can be attained by love. From the lowest life in the flower to the highestcreated spirit in the universe, there is one law of growth; life meets life, uniting and strength ening. As atoms unite and re-unite to form what we call elements, and then again unite and re-unite to form chemical compounds, ever thus do lives join and unite to form perfec ife,-even thus one spirit meets another kindred spirit, unites with it and gives birth to more perfect spirit. The lower animal-life unites with its female element and thereby rises to more perfect existence and so on, up to man. So two suitable spirits unite and form a higher being, or as Swedenborg says "the Herbert Spencer thinks that this great death." And this joining together does not mystery cannot be solved, although man is cease even then but angel unites with angel, elements together. Has the love between parent and son, brother and sister, husband and wife, anything in common with Divine Love? What is love as we understand it? When we love a person we fancy that we love not the body but the personalitythat there is something therein which attracts and draws forth those sensations, wholly apart from anything to do with mere animal passions or even with mere moral and mental characteristics. It is not the beauty In Europe, there has always been a con-flict between Cosmology and Theology (science character which draws out pure love. It is a subtle attraction which reaches us through the medium of our imperfectly-developed spiritual sense. Whatever comes to us through the ordinary channel, is merely passion or companionship, though, owing to our complex nature, these usually accompany spiritual love. The marriage tie is considered so sacred. because, being a wise law fitted to the present condition of our lower animal nature, it like wise shadows forth the nobler union of souls The attraction of the sexes rises from the crude and physical to the subtle and psychical, with growth of love. But as the Baisnavas teach us, the love between man and God transcends this love between husband and wife. It is the love of Radha for Sri Krishna. The test of true spiritual love is self-renunciation. When there is no tinge of > tialities of man's nature and the path by which he can attain to the Lotus-feet of God. Viewed thus from the eye of wisdom and holiness, there is one Law, Love, -one Path, Order, - and one State, Peace. This is the teachng of the Hindu Scriptures; and the author has proved this by numerous quotations from the Vedas, the Upanishads, the Geeta, the Darsan Shastras and the Puranas. This little book forms, as it were, a key to the understanding of the different schools of Hindu Philosophy and religious system; and every man who has a soul to save, should read it.

THE CHITTAGONG CYCLONE.

THE following passages are taken from the Resoution of the Bengal Government, dated Calcutta

28 th March:
On the night of the 24th of October, 1897, the Chittagong district was visited by a cyclone of extraordinary violence. The cyclone was accompanied by a series of storm-waves more disastrous than the cyclone itself. The main force of the disturbance was felt across the whole breadth of the district from about fourteen miles north of Chittagang town to a point about four miles south of Cox's Bazar, a distance of some seventy miles. In the southern portion of this tract lies, the delta of the Mahamuri river. The low-lying lands of this delta and of the islands which lie off it were completely swept by the storm-waves. In many villages found their houses levelled to the ground, their crops entirely destroyed, a great part of their cattle drowned, and themselves without any stores of food or clothing.

Loss of life and private property. The Commissioner has reported the total loss of life due to the cyclone to be about 14,000 persons. It is estimated that about 15,000 cattle were drowned. The rice crop, which had promised to be a 20-anna one, was in the tract submerged by the storm-way entirely destroyed, in a further belt of country i was reduced to a four-anna crop of damaged grain, the rest of the 'district yielded a 14-anna crop. This loss coming as it did on the top of two bad seasons, was peculiarly unfortunate. the affected tract houses and huts were unroofed and demolished. To afford some help in repairing this last loss, an immediate, seduction of one hal was made in the rates of the forest tols in the severe ffected tracts, fees on passes for cutting building materials in the khas mahal forest were entirely re mitted, and the Collector procured 10,000 bamboo from the hills for gratuitions distribution in the worst villages where building materils were not to be had. Health of the inhabitants of the affected area.

For some days the submerged tract was strewn with the corpses of men and cattle drowned in the storm-wave. Every effort was made to secure the water supply from pollution, but, as was to be anticipated, cholera broke out with great virulence in places. It was reported to the Commissioner during his recent visit to Kotubdia that in this island alone no less than 1,300 deaths from cholera had occur-red since the cyclone. No information is fur-nished as to the mortality which attended the epide-mic in the remaining portion of the affected area. The Civil Surgeon has been authorized to entertain hospital assistants and to purchase medicines fo distribution in the affected parts from the funds placed at the disposal of the District Magistrate by the Central Committee of the Famine Relief Fund. It is hoped that these measures will prove successful

It is hoped that these measures will prove successful in arresting the progress of the epidemic.

Relief operations. The fund at the disposal of the District Magistrate for carrying on relief operations amounted to Rs. 65,204. This was made up of (1) a grant of Rs. 50,000 made by the Famine Relief Committee, (2) a sum of Rs. 4,000 transferred from the Noakhali Relief Fund, (3) Rs. 2,209 being the balance of the Chittagong Relief Fund, and (4) Rs. 8,895 collected by public subscript ons. Up to the middle of January last the expendiure amounted to Rs. 30,899, a balance of Rs. 34,205 being left in the hands of the District agistrate. The Commissioner has satisfied himself that the relief administered has been sufficient to prevent any loss of life by starvation. Relief works prevent any loss of life by starvation. Relief works were opened, but were not found to answer, partly because the adult males had migrated to harracan in thousands to cut crops, and partly because the loans advanced by Government had placed the people in a position to repair their own private embankments. The number of persons requiri g relief at present is considerably diminished by the exodus to Arracan, and will be still further reduced when the labourers return from that district with their earnings. In these circumstan-

He would, however, give gratuitous relief for some time more to widows and orphans, and to the women and children whose bread-winners have gone to Arracan. He would also continue medical aid until the rains bring the usual diminution of cholera. This course has the Lieutenant-Governor's approval.

Loans. The Commissioner was at first authorised to distribute one lakh of rupees under the Agriculturists' Loans Act. Subsequent enquiries showed, however, that loans under the Land Improvement Advances Act for the repair of embankments were more urgently needed. The authority of Government was therefore obtained to distribute one lakh of rujees under the latter Act, the amount allotted for loans under the former being, at he same time reduced to Rs. 50,000. Loans amount ing to Rs. 85, 162 have already been distributed under the Land Improvement Advances Act. Applications for loans under the agriculturists' Loans Act are being r gistered, and the total amount applied for already exceeds a lakh of Rupees. These applications will be taken in band after those for the grant of loans for the repair of embankments have been disposed of.

THE Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab held a durbar in the camp at Kohat on Monday. The ceremony was largely attended by residents of the Kohat and Peshawur districts, and by the Kurram and Adam Khel jirgahs. All the civil and military officers of the station and a few from Peshawur and Kurram were present. After the usual presentation of the Durbaris had taken place, His Honour addressed those assembled, announting his intention of presenting khilluts for services in connection with the recent events on the frontier. To the people of Kurram he sent a message through their representatives, commending their conduct and announcing rewards, including a remission of revenue. His Honor finally told the Adam Khel of the appreciation by Government of the good spirit and friendly feeling which they had recently exhibited, as a sign of which he would present their leading men with lungis, and give them all a befitting rekhshatana. A translation of His Honour's address in Pushtoo was read out to the people. A large number of khilluts were then presented, after which the Durbar concluded.

NATIVES AND THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE,

bres salestope FULL TEXT OF MR. PAUL'S SPEECH. MR. H. W. PAUL, who was received with cheers, called attention to the system of examination in Engand for the Civil Service of India, and moved "That all open competitive examination, heretofore held in Eagland alons for appointments to the Civil Services of India shall henceforth be held simultaneously born in India and England, successminations in both countries being indentical in the interest and all who compete being indentical in their nature; and all who compete being finally classified in one list according to merit." He said:

Mr. Speaker, in rising to move the amendment which I have placed on the paper I must at onc disclaim the imputation of originality in the substance of my proposal or in the terms in which it is expressed. The proposal which I now make was brought before the House in 1868 by the late Mr. Fawcett, whose services to India are so well known and gratefully remembered. (Hear, hear.) The terms of my amendment were derived from the report of a Committee appointed in the year 1858 by the then Secretary of State for India, and over which Sir John Willoughby presided. The Committee reported in 1 o. In the course of he debute in 1858. Mr. Fawcett got what I may call a sympathetic response from Sir Stafford Northcote (afterwards Lord Iddesleigh), who was then Secretary of state for India. He was opposed with great vigour in a speech of immense eloquence and power, expressed in most picturesque verna ular, by the present Secretary for Scotland (Sir George Trevelyan). I feel that we stand to-night at great disadvantage in di-cussing a subject which has an important bearing on the interests and welfare of India by the fact that in the present Government the Secretary of State for India does not sit amongst us. Where Lord Kimberley is at this moment we do not know. At this hour of the night he is probably not even in "another place." (Laughter.) He is beyond our control. We cannot even curtail his salary. (Renewed laughter). Lam sure my right hon, friend the Under-Secretary who sits in this House will not think that I mean by these remarks to show any disrespect to him. (Hear, hear.) I only wish he was the Secretary of State for India himself. I have no doubt that the views of the India Office will be most ably represented by him. (Hear, hear.) Now, Sir, I may best express the state of things which exists at present and which my amendment is intended to modify when I state that according to a notice which has been given by the Civil Service Commissioners there will shortly be held in London an open commissioners that we will shortly be held in London an open commissioners. petitive examination for the Civil Service of India, for which all subjects of her Majesty now between the ages of twenty-one and twenty-three are at liberty to enter. As a matter of fact the only sub-jects of the Queen not resident in the United King-dom who desire to submit themselves for this examination are natives of India, and they are expected, in order to have a chance of succeeding in this examination, to come over to London and remain for such time as they may think necessary for the purpose of preparation, and if they are successful to remain still longer—for two years to undergo a period of probation. Now, it will be observed that my amendment only relates to the preliminary competitive examination for civil servants of India. If it were carried, if the Government were to act upon it as they might do without any change in the law any native of India who were successful in the preliminary examination would be converted to come over head to come over head to come over head. would be compelled to come over here and undergo the two years' probation and to improve themselves by association with our manners and customs as much as now. But such natives would not be ablied at an expense which I believe I put at a obliged, at an expense which I believe I put at a obliged, at an expense which I believe I put at a very moderate figure if I estimate at £1,000, to come over here and reside on the mere chance of being declared qualified by the examiners. I hope that the House will kindly bear in mind that I do not seek to exempt any native of India from the duty of coming to this country and qualifying himself by residence and study here, if he is successful in the preliminary connectitive, examinate is successful in the preliminary competitive examina-tion. (Hear, hear.) This is at the foundation of my whole case. To read an extract from a report of the Committee to which I have referred which was presented to Parliament on the 20th January, 1860, in the second paragraph they say "We are in the first place unanimously of opinion that it is not only just but expedient that the natives of India should be employed in the administration of India to as large an extent as possible consistently with the maintenance of the British supremacy." They consider whether any increased facilities could be given in this direction and then they make a quotation from an Act of Parliament which shows, I think, that before the Government of India was think, that before the Government of India was taken over by the Crown, even in the old days of the East India Company, the natives of India had a statutory right to an equal chance of employment in the administration of the country with British subjects of the Crown. They say that it is true that at present no positive disqualification exists, that by the 3rd and 4th William Iv chap. 85, it is enacted that no native nor natural born subject in India shall by reason of his place of birth or colour or religion be disabled from holding any office, place, or employment under the Government office, place, or employment under the Government. It is obvious, therefore, that when the competitive system was instituted it could not have been intended to exclude natives of India from the Civil Services of India. (Hear, hear.) The Government may say that they are not excluded, but in a later paragraph in these report the eminent Anglo-Indians who formed the Comm tree say that practically the natives are disqualified. The difficulties opposed to them are so great as a general rule that it is almost impossible that a native general rule that it is almost impossible that a native can successfully compete in a periodical examination held in England. Were this inequality removed the Government would no longer be exposed to the charge of keeping the word of promise to the ear and breaking it to the hope. (Hear, hear.) Now I come to the amendment. Two modes have been suggested by which the object might be attained. The first is to allow a certain portion of the appointments to be competed for in India by the natives. The other is to hold simultaneously two examinations, one in India and one in London, both as far as pracone in India and one in London, both as far as practicable identical in their nature; those who compete in the two examinations to be finally classified in one in the two examinations to be finally classified in one list by the examiners. The Committee to which I refer had no hesitation in giving the preference to the latter scheme. (Hear, hear.) I do not think that I need argue in this year 1893 that the natives of India have the same right as ourselves to take part in the administration. (Mr. Naoroji: More right.) The hon, member for Finsbury says "more right." Well, at any rate they have by aw an equal right. I need not quote to the House the words of the Queen's proclamation so well-known are they in which Hone at any rate they have by law an equal right. I need not quote to the House the words of the Queen's proclamation so well-known are they in which Her Majesty declares her will that her subjects of whatever class or creed shall be treely and impartially admitted to any post for the duties of which they may be qualified by education and ability. And that proclamation has the force of a statute, for the principle of it is admitted in the Act of 1858 by which the Government of India was transferred to the Crown. Therefore you have been assuming and arguing from the assumption that it has been the intention of successive governments to admit natives of India on the same terms as the inhabitants of the United Kingdom. (Hear, hear.) Well, sir, it may be said that there are great difficulties in the holding the same examination in two places at the same time. But when the Committee of 1860 was sitting, the Civil Service Commissioners, under whom these examinations are placed, were consulted on this point, and they informed the Committee that so far as they were concerned there would be in Council by inserting aft London the word: "Calcutta," "Madras," or "Bombay," and they were able to undertake the task. The University of London at this moment holds an ex-amination not only in many distant parts of the British dominious but in the city of Calcutta in 186; he, who knew as much about examina-tions and the practical business of conducting them as any man who has ever sat in this House, wid that there would be no difficulty in carrying out this plan, that the examination papers might be sent under seal to India, the examinations arranged in order of merit. I am aware that there might be some practical difficulty as to that part of the examination which is conducted viva voce-I do not, however, attach much importance to this method of examination though it does sometimes afford a convenient mode of testing the real knowledge of a man who in a written examination may be able to write fluently about something which he imperfectly understands. (Hear, hear, and laughter.) But I cannot think that a great question of policy, as I hope to be able to show that is can be determined by a technical difficulty of this kind. From my experience of examina-tions, which, I am sorry to say, has been great, I do not think that the examination viva voce plays a large part in determining the ultimate selection of candidates by the examiner. Hear, hear.) Well, sir, as I have said, I do not in the least want to interfere with the duty of the natives of India to obtain some experience of the nethod of government in this country before they undertake the task of governing in their own country. I have here the opinion of a man whose name is proverbial for calm and sagacious knowledge. I refer to the late Lord Derby, who, when in 1863, as Lord Stanley, he was Secretary of State for India, said in this House that he could not refrain from expressing his conviction, that in refusing to carry on examinations in India as well as England, whi h was easily practicable, the Government were in effect doing that which they declared in to be one of their objects to avoid, namely, confining the civil service to Englishmen. Lord Derby ivited the House to suppose that instead of holding those examinations in London they were to be held in Culcutta, and he asked how many Englishmen would be contact or send their sons out to be examined. Nevero out or send their sons out to be examined. Nevertheless, that was exactly the course praposed to be udopted towards the natives of India. I am not aware that our Secretaries of State, the distinguished tentlemen who in this country are responsible for the affairs of India, are always submitted to the preli-minary test of a visit to that country. Lord Kimber-ley, the present Secretary of State for India, has been n many places in a more or less official capacity, but I do not know that he has ever been in India. But it is not denied that we have had most competent Secretaries and Under-Secretaries, who have had no personal knowledge of the country for which they are responsible. At the same time, Mr. Speaker, I should be the last to underrate the advantages the candidates obtain by seeing something of our institutions. I know very well that they are required to make practical acquaintance with the inside of our courts of law. courts of law. They are required, I believe, to at-end that august tribunal, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, than which no court, I think 1 am correct in saying, has a wider and more ample jurisdiction. I have no doubt that the reports of heir judgments, which can be read in Ind'a as well as here, are invaluable and necessary parts of the training of every Indian administrator; but, Sir, when it comes to what strikes the eye, when it comes to a nere spectacle, to see these gentlemen in plain clothes sitting round a table, cannot be compared with an alderman in all his glory at the Guildhall, dealing with drunks and disorderlies. (Laughter.) I do not wish to deprive the natives of India of the privilege of visiting our institutions. They may go and see the magificence of the Indian Institution, standing in a place where it ought not (hear, hear) they may have the advantage of the operation which I believe is called give and take of none of these advantages would my amendment deprive them. I believe there is some misconception upon the subject, as by the scheme I propose in my amendment no native of India would be relieved from any part of the daty incumbent upon him in having to submit himself to residence and training in this country before being admitted to the humblest post in the service of the Crown in India. I ought 1886 an important Commission had sat upon the same subject in Calcutta and had arrived at a somewhat different result. The Commission reported in the year 1886 and among many other subjects upon which that Commission expressed an opinion was this subject of holding simultaneous examination, and they reported against taneous examination, and they reported, against the proposal. Their reasons are, as it seems to me, extremely simple. In number they are two; in character they are mutually destructive. The first reason they give is that the system of education in India is not sufficiently advance to afford the requisite training by a should have thought that that was an evil which provided its own remedy, because if the candidates were not will prepared they could not pass. The second reason which for my part I cannot reconcile with the first is that these regulations would give such a stimulus to the system of education give such a stimulus to the system of education in India that there would be a danger of creating the system called cranming. What is cramming? Cramming, I suppose, is filling the mind of a boy or young man with phrases and formulas which he is always ready to repeat but which he does not understand. What, sir, is the business of an examiner? To pluck a crammer! An exminer is not fit for his business, he is not worth his salt, if he cannot detect the difference between a man who scally know and difference between a man who really knows and a man who only pretends to know. (Hear, hear.) I know, sir, there has been of late years a hear.) I know, sir, there has been of late years a dead set against the system, among others by a very distinguished member of the Conservative party, Sir Stafford Northcote, and again by Sir harles Trevelyan. I know well the enemies of this system of competitive examination; but, sir, this system of competitive examination is applied at this moment to the natives of India. It is only barred by a terry which I successful. barred by a test which, I suppose, about five per cent. of them are able to surmount. Now, Mr. Speaker, I know there are two great arguments against my proposition, and I should be very sorry to say that either of them was dishonest. One of them is undoubtedly honest and that, if I may, I will to say that either of them was dishonest. One of them is undoubtedly honest and that, if i may, I will presently allude to. The other argument is that it is a positive etimulus to the natives of India that it is really encouraging them to enter our service and take part in the government of their own country, and that at present they are on the mere expeciation of obtaining employment in the service, compelled to submit to an ordeal that many are unable successfully to pass. I do not think that argument can be maintained in this House. The other argument the honest argument is that we don't want the natives of India in the Civil Service at all. If that were the poi tat issue I don't think that I possess the necessary qualifications for arguing it out, but as I said at the beginning of my speech, that is a position that cannot be honourably maintained. It is contrary to the law of the land; it is contrary to the Queen's Proclamation; it is contrary to the promise given to the natives of India; and it is contrary to the rule laid down by every Governor-General and Secretary of State. It may be said that there is no objection to a few natives being admitted, but that there is an objection to the Civil Service being flooded by natives. Well, sir, I don't think it shows very great reliance they would be defeated in that wholesale manner by Her Majesty's Indian subjects, but if that be an objection it ought to be met in a fair and straightforward manner. It ought to be met 26. The Corporation respectfully claim that this were able to undertake the task. The Uniy of London at this moment holds an extion not only in many distant parts of the h dominions but in the city of Calcutta

In the speech which Mr. Fawcett delivered 65 he, who knew as much about examinaand the practical business of conducting as any man who has ever sat in this House, that there would be no difficulty in carrying his plan, that the examination papers might at under seal to India, the examinations fixed for the same date and the candidates' that be an objection it ought to be met in a fair and straightforward manner. It ought to be met by saying that there are posts which cannot be filled by the native subjects of India, or that there are posts beyond which we cannot admit the to our service, but not to say that the service is just as open to them as it is to us, and then to impose upon them conditions to which we ourselves would never submit. (Hear, hear.)

It is also said that the character of the native Indians, who are most successful in passing the examinations, does not fit them for high administrative posts. Well, under the present system, be sent under seal to India, the examinations, does not in them for high administrative posts. Well, under the present system, a considerable numbe have attained to positions of responsibility and I challenge contradiction when successful candidates at both examinations being that there of 1887, that they have discharged the duties entrusted to them to the satisfaction of their superi-ors, and to the satisfaction of those with whom they have to deal. (Hear, hear.) I know that it is said in the prospectus drawn up for the guidance at candidates, that they must be of good moral character, and be able to perform journeys on horseback—(laughter)—which in plain English, I suppose, means that they must be able to ride and speak the truth—qualifications a great deal more ancient than our rule in India. I think, sir, if we wish to impress upon our Indian fellow subjects the value of straightforwardness we should set them the example (hear, hear) and that we should not adopt a system which is absolutely at variance with our own declared policy, and which prevents nine-tenths of those for whom we profess to open places of trust, honour, and emolument, taking advantage of the opportunities we have offered. At this present moment, among nearly a thousand members of the Covenanted Civil Service, there were under twenty natives elever - in Bengal, two in Madras, one in Bombay, and two or more elsewhere, for it was perhaps difficult to ascertain the exact figures. If this were the result of the system of competition with equal treatment for all, the natives of India would have no cause to complain but there is not one man who will maintain that that extraordinary disproportion has nothing to do with the fact that the examinations are held only in London to which the vast majority of, perhaps, eligible natives are unable to repair. There is a portion of the Civil Service in India there is a system of appointment which is not the subject of competition, which is not fenced round with any safeguard against abu-e, but left to the selection of the Governor-General and his advisers and what has been the result? he Commission of 1887 unanimously condemned it as unsuccessful, whereas they reported in a favourable manner of those natives who had been admitted under a system of open competition. Of course I am aware that there were objections. tions, and very strong objections to employing natives of one part of India in another part of India. I of one part of India in another part of India. I think it might very well be that if this system which I propose was adopted, and if this great bar to the employment of native Indians were thereby removed, some regulations restricting Bengalis to employment in Bengal and so on, might in requence, have to be adopted; but that is no ment against my wain proposition. Now, not wish to occupy the time of the House unnecessarily—("go on," and hear, hear)—I hope there are other hon. members who will desire to take part in this debate. including my hon, friend the memthis debate, including my hon, friend the member for Finsbury, who will give greater weight to the subject than I can pretend to. We shall have, I hope, the obvious advantage of listening to the views of the Under-Secretary for India, and I shall be most anxious to hear what line of objection in the base any objection he intends to see tion, if he has any objection, he intends to pursue whether the present system is the best method of securing the services of competent natives, or whether he will take a bolder line and say the fewer natives employed in the Indian Civil Service the better. The right hon, gentleman can make a brilliant speech, and will not, I am sure, be restrained by considerations of original morality. (Laughter.) There is no man who can tell us plainly and simply what line of policy the 'ndian Government intends to pursue. It may be asked what authority I have for saying that this is desired by the natives of India. Well, sir, Lord Salisbury once said that India was politically dark, and one must admit that there are hundreds of thousands of natives whose opinions it is im-possible to obtain; but there is an organisation possible to obtain; but there is an organisation in India which does in a great measure represent the better educated class of natives I allude to the Indian National Congress. That Congress has now sat seven years, and I believe I am correct in saying that at every one of their meetings a resolution has been passed in favour of the principle which is embodied in my amendment. One of the most distinguished Anglo-Indian subject of the Queen one of the ablest men who ever took the part in they overnment of India, remindso me that it part in theg overnment of India, remindso me that it is not necessary that Indian members of the Indian Civil Service should come to England at all. Whilst, however, there was no doubt that natives of India should become acquainted with our institutions by residence among the best classes of Englishmen, Scotchmen, and Irishmen, at the same time it was impossible to obtain training in the art of government from a better source than that great administrative system of India, of which we were so justly proud that system which, alike in the days of old and in the days of competition, has by the splendour of its services and still more by the spirit of justice which animates it from top to bottom adds to the name and fame and honour of Great

THE CORPORATION AND THE PLAGUE COMMITTEE.

Britain in every portion of the Empire and every nation of the world. (Cheers.) I beg to move the resolution which stands in my name (Cheers.)

THE following is the report of the Committee of the Corporation appointed on Thursday last to make a representation, to Government to transfer the duties of the Plague Committee to the Corporation. The report, which has been circulated to the members of the Corporation, will be submitted at their meeting this afternoon for adoption:

That the President respectfully submit to his the covernor in Council the following

Excellency the Governor in Council the following facts with a ylew to the executive duties of the Plague Committee being transferred to the Municipality, whose methods of dealing with the plague have been proved by experience to be as effective and much less costly, than the plan put in force by the Plague Committee, and also suggesting that in order to secure continuity in the organization and administration of special plague measures, a special officer of Government be associated with the Municipal Commissioner.

The Committee make this proposal on the following grounds: —

1. That the first official intimation of plague reached the Commissioner on September 23rd 1896.

2. That the Municipal Commissioner and Health Officer at once took active steps, and the Corporation met and voted one lakh of rupees and gave the executive a free hand.

gave the executive a free hand.

3. That from that date until it reached its maximum for the week ending February 9th, when the total weekly mortality reached 1,891, the executive of the Corporation spared neither money nor labour in fighting the plague, with the result that by March 9, three days after the Plague Committee were appointed, the mortality for the week had decreased to 1,311.

4. At the time when the plague was at its height in the month of February, 1897, there were more than 30,000 extra men employed by the Municipality for carrying out special measures which were required to deal with it.

5. The Plague Committee was appointed on and to co-operate in many of the measures taken.

8. A reference to the Municipal Commissioner and Health Officer's reports will show that, gauged by results, the municipal measures fighting with rising epidemic—were in no way less successful than the 'Plague Committee's operations against a declining one, and that the cost of the municipal measures were Rs. 4,37,000 for five months from September 1896 to March 1897, as against Rs. 8,51, one expended while the Plague Committee was in power for seven months, from March 1897 to September 1897.

9. The outbreak of plague came suddenly on the Municipality, and yet their operations met with such a measure of success that by the middle of February plague was practically mastered, and from that date there was a continuous decline in the mortality.

10. The Plague Committee, who from the 6th d y of March, 1897, have had unlimited means and power and the entire control of large bodies of men and was fully organized with past experience to guide them, was retained for the purposes of fighting any recrudescence, and yet were unable on its any recrudescence, and yet were unable on its re-appearance to do more than the Municipality did when it first appeared in the city. Indeed it would appear from recent facts and figures that their methods, to say the least, have not been more successful than those adopted by the Corporation.

Il But whereas the Corporation o tained good results by an expenditure of Rs. 4,37 000 from September 1896 to March 1897, the present Plague Committee and the Corporation have, from September 1897 to March 1898, spent Rs. 8,77,000, and at the present rate 13 or 14 lakhs will probably be expended before the evidemic declines once more, 2-2 lakhs being required for March alone.

12. There can be every little doubt that this enor-

12. There can be every little doubt that this enormous increase of expenditure with no appreciable difference in results is owing largley to the existence of a dual agency.

13. The Corporation have no v passed a scheme for the re-organization of their Health Dep rtment, which, when carried out, will place their executive models are according to the corporation of the same with any in a much stronger position to cope with any

by the operations of the Plague Committee, they are unable to give effect to the scheme.

15. The Corporation in asking that the Plague Committee should be now dispensed with, and the work handed over to their own officers, do not wish to undervalue the efforts of the Plague Committee; but they are of opinion that the municipal executive officers, being whole-time men and thorough ly conversant wi h the city, would do better at lest cost than the Plague Committee, more especially if assisted, as the Corporation propose they shall be assisted by a special officer appointed by Government. 16. That there has been, and undoubtedly still is, considerable friction between the two sets, of employes, viz., those of the Corporation and of the Plague Committee, and that in the best interests of the City it is desirable that this state of affairs should cease, especially as it leads to discontent and disorganization of the permanent municipal staff. But this friction will continue as long as there is divided. as long as there is divided responsibility which must mean no reponsibility at all.

17. That the heavy expenditure of the Plague

17. That the heavy expenditure of the riague Committee is largely due to there being a total absence of responsibility for providing the funds and also to the fact that till quite recently they had no sufficently experienced person at the head of their Store Department, who could organize an effective system of control.

A CIDITY and DYSPEPSIA are the two most common disorders of the day, and very few are so ortunate as to declare their immunity from these. It view of the fact that though apparently harmless in the embryonic stage. Acidity and Dyspepsia shatter and indermine the constitution in the end and lead to its total wreckage, it must be held that they are dangerous in their insidiousnes.

After years of incessant toil and experiment, I have discovered a med cine which, I can confidently say will cure the patient of acidity, and its worse stage of Dyspepsia in a short time, effectively and radically However chronic and long-standing the complaint however violent its attack, the Acidity Pill will give the proved a permanent relief as has been proved in the control of the proved msant and permanent relief as has been proved in hundreds of cases, Here are a few unsolicite

Babu Bhobo Tosh Bannerjee, De Puty Magistrate of Dacca, writes under date the 6th March, 1898:—Many thanks for your Acidity Pills. I was suffering from Dyspepsia and Colie pain for the last 18 years. I tried many kinds of medicines to no effect. Some of them gave re temporary relief only for a day or two, But since I have been taking your pills (3 weeks or more) I two not had any attack for a moment even during this time. The Pill is an excellent medicine for is nasty disease which is very painful. Please send me thre boxes of the Pills per V. P. P. at your reliest convenience and oblige.

AROMATIC RESIN.

This is a chemical preparation, after considerable labour. Its efficacy as a destroyer of all poison in the air is simply marvellous. When burnt, it emits a delightful fragrance. Try it where malaria rages furiously or cholera is decimating the people; and you will be quite safe from the delitirious air and escape the epidemic. This has been proved times without number, It also drives off mosquitoes, flies, bugs, spiders and even snakes, which cannot put up with its smoke.

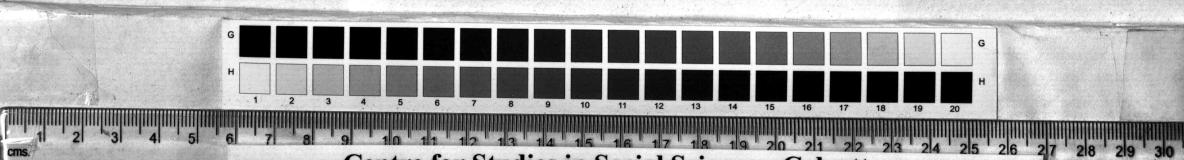

The following testimonial, from the Feudatory Chief of the Patna State, C. P. most unsolicited, is published below, among numerous others received:—

": ir —I was extremely glad to receive your arromatic rasin. It is of course good sort of medicinal rasin. As the quantity was small it has been exhausted.
