Lord Gauranga and His Bhaktas

Three centuries ago, Sree Sreenivasa Achariya, one o the greatest devotees of Lord Gauranga, had a portrait prepared of the Lord and his Bhaktas, which descended to his pious family as perhaps the most precious heirloom. Sree Sreenivasa's great-grandson was Radha Mohun Thakur, the guru or spiritual preceptor of Mkharaja Nanda Kumar. The Maharaja, him self a pious Baishnava, was so captivated with the portrait that he interceded with his guru and obtained it from him. The painting was removed to the Maharaja's palace; and it may still be seen at the Kunja Ghata Rajbati.

The Gauranga Samaj has had a photograph of this ancient painting, taken by a celebrated artist of the town; and copies may be had at the under-mentioned rates.

INDIAN in Parliament was the subject of address given on Merch 14 to the members of the Liberal Forwards Club by Sir William Wedderb ra, M. P. Mr. C. E. Schwann, M. P., presided Sir William Wedderburn said his bject was to show the extreme difficul y which attended any endeavour to bring before the House of Commons the Indian view of Indian subjects, official opinion being the prevailing

What they wanted was that popular feeling in India should have a hearing, but the natives had no representation in the British House of Commons. The Briish people honestly desired that justice should be done to India, but there was no machinery by which that justice could be obtained, or grievances redressed. Secretary for India was simply the mouthpiece and champion of the efficial hierarchy, against whom complaints were made, and taking his views and information from the India Office, he became the apologist for official opin ons. What they needed in Indian affirs was a What they needed in Indian affairs was a wholesome reality, instead of a discreditable sham, and it was the du y of the Bitish people to see that this was brought abou. The question was whether the British people had done their duty in this respect. They had an Indian Secretary, who had never been in India and laboured under many disadvantages, taking this contains from an office which was a kind his opinions from an office which was a kind of Dublin Castle, only more so. At that moment an attempt was being made to impair the usefulness of the Municipal Council of Calcutta, and although a motion had been made for an inquiry—i very reas nable request—it had been refused by Lord George Hamilton. The policy of the Government was one of secrecy and obscurantism, and the refusal of all independent inquiry, in which it was backed by most of the London Press, which took its views from Anglo-Indians. He still b lieved that the Brit sh people des red to do justi e to India, but if that desire was to be anything more than a pious opinion they must alter the existing system in the House of Common, which at present was the ideal how not to do it.

A discussion followed in which Mr. D. Naoroji, Mr. S. Smith, M. P. Mme. De'a force and others took par. Sir Charles Dilke remarked that the more he saw of Indian affairs the more he had come to dcubt whether Stuart Mill was wrong in his opposition to the aboliten of the Company. If members of the Heuse of Commons would put questions concerning India to their constituents he believed that the electorate would respond, and in this-he could see the only cure for the present condition of affa rs.

His Excellency the Viceroy left Lahore with His Honor the Lieutenant Governor and Staff on the evening of Sunday last, on a visit to Khanki and Lyallpur, and returns to Lahore this morning.

EARTH HUNGER OF THE EUROPEAN NATIONS.

THE conclusion of the Anglo-French arrangement which defines the respective spheres of the two nations in the Central and Eastern Soudan puts a finish to that partition of Africa among the Euro nations, the lines of which were laid down less than ten years ago at the Brussels Conference. It must be limited that the Powers have wasted must be limited that the Powers have wasted no time over their gigantic job. Fifteen years back here were practically but three nations who owned a footing in Africa; England in the South, France in the North, and Portugal with its ancient possessions on the East and West Coast vast in nominal extent but shadowy under the test of effective occupation. In 1884 came Bismark's hunt for colonies, and the process of leisurely and gradual extension was suddenly changed for a breathless race to peg out claims anywhere and everywhere. Jostled out of Damaraland and the Cameroons by the Germans, and threatened in Zanzibar, the English Foreign Office against all its traditions and wishes had to bestir itself to take part in the game. The formation of the Congo Free State took one huge slice out of Africa and it was not long before the expansion of G rman East Africa, which obliged that of British East Africa to keep step, had brought these possessions in o touch with those of the Belgian State, drawing a band of European dominion right across the Continent. The progress of the French from Sancgon and Dah

European dominion right across the Continent. The progress of the French from Senegal and Dahomey into the Western Soudan. The British expansion in South and Central Africa, the Italian advance into Abyssinia from the Red Sea Coast and South of Cape Gardafui brought enormous changes upon the Map of Africa in the years following the Brussels C nference. Five years later, by 1895, there is little left to divide. The only regions not in effective occupation are the revolted Egyptian Soudan and the territory west of this compraine in the restable. this comprising in the north the southern portion of the Sahara desert and to the south the Negro Sulta-nates of Wadai and Bagirmi. Italy has since then been dislodged, and by the one reactionary episode in this story of European acquisition her possessions have gone back into the grasp of a native power. But at any rate they are in hands whose title no one at present disires to question: and so the one divisible piece of Africa that reminded is that which has just been partitioned by this Agreement If it is quantity that she desires in her possessions France has nothing to complain of in the result. Her African dominions before this last deal were roughly computed to amount to 3 million square miles, a territory that is to say in extent just twice the size of British India. The kingdom of Wadai alone, which is but a part of what she now gains, is supposed to cover not less than 160,000 square miles, which is about the same area as the Provinces of Ben, al, Behar and Orissa together. She is now by far the largest landholder in Africa, Her territories coming down from Algeria to the Niger, north and south, extending from Senegal on the Atlantic to the longitude of Lake Tchad, and again from the mouth of the Congo north east-wards through Ubangi to the back of the Bahr-el-Ghazal province were vast enough before. But by the new arrangement her border takes an enormous curve north and east t ll it meets the western edge of the Libyan desert, and completely encloses Lake Tchad, on which, however, both Germans and English have a footing in the south-west corner. The greater part of the new acquisition may be worthless, but it has always been an aim with the French to establish themselves in Wadai and Bagirmi to the south and east of the lake which has hitherto been left in all partition treaties as a No Man's land. The Agreement of August 1893 which fixed the Say Barrua line as the border between the French Soudan and the Royal Niger Company's possessions, in halting at Barrua on the wes ern side of the lake by implication reserved the wes ern side of the lake by implication reserved the recognition of any rights to the eastward of it. Now in return for her acknowledgment of the British position in Darfur and Bahr-el-Ghezal France is able to turn the lake and by this means to join her possessions in the Congo and Ubangi on to those in the Soudan in a continuous be't of territory. The result is that all the West African Coast colonies from the mouth of the Congo northwards are completely shut in the rear and closed to any further expansion in the interior. Whether the facmuch matters to them, and particularly to England which holds the mouth and water-way of the Niger, may be doubtful, but probably the sight of the map will be a spectacle of grification to French sentiment, and if it soothes them and by soothing leads them to draw the relief of the sentiment. sentiment, and if it soothes them and by soothing leads them to drop the policy of petty provocations and the eternal Egyptian question. Lord Salisbury's compromise will have been a good one, even although the voices of Mr. Greenwood and he determined patriots should be raised up, as they are sure to be, in depunciation of the surrender.—Figure.

And so they have banded themselves together in a secret convenant, and have christened themselves "Marblehearts." The conditions of the league are that if any member falls away into the heresy that if any member falls away into the heresy of matrimony, he must forfeit a sum of money to the others. In this way each individual member of the Marblehearts is practically engaged in a scheme to get his brethern trapped in the hores that he may hold out longest and pocket the accumulated penalties. In the efforts to entangle his friends it is highly probable that each of the young price will get In the chors to entangle his friends it is highly probable that each of the young prigs will get caught himself. STORY OF A KISS.

COLONEL BUYS. ONE FOR £800. A WELL KNON American actress recently. offered to sell a kiss to the highest bidder at a charity bazat in New York. The bidding was bish, and the eagerness and zeal with which the youth of New York ran up the price was sufficient to make the husband of the lady

A track has been made across the new lava, which has more than once late y blocked the carriage road. At the central cone the eruption was in great activity. The spectator could only stand on the edge and gaze down into the enormous depth of the crater for a few seconds for every half-minute there was a loud roar for every hair-minute there was a loud roar for the abys, as if of incommerable internal explosions, followed by the rise, hundreds of feet into the air, of volums of suffocating smoke, in the tawny convoluted folds of which large masses of molten lava shot up like shells from a mortar The spectators watched the splendid curve of such a mass as it issued from the smoke of such a mass as it issued from the smoke with much anxiety as to the place where it might fall, and with a keen sense of the danger a broken arm. There is no ree gnised 1 ath across the field, and it is said that it was customary for a warning to be given by blowing a bugle and hoisting a flag when a shot was about to be fired.

THE DEBATE ON THE BUDGET.

As expected the Viceroy's speech was a characteristic one in every way. His Excellency's strong individuality peeped through almost every sentence he uttered. His tone was decisive, and his assertions positive. Not that we object to it at all. A dictator ought to speak like a dictator, only he must be amenable to reason. The Viceroy, of course, gave reasons for every conclusion he arrived at; though it is a quite different thing whether these reasons would be considered as convincing or not by others. For instance, we said, when the Budget Statement was presented and a surplus of nearly four crofes of Rupees was announced, that the prosperous condition of the finance was of the suprement indifference to the people so long as there was no remission of the taxation under which they were groaning. The. Viceroy thus sought to answer the

We have been criticised in these circumstances for not having proposed a remission of taxation. I quite anderstand, and I do not in any degree deprecate such criticism. It is the natural and legitimate desire of taxpayers all over the world to obtain relief for what they regard, or at least represent, as their burdens, and to feel the passion for relief swelling in the r bosoms in proportion to the apparent existence of the means for satisfying it. I doubt not that the payers of income tax would have welcomed an extension of the scale of exemption. The Hon, the Maharaja of Durbhanga pleaded their cause with great ability, and I was anxious for the extension of that scale from Rs. 3 to to xious for the extension o. that scale from Rs. 3 10 to Rs. 1,500; the Hol. Mr. Charlu took much the same view, and the Hon. Mr. LaTouche pleaded for some relaxation of the same system. I may add also that it is equally the desire of Governments not merely to earn the popularity that may result from a remission of taxation although my experience is that popularity so wen is a very ephemeral asset—but also in the interests of good Government itself to reduce the burdens upon the people. But there are considerations in this case, both normal and exceptional, which decided us to take the opposite cou se.

And what are these normal circumstances which prevented the Viceroy from remitting a portion of the people's burden? Let His Excellency describe them :-

The normal consideration of which I spoke was that of ordinary caution. Though I have spoken of the astonishing recovery of the past year, though I believe it to represent a much more than transient improvement in the resources of the country, and though Sir James Westland budgets for a surplus of nearly four crores in the coming year, I am yet too conscious of the part played by what I may describe as the swing of the pendulum in the economic world, to be willing to sacrifice any portion of a hardly won advantage by being in too great a hurry. The Hon. Sir Griffith Evans has reminded us that India is a and of surprises, and these surprises are liable to start into existence equally in the spheres of policies and finance. Even in the more sober atmosphere of England we have had during the past year a startling instance of this phenomenon; for whereas in the plenitude of our wealth and substance, the Government of which I was a member a year ago agreed to a remission of taxation by which we forfeited in the case of one duty alone a sun of nearly 1½ million sterling without, so far as I remember, exciting any gratitude from any body; within the space of a year the balance has so completely swung round owing to unexpected cils that if what I read in the papers be correct there will be no cause for surprise should the forthcoming budget contain proposals for the recovery of considerably more than was then remitted. To reduce taxation in one year and to reimpose it in the next is a condition to which Governments have frequently been driven by unforeseen events. But it is one which it is better to avoid by an excess of prudence at the time than to meet with whatever ingenuity at a later period.

Analysed, the above stands thus: There is, no doubt, that we have got a surplus of four crores this year and the tax-payers have every right to demand relief; but who following year? So ordinary caution re-he had been able to secure the sym-quires that we should be on the safe side and pathy of some of his superiors, we deemed Government in September or October last. quires that we should be on the safe side and pathy of some of his superiors, we deemed make no remission. The point, however, it a duty to take up the case in the For months no notice was taken of it; but is,—does the principle, inculcated by the Viceroy, apply in any other country in the world? His Excellency himself admits that a certain tax was abolished in England by the Ministry of which he was a member, because there was a surplus. Why of his antecedents. We had to do this,

What is done here is this. If there is a deficit, Government makes it up by fresh Government that the official in question taxation or borrowing, which is the same had a very bad record; that he could thing. But if there is a surplus, the additional burden imposed upon the people is not removed on the ground of "caution." So they must continue to bear the burden, for ever and ever, ooth in adversity and in prosperity. In England and other countries the people are taxed only when the Government is absolutely in need of money. But, here, their burdens are not to be relieved, even partially, when the coffers of the State are in that Sub-division of Faridpore. full. Just see. The Maharaja of Durbhanga, Mr. Ananda Charlu, and even Mr. richer than India, incomes below Rs. 2,000 thing like a family, They are bound to are not taxed. The prayer of the Hon'ble help and protect one another; naturally, suffered a loss of only a few lakhs. But, although there was a surplus of about 4 crores of rupees, the Viceroy was not prepared to sacrifice this small sum, because India was a land of surprises and because ordinary caution stood in the way !

the proviso that if some special circumstances rendered it necessary in future to impose a tax or contract a loan, he would do so. The "caution" theory, laid have to do under the circumstance, definite information regarding the sub-would never know what remission is, for even when the exchequer is full to the brim, the Viceroy might say that considerations of prudence would not permit him to lighten their birden. Perhaps Lord a remission.

The following announcement of the Viceroy, with reference to the proposition of the Hon'ole Mr. Arthur regarding the present high rate of telegraphic charges, will no doubt create a good leal of curiosity in the public mind His Excellency observed:—
I regard that rate as inimical to trade, as being a barrier to the ever-growing intercourse between barrier to the ever-growing intercourse between Ihdia and the mother country, and as being obsolete and anomalous in itself. I have already considered the question, and I may say that I have placed it in a category of 12 important questions, all of them waiting to be taken up, all of them questions which ought to have been taken up long ago, and to which, as account I have the time. I process to address mustless soon as I have the time, I propose to address myself. What these questions are I am not prepared to relieve the curiosity of Hon. Members by now informing them. It is conceivable that I may have to add a thirteenth to their number in respect of the appeal of the Hon. Sir Griffith Evans with regard to the Small Cause Court Judges in the mofussil. That is a question with which I am necessarily not myself familiar, but, while I understand the Finance Minister to have answered air on the point of finance, the impression left on me by Sir Griffith Evans' remarks was this, that he was arguing the case not from the point of view of pay but from that of character. It is from that point of view that the question is deserving of the a tention of the Indian Government, which attenti n shall be glad to give to it.

Now, what are these twelve important questions which, the Viceroy assures us, ought to have been disposed of long ago, but which His Excellency means to settle ere long? The Viceroy rightly gauged the feelings of the public when he remarked that the annoucement would rouse great curiosity. His Excellency was, however, not in a position to satisfy the curiosity, so it is useless to speculate upon their precise character. Let us, however, trust that these dozen important questions are of suca a nature that, when formally taken up and carried out, the Viceroy will be able to carry the whole nation with him and earn their fervent gratitude for his Government.

The Viceroy continued to say :-But another question has been raised by an Hon. Member sitting at this table which I am unable to add to the dozen already alluded to. I am unable to add to it the suggestion of the Hon. Mr. Chitnavis that I should acquiesce in the reduction of the British sol-diers in India. I can assure him that no such proposal will form part of the programme of the Government of India during my ti ne.

In the above Lord Curzon betrayed the fact that, though occupying one of the most exalted positions in the world, he has yet the enthusiasm of youth! How could he be so positive as to say that he would never reduce British soldiers during his time when he has but just begun his rule? One hundred and one circumstances may occur during the next five years, that may compel him to alter his resolution. Who knows that for the benefit of the British soldiers themselves, who are now being dec mated and disabled by loathsome diseases and the deadly climate of India, that a reduction in their number would not be recommended by Lord Curzon himself? Indeed, no patriotic Englishman can con- of his superior. template the dismal fate of the Bri ish soldier in this country with unconcern, and Lord Curzon, when he comes to realize the true situation, may come forward to support the proposal of Mr. Chitnavis.

PROTECTION FROM OFFICIAL

VAGARIES. WHEN the Sub-divisional Officer of Munshigunj had a quarrel with the people knows that there may not be a deficit in the of that place; and when we found that interests of justice and good government. when the entire press expressed its surprise As the Sub-divisional Officer, Moulvi Fazlal at the unaccountable silence of the autho-Karim, is not unknown to fame, we thought rities, the following reply was sent to one that it would be enough if we only in- of the signatories :formed the Government of a portion should not the same rule hold good in because the Government was in new hands, and the present regime knew not their men. We had thus to inform the scarcely perform his duties qui tly; that it was not in Munshigunj alone but almost trict of Dacca. at every place he had been posted, that he placed in a humiliating position for his vagaries. Indeed, he had been transferred from Madaripore to the Sudder station of Dacca apparently for the pranks he played

As subordinate officials rule the country and not Lord George Hamilton, and as La Touche pleaded for the exemption of they rule with despotic sway, it is, therefore, people with incomes of Rs. 1,500 from their duty to afford protection to the the operation of the income-tax. In people from the vagaries of the members of England, which is perhaps a hundred times their own class. Officials here form somemembers was thus most reasonable. Then therefore, they are led to cling to one another again, by raising the scale from Rs. 500 in weal and woe. Such being the case, when to Rs. 1,500, Government would have a non-official has a quarrel with an official, the former finds himself in inextricable difficulties. He has either to submit unconditionally, or to go to other officials for protection. As a rule, a non-official, unless forced, never proclaims war against an official, for such a war must be unequal. He We humbly think, that the Viceroy might have taken an unassailable position if he had remitted a portion of taxation this year with officials for protection. But, how are the latter to behave under the circumstances? down by His Excellency, if stuck to, would is to afford protection to their accused sub-

Curzon did not like to begin his rule with mind,—and this we say sincerely,—as to of the disease, and what treatment should be in the least, and that it was introduced into Government, we took up this Munshigunj case. We did it purely in the interests of justice and good government. But what does segregation mean and how is We can possibly have no personal interest it to be carried out? In the same way, can more we made the authorities determin What we would like to see is that To our view these petry matters should ed to follow the policy condemned by us, the Local Governments should bring all adopted this policy, which was to take a contrary direction to the path pointed by instructions for the guidance of the people, the Indian newspapers, and promote Of course, it is possible they will not be ed upon in their columns. Indeed, this quite possible they may yet say something fact came to be known in so pronounced a manner, that all newspapers adopted an amusing method of making him accept their suggestions. It was to oppose what they commended and thus lead him to carry out their wishes!

It must be borne in mind that men are rational beings, and, in spite of their best efforts, they can never act irrationally for any length of time. It is irrational to reject a course simply because one, who is not liked, has recommended it. And Sir Charles had to pay the penalty like the stubborn boy who defied the control of his friendly guardians. This boy had been hopelessly spoiled, so that he at last took a vow never to do what his guardians asked him to. Nay, the resolution that he adopted was not only not to do the bidding of his guardians but to do quite the contrary. His guardians, however, brought him to reason in the following manner. They bade him not to do what they desired he should. Thus when he refused to go to school, the guardians told him, in a peremptory manner, never to go there.—"Is it so?" says the stubborn boy, "Then I must." It was in this manner that the boy was reasoned down. How far the policy succeeded with Sir Charles Elliott is, however, a point not relevant to the present discus-

We must say this much, however, that the Indian papars did succeid in persuading Sir Charles Elliott to transfer Maulvi Fazlal Karim from a Sub-division where he was independent to a Suddor Statien, where he had to act under the direct supervision

We firmly believe that the duty of Government is not to see whether its critics are friendly or not, or whether their suggestions are agreeable or otherwise, but, to do even-handed justice, that is to say, to afford equal protection to its children, the people as well as its brethren, the members of the service.

It will be remembered that a petition containing serious allegations against Maulvi Fazlal Karim and sigued by hundreds of

Dated, Calutta, the 9 h February, 1899,
Read a memorial dated the 29th September 1898 from Babu Jogendra Nath Chatterjee and certain others, complaining against Moulavi Fazlul Karim Sub-divisional Officer of Munshigunge in the Disrict of Dacca.

Read also a letter No. 689 Dated the 19th January 99, from the Commissioner of Dacca reporting on the memorial. After enquiry, a careful examination of records and a thorough inspection of the Sub-divisional Office, the Commissioner has reported on all the complaints made against the Deputy Magistrate and expressed his opinion that the memorial contains a series of false charges emanating from persons whom the Deputy Magistrate has offended in doing his duty. The Lieutenant-Governor accepts the opinion. Moulavi Fazlal Karim will remain in charge of the Munshigunge Sub-division.

Ordered that a copy of the Resolution be forwarded to the Commissioner for information and for communication to the memorialists.

Chief Secretary to the Government of Bengai. As the charges against the Maulvi were definite and specific, the proper course for the Government was to have sifted the matter by an open enquiry. But, we fancy, the authorities did not venture to take this hazardous step! By the way, is it only "Babu Jogenera Nath Chatterjee and certain others," or five to six hundred people, some of them holding very respectable positions in the Sub-division, who submitted the memorial to the Government?

THE plague is raging in this country for more than two years. Scientific and highly educated men should have acquired by this time sufficient experience of the disease to be able to give to the country some to raise a debate over the subject and over-mean this, that the people of this country ordinate, as also to afford protection to the not be in the possession of any, but some ed wisely in refraining from taking any nonofficial accuser. This they are doubly definite directions to the people, as to how decisive action, without being assured the line of conduct which would be followed when one is attacked. We have the Indian Legislative Council with th adopted by Sir John Woodburn and Mr. seen it stated that upper stories are better Bolton, when they were thus appealed to. than the ground floor, that the bacilli and thus undermining the principles of Believing firmly in our mind that our humble generally attack though the sole of the feet Free Trade. Some say that crowded Liberals are waiting for information from be at variance, -- would be welcomed by houses ought to be avoided, others that any in the matter, as both Maulvi Fazlal Karim medical men give us an idea as to the not benefit India at all. The same opinion and those who complained against him are treatment which is likely to be success is held by a large number of other paper But one circumstance damped our zeal. We saw, to our dismay, that we were only injuring the case of the Munshiguni people by our advocacy, and that the more we commented on this case, the more we made the authorities determined by the straightful of the straig or to ignore the facts brought forward by us the distinguished medical men together We knew, Sir Charles Elliott now and then for the purpose of arriving at such definite conclusions and issuing general officials, who were unfavourably comment- able to say anything precise, but still it is useful.

> THE Indian Witness does not commend the Daily Mail for having selected Mr. Steevens for its roving representative in India. But it must be borne in mind that both the paper and its representative have been able to create a sensation which they may turn to their benefit. One way to make a paper successful is to make it scurrilous and abusive. Some of our Bengalee contemporaries have imitated this objectionable way of making themselves notorious. The Globe, like the Mail, is oftentimes brutal when writing about the Hindus. We understand, an article in Justice, the Socialist paper, bitterly condemned the India Government. was when the sedition-phobia was upon the Government. The Government of that period succeeded in persuading itself that sedition was devastating the country and unless checked with vigor the whole Empire would be destroyed. When the Government was in this frame of mind, the issue of Justice containing that dreadful article reached India. Government did not know how to stop its circulation; it was felt, at least the people were made to feel, that the perusal of the article would bring in a cataclysm or something like Telegraphic warnings were issued from Simla to the Local Governments; the Local Governments hastily called their ministers together, and prolonged and deep consultations were held to find a way out of the difficulty. We have given the above account with an object in view, which is to let the authorities know, that any amount of abuse by Englishmen of British rule will never create any but very good feeling in India. On the other hand, sympathetic utterances in English papers even if they contain the severest condemnation of British rule do not serve the cause of sedition but of loyalty, as they really soothe the people What really creates bad feeling against the Government are writings like those indulg d in by Mr. Steevens and the Globe. The article in Justice, if circulated in India, would have done no harm and perhaps done some good, but the brutal sentiments of writers like Mr. Steevens rouse the worst feelings in the mind of a subject race.

WE see that Mr. H. Roberts has asked a question in Parliament regarding the sugar legislation. The question is harmless enough, but it may be asked whether he is going to act in concert with Mr. Maclean for the purpose of opposing the measure. This would appear to be the case from an artice in the Daily News which has opposed the legislation. On the other hand, our London correspondent, who is as good a Liberal as the Duly News, supports it. From this it would appear that the Liberal paper has not as yet been able to realize degree of B. Sc., at the University of thoroughly the situation here in India, Mr. Caine has, and, therefore, he supports the measure; and the Daily News opposes it, and, therefore, it is clear it has not been able to grasp it. And it is not likely that Mr. Roberts who always acts in concert with Mr. Caine in regard to Indian questions will oppose a measure which is so ardently sup-ported by the latter. The contention of the Daily News is that the object of the sugar legislation is to bolster up a decaying in-dustry. No, Sir, that is not the situation. It is the bounty which is the sole cause of this decay. By this bountry system, any industry of any country can be destroyed. The most flourishing industry of England can be destroyed by this method.

THE letter of our London correspondent which deals entirely with the Indian Sugar Bill, will be read with the most intense interest by the Indian public. Our correspondent's surmise is correct conception that the question had aroused such keen interest in Parliament, and that a coalition had been formed between the Liberals and a large number of the Tories, definite information regarding the sub-ject. Of course, exact information may Our friends in England, however, act-bound to do, because they themselves are officials, and are the only parties who can do justice.

We had not the least doubt in our adopted to protect oneself from an attack ultimate object of introducing it in England India. The question before the Liberal is whether the Sugar, Bill was introduced to benefit India or to undermine the prin ciples of Free Trade. The Daily Asws has already expressed the opinion that it would > give place to other important problems which Lord Curzon has raised by hi own utterances. One of them is the ques tion of the ever-widening gulf that is separating the two races in India. How glad the Indians would be, and how glad many Englishmen would be if this gulf were bridg ed! We cannot admit that all Englishmer would be glad to see feelings of amity established in India between the rulers and the ruled. For the Globe avowedly prefer unrest and war. Let the Indians and Euro peans here be friends: they can be friend by mutual sacrifices : and when they hav once established mendly feelings among themselves they will be in a position to treat with unconcern any possible combination in Parliament. We entertain the hope that under the sympathetic rule of Lord Curzon an attempt will really b made to make India strong, and the Iudian a nation. For, we already see a change of tone for the better in most of the Anglo Indian papers.

THE Anglo-Indians have a contempt for the Indians which they cannot corceal even with all their efforts. The Indian have also a contempt, in some repects, for the Europeans, which they cannot likewise conceal. As for the Europeans who speak contemptuously of the Indians, we do not refer to those who "damn niggers". Such men do not enjothe confidence or respect of their own countrymen. Take note of the treatmen accorded to Mr. Steevens. He has been torn to pieces by his own countrymen for his attack on the Indians. But mischief comes from highly cultured and highly placed Europeans, official and non-official, who damn the natives by faint praise,-who petray contempt for the natives in the most temperate language.

Now, Englishmen who are naturally cosmopolitan in instincts, who own the largest empire in the world, ought to be able to bear up with the failings others. They ought to be especially considerate, in the matter of the failing of those whose liberties they have taken. Then again, we do not admit that the Indian is at all a contemptible creature Entrust an Indian with work, however responsible, and he will give as mucl satisfaction as an Englishman. This is a proposition to which the Europeans will not give a ready assent. But in order to oppose the proposition, the Europeans have shew instances, proving that Indians entrusted with responsible work, have failed. We can shew that the Indians, so far a they have been trusted, have never been found wanting.

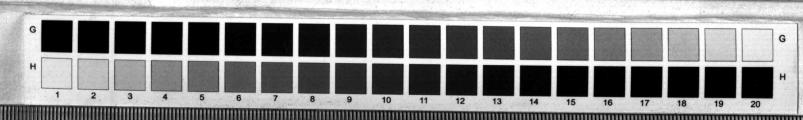

HERE is a piece of news :-It is gratifying to observe that one of our countrymen, Mr. S. C. Mahalanabis B. sc. F. R. M. S., F. R. S. E., who is now a professor in the University College, Cardiff, has, along with Prof. E. A. Schafer F. R. S., of degree of B. Sc., at the University o Wales. Mr. Mahalanabis is the first Indian Examiner in a British University.

Similarly, Dr. Sarat Mullick holds ar important post in one of the hospitals of London and has already distinguished him self in various ways in England.

OF course, the Indian has his defects and the European his superiority in many respects; but the Indians have in som matters an advantage over his Europea brother. That being the case, S. Charles Elliott had no business to c the Indians an inferior race. The i pression that is sought to be conveyed by the Indians is that, they are an inferior race a little in advance of the negroes, but much inferior to Europeans. Now, this is we think, a wrong done to the. Indian tense interest by the Indian public.
Our correspondent's surmise is correct that no one in India had the slightest

The letter of the Hon'ble Mr. Oldham criticizing Mr. Steevens' strictures on the Bengalee, is a generous production. Often times have we seen a European assuming th garb of a friend only to stab the Indian, b there is no trace of anything like it in M Oldham's letter. Mr. Oldham treats th Bengalee as a peer,

WE have now something to say of the Indian's contempt for the Europeans. We do not know how to express ourselves with out giving offence. European vices are those which follow the enjoyment of excessive power. Compare a man who has only the birth-rights of humanity witha man who has excessive powers over his fellows, and the fact will at once be made patent that they do as a rule differ as poles asunder in character. One of these vices is too much attraction for material and transient blessings. Thus, while the cultured and considerate European will speak in approving terms of the Indians apparently, but damn him really, the Indian will always the interests of the good government of praise the energy, the powers of organisation, the sharp wit of the Europeans, deploring the fact at the same time that he has no idea of an existence beyond the material.

IT is said that the over-crowding of Calcutta is one of the causes of the outbreak of the plague, and that the authorities are anxious that the town should be denuded segregation or instituting search parties, and three fourths of the people will be driven to the interior. But Sir John Woodburn would who can afford it, to send out their families A large number of the inhabitants of the town have their country-houses. But they cannot avail of them, simply because something like a water-famine prevails in most of the villages of Bengal from April to July, say, he carried out orders. When there was and no medical help is to be had there either money he had no trouble to meet the for love or for money. When last year's scare led three or four lakhs of men, women and children to fly into the interior, they soon came to find that they had leaped from the frying pan to the fire. In a poor and pestilence-stricken country like ours, one of the sacred duties of the Government is to distribute the blessings of medical treatment to the people. The Lady Dufferin Fund, which is lying useless may also be utilized for this purpose.

WE have said above that the Globe wants var and unrest. Our attention has been lrawn to the following malignant paragraph n a recent issue of that paper :-

The deliberate and public assassination at Poons of the two principal witnesses on whose testimone Damodhar Chapekar was condemned and executeyed vill, it is to be hoped, at once cause the Bomba Government to organise a really efficient detectivy department. The native policeman is good enough for ordinary purposes, but when it comes to getting behind the scenes of murder societies he has little worth. There is no sort of doubt that a secret worth There is no sort of doubt that a secret organisation of that character has been in existence at the old Mahratta capital for many years. It was also known that very liberal funds were furnished by wealthy natives who preferred to employ venal tools to accomplish their treasonable purposes. But with all that in evidence, no discovery was made until Mr. Rand and Lieutenant Ayerst were murdered. History has repeated itself in the present outrage. all that in evidence, no discovery was made until Mr. Rand and Lieutenant Ayerst were murdered. History has repeated itself in the present outrage. The conspirators remained quiet until their intended victims considered themselves—safe; but—it is clear that the purpose to make away with them was never abandoned. Yet the police never, apparently, got wind of the foul conspiracy, or the murdered men would have received warning, we may assume, to be on their guard. Probably the release of Tilak before his full term of imprisonment had expired nelped to produce a false sense of security at Poona. The police would have substantial grounds for believing that all danger had disappeared when the Government thus let loose on society a plotter whose whole public career had been marked by scarcely reiled treason. If Lord Sandhurst imagined that he would ingratuate himself with the Poona Brahmins by setting Tilak free, he must now recognise the olly of attempting to conciliate murder societies. It is to be hoped, too, that too much weight will not be attached to the confessions of Vasudeo Chapekar and Ranade, that it was they who assassinated the Dravids. Possibly, theirs may have been the hands which fired the fatal shots, but they probably acted is the instruments of people more powerful than hemse ves.

When a man, standing on a high terrage.

When a man, standing on a high terrace, elts one who is passing along the street below hth stones, he is regarded in the light of mean coward. The Globe libels Mr. Tilak nd the Mahrattas from England. We only rish its editor would come out to this country nd publish all the above here in an Indian aper. But the Globe, Mr. Steevens and thers of their way of thinking, would never enture to do so, for that requires manliness. is long as Mr. Steevens was in Bengal, he as very sweet-tongued whenever he came cross a Bengalee gentleman. But, as soon s he was safe from the clutches of the ndian law of libel, he appeared in his true olour and began to traduce the character of ne Bengalee nation. Papers like the Globe and the Laily Mail should be proscribed in ndia. Justice, the Socialist organ, was oscribed because it contained a so-called editious article. Why should not the Globe and the Daily Mail be treated in the same when their venomous writings are mainly these two papers and the Times, in conjunction with some Anglo-Indian papers, that brought about the incarceration of Mr. Tilak, the deportation of the Natus, and the sedition and other repressive measures.

This time also they did their best to foment discontent in this country but failed, be cause, the Indians had taken a vow to treat their effusions with indifference. The Indian subjects of Her Majesty, however, need protection from these virulent attacks. Some Indian Political Association ought to formally bring the above extract from the Globe to the notice of His Excellency the

MR. CHALMERS, the late Law Member, came like a panther, stealthily, unperceived. His presence was subsequently made known by the havoc he committed. And if he has now gone, every one is, of course, glad. Sir James Westland came here with some noise, because he had obtained a promiof a portion of its population. Of course, a panic can at once be created by proposing cured him a comfortable berth at the cost of India. When a Magistrate, he wrote a book. That was the last occasion when he made his presence felt. Since then rather resign his post than be a party to he had been in our midst more as a prinsuch an arrangement. The other way is for the Government to appeal to the citizens, surprised to find in him a bitter, and a little bit unscrupulous, enemy of Indian to the Mofussil, and thus thin the congested interests. He now goes or has gone and parts of the town. We think, many might nobody knows whether he is yet here gladly respond to such an appeal if the authorities would undertake to supply them with medical help and pure drinking water. was never remembered, so he is not likely to be forgotten. He was never noticed, so he is not likely to be missed.

> As a financier Sir James Westland was neither a failure nor a success. That is to his term has expired, for it is doubtful extraordinary statement for one in his posimend the reduction of the military strength seeing a statesman he may be, surely he is the point.

In noticing the case, in which Mr. W. B. Thompson, Deputy Commissioner of Singbhum, sentenced a man to rigorous imprisonment for two years, though the maximum sentence provided for the offence is only one year, we made a slight mistake. We said, "First of all the case was instituted by a subordinate of the Deputy Commissioner, and the Judicial Commissioner thinks that this alone incapacitated him from trying the case." The case was not instituted by a subordinate of the Deputy Commissioner, but by the Deputy Commissioner himself. This makes the situation still worse. Having been the prosecutor, Mr. Thompson should never have tried the case. And what havoc did he commit! guides many of the affairs of the realm. If it Not only did he not allow the to obtain legal help, but he finished his case in two days, and then passed double the maximum punishment allowed by the law! It is in India alone that such things are possible. Here a number of men is sentenced to be hanged for having killed a single individual. Here a man is liable to be punished with two years' imprisonment, though, under the law, he is to get only twelve months. Will Sir John Woodburn be pleased to send for the records of this case? And will His Honor be pleased to divorce Mr. Thompson of the first-class Magisterial powers with which he has been invested? Mr. Thompson, we think, will do very well in the Opium Department.

CONSIDERING the fact that during the past quarter of a century the Sultans of Oman have received from the Government of India subsidies amounting to over £200,000, many may be inquisitive to know how we became con-nected with this kingdom. The first treaty of the English with the rulers of this kingdom dates as far back as 1798, when the East India Company adopted measures to frustrate the designs of the French and the rivalry of the Dutch. Since then the Sultans of Oman have looked to Great Britain for protection, and have relinquished all right to alienate their territory or to enter into relations with any other foreign Power. It would thus appear that this burden ought to have been borne by England and not by India.

WE have been reporting the depredations of a herd of wild elephants in the district of Bankura for months. These leviathans, the very sight of which strike terror into the boldest hearts—not only damage the raiyats' crops and their homesteads, but often kill them. We are told that the District Magistrate has offered a reward of Rs. 100 to any one who would kill any of the elephants; but no one has yet taken up the challenge, and perhaps no one in Bankura will, for it is no childs' play to account for such a powerful animal. While this reward remains inoperative, another life has been lost. We fear it is time for the Local Government to take up the matter, for now that the population has been thoroughly emasculatalculated to rouse the worst feelings of the people of this country and make them see the balance of their mind? It was tions of wild elephants. There, too, a reward of Rs. 100 has been offered by the district

WE have already noticed that the Municipality, at any rate, certain high municipal authorities, are in favour of reducing the population of Cal uta—at all events, in the congested parts such as Burra Bazar owing to the plague. The project of Sir Bradford Leslie, as we have been able to make out, tends to that end. The Woodburn Avenue, we understand, will effect if. The Woodburn Avenue will be a broad road—nearly 100 feet wide—which will pass from the proposed permanent bridge, from a place near Juggernath Ghat to Tiretta Bazar through Burra Bazar and other thickly populated parts of the town. Burra Bazar consists of 23 acres of land, that portion of the Woodburn Avenue which will pass through Burra Bazar will take up nearly 12 acres; so the question of congestion, we believe, would be set at rest for once. It may be very properly asked whether to remove the congestion, the projectors wil remove trade in Burra Bazar off the face of Calcutta. We are assured that no such thing will happen. No doubt certain section of the population wil be removed from their narrow, ill-ventilated and dingy abodes. But the projectors mean to rear up well-ventilated and well-lighted five-storied houses in conformity to the modern scientific requirements, over the surplus lands-which will locate more than the number of people disturbed and made home ess by the new road. Indeed, Sir Bradford Leslie has estimated that the total floor area that the new buildings will take up, will be 105,000 square yards, over which five-storied houses will be reared up and a half story over it for cooking purposes provided. The cost will no doubt be enormous. But our countrymen have not to pay for it. It will be borne by the English projectors. Our impecunious Municipality which is anxious to open out the congested parts will, we think, be too glad to accept the above proposal in good parts. In the face of the assurance of the Hungarian Government to protect the interests of the sugar producers of that country, against the imposition of countervailing duties and the opposition kept up only by those whose interests are at stake by it and in the face of the fact of America, which is in the same condition as India, having done what India has now done, it would be simply silly to say that protection was not required in India. It would, however, be interesting to the reader to note that as late as October 31st last year, the Indian Government was evidently altogether sceptical as to the necessity for any such step as that which has now been taken. In a circular sent round to the Provincial Govern-ments asking for information as to the alleged injury done to Indian agriculturists by the importation of foreign sugar, the Secretary in the Revenue and Agricultural Department wrote: The Government of India bave no clear evidence before them that the increasing sugar imports have had, or are tending to such serious consequences. The area under sugarcane in the different provinces has not declined of late years, nor in recent revenue or settlement reports have any observations regarding the un profitableness of the industry been noticed. little hail fell.

The extent to which the refined sugars from abroad compete in the Indian markets with the the coarse sugars ordinarily manufactured by native processes, and tend to supplant the latter is uncertain. There is probably an increasing demand for sugar in India for domestic consumption and for spirit distilling and sweetmeat making, and as the sugarcane area has not expanded of late years, it may be that the increasing imports have not been in excess of the necessary demand. The Daily G aphic is greatly surprized at this and says that if these were the views of the India Government on 31st October 1898, it is not easy to understand what can have occurred in the meantime to produce such a startling change of policy. It is simply because Lord Eigin was not wide awake as Lord Curzon is. The above facts prove beyond doubt bound to be approved of by the people, if otherwise, Government would not lack bringing forward arguments to secure is ground inspite of the violent opposition of the people. So that there is nothing to be wondered at if the policy of Lord Curzon would totally upset that of his predecessor.

Shishir Kumar Ghose WITH ANINTRODUCTION BY

W. S. Caine

PRICE-I RUPEE AND 6 ANNAS. "I heartily commend to every cultured and earnest Indian, to every Christian Missionary, and also to every European who cares to look beneath the surface of Indian life and thought, the contents of thi deeply-interesting volume of miscellaneous articles from the pen of Shishir Kumar Ghose".—W. S. Caine in the Introduction. The sketches are written in excellent English and an attractive style. These sketches are of a miscelaneous character-stories with a distinctive imagina laneous character—stories with a distinctive imaginative faculty on every page; excellent descriptions of exciting scenes, theological essays, dissertation ons. Sutteeism; poetry; a spirited and long defence of their political rights ignored by the Government, entitled "The perpetual slavery of India" which it would do good to certain of the English people, if they would only take the trouble to read, and many other interesting essays. other interesting essays. . . it is pleasant to find that our friends in India are capable of writing in such an interesting strain as to be found in this book

To be had at the Patrika Office.

THE FOREIGN OFFICE. - During the absence of the Governor-General in Council from Calcutta, the Under-Secretary to the Government of Bengal in the Judicial, Political, and Appointment Departments, will hold charge of that portion of the Foreign Department which is left in Calcutta.

HONOUR TO THE VICERINE .-- The Queen has been grac ously pleased to confer the decoration of the Imperial Order of the Crown of India on Mary Victoria, Lady Cu zon of Kedleston, wife of the Right Honourable George Nathanial, Lord Curzon of Kedlest n, Viceroy and Governor-General of India.

A DROWNING FATALITY. - Lieute uant-Colonel Shirres, R. A., Commanding the 8th Mountain Battery was accidentally drowned on Friday afternoon in the Rungeet River while fishing He slipped off a rock into deep water, and never rose to the surface. Every effort to recover his body is being made, but so far without success.

THE RECENT CYCLONE. - So far as can be ascertained no individual garden has suffered to the full extent of what storms, such as last Tuesday's, are capable of inflicting, but there has been a good number slightly injured. In one or two instances plucking will be suspended for a month or so. On Friday night, another very severe storm was experienced, but only a

A TIGER SHOT .- A Dhubri correspondent says that the other day at noon a woman at Bagoolamari, a village adjacent to Dhubii, was killed by a large-slzed tiger. The occurrence was reported to the Deputy Commissioner, who immediately went to the scene in company with Mr. Jolly, Extra Assistant Commissioner, and a few servants, on three elephants, and shot the tiger.

MURDER AT BASIRHAT. -An atrocious murder was committed at Hasnabad near Basirhat. An old Hindoo woman on the 1st instant went to her son-in-law's house for the purpose of bringing her daughter home for a temporary visit. The son-in-law was absent at the time: the mother-in-law without waiting for his return took her daughter away. On returning home learned from his neighbours the cause thereof was so much enraged that he took up an axe, chased his mother-in-law, and overtaking her on the way, mercilessly struck the old woman with the axe causing her immediate death.

A BUDDHIST MONASTERY IN CALCUTTA. -At no distant date, says the Maha Bodhi Journal, the Buddhists will have a monastery in Calcutta. A plot of land is to be secured at Rs. 3,750 near the Ballygunge railway station within the Municipal imits of Calcutta. A sum of Rs. 1,000 has been advanced by a Buddhist gentleman, whose name cannot be disclosed at presen. The land is beautifully situated and admirably suited for Buddhist students. We expect to erect a monastery, and we hope Burma, Ceylon, Siam, Arakan and Japan will liberally contribute towards the project.

A MONSTER.-A correspondent sends us the following from Raipur, Brbbum: "It is not often that we see or hear of animals giving birth to creature, other than of its own species, half human, half beas. It was on the 27th of March that a cow in this village, after more, than a year brought forth a still born monster. Its head was round like that of a human infant with the eyes and nose imperfectly developed while the ears and the rest of the body were formed like those of a calf (with these exception that it had no hair on the surface of is body). In size it was not much bigger than a full developed human infant at its birth.

VITAL STATISTICS.—The total number of deaths registered in Urban Calcutta during the week ending 18th March was 568 against 456 and 416 in the two preceding weeks, and higher than the corresponding week of last year by 263. There were 10 deaths from cholera, against 9 and 9 in the two preceding weeks; the number is lower than the average of the past quinquennium by 65. There were 112 deaths from plague, against 67 and 29 in the two preceding weeks. There was one death from small. VITAL STATISTICS.—The total number of ceding weeks. There was one death from smallpox during the week. There were 3 deaths from tetanus, against 3 in the previous week.

The mortality from fevers and bowel-complaints amounted to 189 and 93, respectively,

RANAGHAT-KRISHNAGAR RAILWAY.

OPENING CEREMONY.

An interesting ceremony was held yesterday afternoon at Aitshala Ghat, on the Churnl river, near Ranaghat, the terminus of the new Ranaghat-Krishnaghar Light Railway-the occasion being the opening of the Railway by
His Honor, the Directors of the Company and about a dozen Indian and two dozen European gentlemen. On the way at Naihati Mr. H. C. Wil iams, the Commissioner of Burdwan, and at Ranaghat Mr. Gapendra Krishna ted in honor of the occasion.

The party then travelled a short way over the new line in the company's train. The line is of 2 feet 6 inches gange and of 20 miles in length, and is similar in every respect to the Howrah Amta line. The party then came back, had refreshments and then left for Calcutta at about half past five, reaching the town at a quarter past seven. Among those present were plaints amounted to 189 and 93, respectively, against 184 and 50 in the preceding week. The general death-rate of the week was 63.5 per mille per annum, against 45.4, the mean of the last five years.—The total number of deaths registered in Suburban Calcutta during the same week was 231, against 172 and 188 in the two preceding weeks, and higher than the corresponding week of last year by 78. #### THE VICEROY ON TOUR

A LAHORE correspondent sends, under date 3rd instant, the following account of the Viceroy's visit to Khanki Irrigation Works:—The Viceroy, accompanied by the Lieutenant Governor, their respective Staffs, Colonel Montgomery, Settlement Commissioner, Mr. Wilson, Chief Secretary to the Punjab Government and Captain Popham Young, the Colonization Officer, left Lahore last night at 11 o'clock by special train and arrived early this morne. Colonization Officer, left Lahore last night at 11 o'clock by special train, and arrived early this morning at Khanki, where are the head works of the Chenab Canal Colonel Brackenbury, Manager of the NorthWestern Railway, Mr. Jacob, the Tratfic Manager, and Mr. Worburton, Superintendent of Police, were in charge of the train. His Excellency and His Honor we e received at Khanki by Mr. Hig, ham, Inspector General of Irrigation, Mr. Berestod, Chief Engineer of the Punjab Irrigation Department, Mr. Jacob, Superintending Engineer of the Chenab Circle and other Canal officers. His Excellency spent some time in viewing the great Excellency spent some time in viewing the great dam from the wooden tower, about 60 feet high, dam from the wooden tower, about 60 feet high, rected in view of a contemplated visit from Lord Lansdowne, which, however, was never made and in examining the maps and plans submitted to him by Messrs. Higham and Beresford. From the op of the tower an excellent view was obtained of the works and machinery by which the river is embraced and held within bounds, and the necessary supply of water discharged into the canal by means of which over 4,000 square miles of the country are irrigated. His Excellency's reply to the Lyallpur address gives a very graphic and the comprehensive account of this great work. The inspection being over the whole party were entertained at breakfast by the Lieutenant-Govenor.

His Excellency and party walked up the main street of the town, being received at the entrance by principal colonists with whom he entered into a conversation, in the course of which he thanked them cordially for the reception they had given him. The people looked haven and exercise given him. The people looked happy and content ed, and there was an air of prosperity about the town and its surroundings that was striking. Lyallpur, the head quarters of the four Canal Divisions and of the Colonisation Officer, Captain Problem Young, was reached shortly after 4 o'clock. H., Excellency was received at the station which was brilliantly decorated by the principal Irrigation officers of the district, and proceeded at once with the L'eutenant-Governor, and the once with the L'eutenant-Governor, and the others of the party in a camal carriage, to Captain Popham Young's bungalow, a mile di tant. The carriage proceeded at a walking pace, being preceded by the excellent hand of the 23rd Pioneer which was specially subscribed for and brought up from Lahore by the colonists for the occasion. Triumph I arches were erected along the route which was dessely throughout by the which was densely thronged throughout by the colonists, who were most enthusiastic in their demonstrations of welcome. Amongst them were many fine looking men, pensioners of the Native Army, some wearling their unif rms and medals. All the colonists, indeed with scarcely an exception, were splendid specimen of a manly independent people. After some time spen in conversation with the Irrigation cofficers and in the examination of the maps and plans at Captain Young's Bungalow, His Excellency proceeded to a verandah in front of which a large body of colonists was assembled to witness the presentation of the address of welcome. This was read by the Nawab Mohamed Hyat Khan, C.S.I., in vernacular, to which His Excellency

His Excellency afterwards visited the town and some of the principal buildings, and later on witnessed an excellent d splay of fireworks. The town and railway station were a so brilliantly illuminated. The special train left for Lahore at all officers retain their present substantive positions, unless or until otherwise ordered.

The reorgenitation is intended to impree prospects in the Department as a whole and assimilat, generally the salaries of covenance civilians to those obtaining the salaries of covenanted civilians to those obtaining in different provinces. It is not possible, however, to ensure that the salary of each individual covenanted civilian in the Political Department shall be equal to the salaries of his contemporaries in his own province. The standard aimed at is a Department including at least twenty covenanted civilians, of whom twelve shall be in appointments carrying a substantive pay of Rs. 1.000 or upwards, and the remainder in less highly paid posts. The intention is that, as a matter of practice, promotion, both substantive and officiating, should, when a fair distribution of civilian and military members has been secured, go to the civilians in the line of the civilian and to the military men in the line of the military men. The Government of India, however, reserve to themselves absolute discretion as to the actual grant of promotion, whether substantive or officiating. The Government of India also reserve full discretion to all vacancies by introducing men from any branch of the oublic introducing men from any branch of the public

CORPORATION OF CALCUTTA.

A GENERAL Meeting of the Municipal Commissioners of Calcutta was held on Wednes-day at the Town Hall. Besides the Chairman and the Vice-Chairman there were about fifty Commission present.

PLAGUE IN ADDED AREA.

Babu Amulyadhan Addy asked the follow-

(a) Will the Chairman kindly state what special measures he has taken or is willing to ake for the prevention of the spread of bubonic plague in the Added Area?

(b) Is it not advisable to increase the number of coolies for cleansing the bustees and drains as well as that of sullage and refuse carts for the efficient conservancy of the said area?

The Chairman in reply said:—

(1) The only steps which can be taken to prevent the spread of plague, have been taven in the added area. The wards which compose it have been divided into dis ricts, which are in charge of well qualified European Doctors. There is a public hospital at Budge Budge and another at Manicktota. A sufficient number of disinfecting gangs have been retained, houses are disinfected in which plague cases occur and attempts are made to get the sick people removed to hospital and the infected nouses evacuated. The Vigilance Committees are assisting us to some ex ent, but there is great reluctance amongst the people to give information.

(b) I cannot answer this question until I have had time to go into it carefully with the Health Officer.

CONSERVANCY IN THE NORTHERN TOWN. Babu Nalin Bihari Sircar put the followng questions :-

1. Is the Chairman aware of the existence of a strong fee ling of d ssatisfaction amongst the residents of the northern part of the town in regard to (i) conservancy arrangements generally; and (ii) the watering of several of the streets and lanes?

2. (a Will he kindly explain the causes of the defects so bitterly complained of?

2 (b) What steps has he taken or does he propose to take for the speedy removal of these defects?

these detects?

3. If want of proper supervision over the daily work of the coolies, carters, etc., be one of the causes, cannot the honorary services of active members of the Vigilance Committees n each ward be utilized for the purpose as a temporary measure in the present emergency?

The Chairman in reply said:

I. (a) The Chairman has seen letters in the papers and is aware that complaints are made about the conservancy arrangements generally and the watering of streets and lanes in the northern part of the town.

1. (b) As regards conservancy the defects are principally due to the shortness of cattle and drivers. A number of the drivers have recently run away and in consequence the number of carts which can be sent out is short.

As regards shortness of street watering the cause is the same. As the establishment of ponies is short we have had to take many of them for the conservancy establishment, as conservancy is more important in this time of plague than

2. The steps which have been taken are as follows: One hundred cattle have been purchased locally, while nearly 100 more have been ordered from Purneah where purchased locally, while nearly 100 more have been ordered from Purneah where the stamp of cattle seems to be very suitable for our requirements. Twenty-seven of these have been received and more are expected or the stamp of cattle seems to be very suitable and in doing so remarked that he had done this in order that Government might be in a position to consider whether they should be a position to consider whether the said that he was not present at the murders. His Lordship and in doing so remarked that he had done the case at great length and in doing so remarked that he had done the case at great length and in doing so remarked that he had done the case at great length and in doing so remarked that he had done the case at great length and in doing so remarked that he had done the case at great length and in doing so remarked that he had done the case at great length and in doing so remarked that he had done the case at great length and in doing so remarked that he had done the case at great length and in doing so remarked that he had done the case at great length and in doing so remarked that he had done the case at great length and in doing so remarked that he had done the case at great length and in doing so remarked that he had done the case at great length and in doing so remarked that he had done the case at great length and in doing so remarked that he had done the case at great length and in doing so remarked that he had done the case at great length and in doing so remarked that he had done the case at great length and in doing so remarked that he have been received and more are expected shortly. If it had not been for the recent exodus of carters, the number of conservancy carts sent out would have been the full number, and the release of other anima's from conservancy carts would have enabled street watering to have been more efficiently done. In November last the Heal'h Officer was sepecially deputed to Sonepur to purchase i ponies, but was unable to find a sufficient stock for our requirements. As regards deficiency in labour, some months. regards deficiencygin labour, some months passed on the three prisoners were accordingly is were made with a l bour contractor for the extra hands required; but the contractor has failed us. As soon as the present exodus of carters began, Mr. Mukerjee was deputed to Gaya to arrange for the necessary men, but he has hitherto been unab'e to secure them probably owing to fear of plague. The General Committee was asked to help in the matter and some of the members h ve promised to assist the Health Officer with suggestions.

As regards watering I have made atrangements to extend at once as far as possible the system of watering by hose from hydrants. The system will be extended as rapidly as possible and relief will then be given to the water cart establishment which will be able to do the work better and more thoroughly than they do at present. As soon as we can replace the carters who have absconded we shall be able to improve the street watering and conservancy.

3. There is I think undoubtedly want of supervision over the afternoon conservancy. As this is in charge at present of the ordinary Inspectors ( as the Chairman pointed out, had already enough to do.) I have therefore arranged to put on five extra Inspectors for the afternoon conservancy as an experiment. Their pay to be met from the Plague Loan Account. As to be met from the Plague Loan Account. As regards the general supervision the supervising establishment is, I think, quite sufficient. As regards making use of the services of honorary members of the Vigilance Committees, I should be unwilling to throw an extra burden upon the shoulders of centlement. The pay the pay is a big affair that attracts great many people of the neighbouring villages to it. Kesab and many others had gone there. At this time Ajit Singh formed a conspiracy with Golab Singh, his friend, and Chet Singh a cousin of Ratan Singh. On a certain day at 4 P. M. upon the shoulders of gentlemen from whom I am already asking considerable sacrifice of time and leisure in connection with reporting of plague cases and supervis on of plague contacts. As regards the general question of censervancy, it is only fair to the Healthf Department to note that a larger quentity of refuse is being taken away than in the corresponding year. The question of improving both the conservancy and the street watering, is receiving my earnest attention, and I shall be only too glad for any suggestion which any Commissioner will be kind enough to make.

THE TRAMWAY QUESTION.

The Chairman submitted for information a letter from the Manager of the Tramways Company refusing to accept the terms of the agreement offered by the Commissioners at the meeting held on the 7th March, 1899, in connection with the repairs of the Company's

After some discussion it was resolved to refer the matter to the General Committee for consideration,

ON THE COUNCIL.

The following Resolution of the General Committee held on the 30th March, 1899, was confirmed: -"That having regard to the fact that the Municipal Bill is now under consideration by the Bengal Legislative Council, the Commissioners pray that in addition to the member to be elected by them to sit in the Council, the Government will be pleased to appoint another member of the Corporation to assist in the discussion of the Bill."

STATE OF ROADS IN NORTHERN TOWN. Balu Radha Chun Pal expressed strong indignation at the manner in which roads in his ward were kept. They were kept in a dis-graceful condition and everybody was com-plaining of that; but the executive took no notice of the complaints.

The Chairman promised to look into the PLAGUE IN WARD NO. 1.

Babu Bhupendra Math Bose complained of the way in which the plague officials in Ward No. 1 were carrying their duties. There was no disinfection worth the name in houses where plague broke out. The infected articles were left on the streets to be carried away by poor people, and they were no burned; and what little disinfection there was, that usually took place some days after the death of the victim. There was no satisfactory service of removing dead persons who had no one to take care of them. He mentioned one instances in which the He mentioned one instances in which the dead body of an Oria was allowed to remain in a hut for more than 24 hours and it was devoured by jackals. Babu P. N. Mullick also added some similar instances from bis own ward.

The Ghairman gave some explanation and promised to look into the matter. The rest of the business was of a formal na ure.

SIR GEORGE- ROBERTSON, who has been granted six months' special leave, will, it is understood, retire from India at the end of that period.

that period.

In the appeal case of the Bombay Municipality against F. Hogan, in regard to cycle tax, Justices Candi and Russell decided in favour of the tax being 1-vied by the Municipality.

THE appeal of the two Chapekars and Ranade against the sentence of death in the Bombay.

Poona murders was heard at the Bombay High Court on Tuesday last, before Justices Parsons and Ranade. Mr. Justice Parsons, in delivering judgment, said that the case against the elder Chapekar and R made was clear, and needed no comment. They had made full and unequivocal confessions, and pleaded guilty in the Court of Sessions. Their Lordships confirmed the sentence of death against the first two accused for double murder. In regard to Balkrishna Chapaker the case was different, and required careful consideration. In that case the Court had to see whether the prosecution had proved the presence of the accused at the murders. The only evidence in the case was the statements of the three accused persons themselves. Ourside of the statements there was not a scrap of evidence to connect the accused with the murders. The accused, in his statement to the Chief Presidency Magistrate, frankly admitted his knowledge of, and complicity in, a conspira-cy to murder Mr. Rand, but he said that he was not exercise their prerogative of mercy in his case, for he did n t actually commit the murders, and his keeping silence might be a tributconfirmed. The date of execution of Wasadew Chapekar and Mahadeo Ranade has been fixed for the 17 h instant. SUFFICIENT meterial for a three-volume novel has been furnished by a case of murder recently tried by the Sessions Judge of Mainpuri. The scene of murder is laid about 12 miles from the town of Mainpuri in a forest of Babuls—a place so very rarely visited on account of the absolute uselessness of a Babul tree and consequently so eminently fitted for the commission of such deeds. The story told by the prosecution is this. One Ratan Singh, a Zemindar with a fairly rich income of about 1,200 a year, had about 15 years ago built a temple where he used to live day and night and spent a good deal of his income on the temple. In his holy residence he was accompanied by too sisters of Kesab Singh, one of his own family who are described as "chalis" of Ratan Singh. The inmates of Ratan Singh's house, his wife, his daughter and son in-law, are said to have been watching this mode of Ratan's life, his attachment to the temple and to Kesab's sisters with an eye of jealousy. This jealousy reached its climax when Ratan, in the month of Saman last, expressed a desire to formally dedicate his Zemindari to the temple. The Batesar Fair which takes place in the month of Kartik many others had gone there. At this time Ajit Singh formed a conspiracy with Golab Singh, his friend, and Chet Singh a cousin of Ratan Singh. On a certain day at 4 P. M. Ratan Singh was decoyed from his temple to his own forest of Babuls which he wished to sell. He was assaulted by Chet Singh but managed to escape from the claws of the enemy bundle and thrown into a dry well. Here the dead body remained for 8 days when it was taken out and burnt on the very place where another man of the same family who chanced to die in the meantime had been burnt on the previous evening. The people of the village were under the impression that Ratan had gone on a pilgrimage. No cluet was found unt l a confession by Ratan's servant was recorded. This was retracted in the Court of Sessions. Mud was taken out of the well. Bones were collected from the burning place and a cloth was found containing spots of blood, The medical evidence falsified these. The Sessions Judge discredited the prosecution evidence, found no sufficient motive proved and acquitted Chet Singh who alone was on trial.

The Judicial Committee has now reversed the decision of the High Court, and sustained that of the Subordinate Judge. Lord Hobhouse who delivered the judgment, concluded as follows:—" Their Lordships do not inquire whether the views so earnestly maintained by the learned Chief Justice upon the construction of the disputed text. the construction of the disputed text might have been successfully maintained at the beginning of this century. For 80 or 90 years there has been a steady current of authority one way in all parts of India. It has been decided that the precepts condemning adop-tions such as the one made in this case are not monitory only, but are positive prohibitions, and that their effect is to make such adoptions wholly void. That has been settled in such a way and for such a length of time as to make it incompetent to a Ccurt of Justice to treat the question now as an open one."

LONDON, APRIL 18. THE SUGAR QUESTION.

MEMBERS of Parliament on both sides of the House are keenly alive and alert with regard to the Bill which has been introduced into the Viceroy's Council for the purpose of putting countervailing duties on Bounty-fed sugar. This new and not unexpected move is, as I foreshadowed in my last letter, being seized upon by Sir Howard Vincent and his protectionist friends as a stalking horse behind which they may capture a similar measure for Britain whose sugar refineries have been largely closed by the unfair opposition of Bounty-fed They have no case, for the conditions existing in India have no comparison with those of the British Sugar industries, which have only been diverted into fresh and more profitable channels, the refineries giving place to, and indeed, in many cases used by, sweetmeat makers, jam boilers, sugar bakers and biscuit manufacturers; while in India there are no refineries worth the name to be interfered with, the "protection", if it is to be so styled at all, being intended for the benefit of sugar-growers only. As I observed last week, no one who is familiar with Indian politics and economics, which differ fundamentally from those which guide us here can at all judge what is right for India in fiscal matters by what is right for Bri ain. impose a countervailing duty on Bounty-fed sugar in this country would be to fly in the face of the entire principles upon which our fiscal and commercial policy has been based for fifty years—a policy justified with regard to sugar by the fact that our people consume 80 lbs per head per annum, and that the cheap Bounty sugar have been so utilised that they actually employ in other industries thousand of more workpeople than were employed in sugar refueries in their palimest days. In lnd a, on the other hand, the principle of counter-vailing daties have been solidly established by the Excise duties on cotton manufactures and the imposition of similar duties on sugar becomes a mere question of expedience. If Lord George Hamilton can make out a clear case that Bounty-fed sugars are throwing land out of cultivation, without conferring a compensating advantage upon the poor by lowering the price of a great staple article of food, the House of Commons, as at present constituted, will let him confirm the Bill. But if it once becomes evident that the Indian Government are, however unwittingly, playing into the hands of the protectionist party on the contrary, he will have a pretty rough time before him. Already his extraordinary inaptitude and lack of Parliamentary tact has given the impression that it is so, and he has been roundly attacked as wishing to use India in the interests of British protectionsm.

The ball was opened on Friday last by a member who is almost as maladroit as the Secretary of State for India, Sir Howard

Vincent, the prophet of British protection sm. He asked the Secretary of State for India if the Government of India had with his approval determined to levy a countervailing duty on the importation of foreign bounty-fed sugar.

Lord George Hamilton teplied:—A Bill under which countervailing du ies will be imposed upon all bounty-fed sugar imported into India has, I believe, been introduced to-day, with my approval, in the Legislative Council at Calcutta.

This reply evoked vociferous cheers from the Tories, and cries of dissent from the Liberals, and at once gave the stamp to the Bill which would probably prevent is pas-sing into law. A few simple words of explanation from the Secretary of State would have put the matter bef re the House in its least objectionable form; but that would have required tact, and the Secretary hasn't got any.

He floundered still fur her in the little conversation which followed. Here it is:—

Mr. Maclean (C, Car.iff): May I ask the noble lord if this Bill has been introduced with his

the local Legislature.

Mr. Maclean: Does the noble lord remember how he interlered with that independence in the case of the Indian cotton duties? (Loud Opposition

Lord George sat silent, crimson and ashamed under this clever retort. But what on earth does the Secretary of State mean by saying in one breath that the Bill has been introduced "by my approval" and in the next, "I have no intention of interfering with the independence of the local authority?" The the independence of the local authority?" The Bill has been manufactured in the India Office, sent out to India with the imprimatur of the Secretary of State, has been introduced into a Council in which the Government possesses a permanent and docile majority, and yet Lord George vapours about its "independence." The Bill, when we see it, may be a good Bill enough or a very bad Bill, but it has about as much to do with the "independence of the local authority," as it has with the man in the moon! But perhaps Lord George has become a "HomeRuler."
It is almost needless to point out in your columns how completely Lord George Hamilton ignores the fact that Parliament is directly responsible for the Government of Ind a. Our selfgoverning colonies can and do put on protective or countervailing duties on imports without let or hindrance from Parliament. But India is quite another pair of shoes, and the bare fact of Lord George, the servant of Parliament, saying that this Bill was introduced "with his approval," at once declares and emphasises the fact. Can we conceive of a question being asked to Mr. Chamberlain bout a Bill having been introduced into the Parliament of Canada or New South Wales Parliament of Canada or New South Wales and his replying, "it has been introduced with my approval?" The responsibility of the British Parliament and the Government of India is joint and several, and the consent of Parliament will have to be secured sooner or later to this Indian Sugar Bill. If the impression gains ground that this Bill is a sop to a very influential body of supporters of the Government in this country, and not an urgent need of large and important Indian interests — in fact intended to pave the way for countervailing intended to pave the way for countervailing duties in Britain, the House of Commons is likely enough to upset it, and if Lord George were upset with it, the Tory tears would be as few as the Liberal.

moving the adjournment of the House this week, but Sir Howard Vincent has headed him off by giving notice of a motion, one of the forms of the House which prevents the adjournment on a matter of urgent public interest, by making that matter part of the order book of the House. It is now reported that the Front Opposition Bench will ask for a day for full discussion, and Lord George may find himself face to face with a very ugly situation. An important discussion is absolutely certain and Sir Henry Fowler, who seems at last to be throwing Lord George overboard, is reported to intend to put down a motion asking the Crown to withold assent to the Bill which has been brought in by the Indian Government and demand an opportunity for a dis-cussion which the Government would be unable to refuse.

On Monday Mr, Herbert Roberts very kindly gave Lord George a golden opportunity for saying a few words in explanation of the Bill, and at the same time declaring that the Cabimet had no sinister designs upon the virtue of Free Trade in this country, but again Lord George threw away his chance.

MR. HERBERT ROBERTS (W.) asked the Secretary of State for India whether, he would lay upon the table of the House a copy of the Bill intro-duced on Friday, the 10th inst, in the Legislative Council of India imposing a countervailing duty on bounty-fed sugar.

LORD G. HAMILTON.—On Tuesday last my right non, friend the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs stated, on my behalf, in reply to a question, that the responsibility for Indian legislation is thrown by the law, first, upon the Legislative Council, and secondly, upon the Secretary of State for India, on whose advice any Bill may, if he thinks fit, be disallowed, and that to lay a copy of an Indian Bill during its passage through te Council upon the table of this House would involve a transferance of responsibility to which I was not prepared to agree. It is hardly necessary for me to add that I am responsibility to the House for the addition that I am responsibility to the House for the addition that I am responsibility to the House for the addition that I am responsible to the House for the addition that I am responsible to the House for the addition that I am responsible to the House for the addition that I am responsible to the House for the addition that I am responsible to the House for the addition that I am responsible to the House for the addition that I am responsible to the House for the III am responsible to the House for the III am responsible to the House for the III am responsible to the III am respo ponsible to the House for the advice which I may give on each case, and I shall be percetly ready, if this Bill is passed, to lay a copy of it on the table and, if necessary, to justify the course which I have

Mr. Rober's intends to take an early opportunity to move a resolution to the effect that it is desirable that all Bills introduced into the Legislative Councils of India shale be laid on the table of the House for the information of members. If he gets the opportunity of debate it will be interesting to hear Lord George's explanation of how the laying of a copy of an Indian Bill during its passage through Council upon the table of the House would involve a "transfer of responsibility" from the Viceroy to the House of Commons. Lord George Hamilton gets more outward and difficult every successive week and tries the temper of the House very severely at times. I hope Mr. Maclean's somewhat savage snob may do them

The clo.ing incident of the week with regard to the sugar question is found in the following conversation which took place in the House last night between Mr. Ma lean and the leader of the House.

Mr. Maclean.—I beg to ask the First Lord of the Treasury whether, in view of the deep interest taken by members on both sides of the House in the Bill to impose a countervailing du y on sugar which has been introduced with the express authority of the Secretary of State for India, into the Calcutta Legislative Council, and also considering the novelty and importance of the commercial policy embodied in the Bill, he will give a day for its discussion before it receives the Royal assent? (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Balfour.—I fear that in the present condition of public business it would be quite impossible to afford my hon, friend the facilities he asks for. ("Oh

oh," and cheers.)

Mr. Maclean.—Then 1 beg to give notice that I will raise the question on the motion for the adjournment over Easter (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Macneill.—Will the First Lord not ask his hon, friend (Sir H. Vincent) to take of his blocking notice? No reply was given.

It is quite clear from this that the Government have no intention of giving any facilities for debate pending the passing of the Bill through the Council. We have no news of any kind from India with regard to the trend of public opinion there, and in all probability you are yourselves, at the time I write, in ignorance of the sharpness of controversy which is sucrounding the matter here. I understand on the best authority, that the Front Opposition Bench, while agreeing in the formal debate will be raised by the Front Opposition Bench and by Sir Henry Fowler who is a fierce anti-potectionist. In conversation I find the Opposition leaders think that Parliament ought to be in full possession of all the facts the precise enature and wording of the her Majesty to disallow the Bill, and Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman will demand that a day shall be given for full debate. The reticence of the Government and especially all absence of repudiation of Sir Howard Vincent and his following, has justified the belief on the part of the protectionist party that this Indian Bill if approved by Parliament it will be followed by a Bill giving s milar protection to British Sugar refiners. The lobbies yesterday and to-day were full of their emissaries and also the Cobden Club put in a strong appearance. It would be a curious Nemesis if the real author of the Press Gagging act, and the true jailor of the Natu brothers, falls from his position at the India Office by a Sugar Bill. Lord George Hamilton is now so nnpopular with his own party as well as with the Opposition, that if a Jonah is wanted by this storm-tossed administration he has no competitor for that unenviable position.

THE ENGLISH PERSS ON THE SUGAR BILL.

THE press generally treats the Bill as having mentary tactics, and the House was delighted with it. Mr. Maclean means business. He will prevent the Bill if he can, and he is a strong opponent. He had intimated his interval of Parlia-says it is making India the scene of a first experiment in revived protection, to which Britain is committing herself through her great dependency. Having admitted it The squashing of Lord George by Mr. protection wedge in this country. The "Echo' Maclean was one of the neatest bits of Parlia- says it is making India the scene of a first great dependency. Having admitted the principle there she can hardly refuse to apply it at home in the case of the West Indies.

It is the old protection fallacy of raising the price of a necessity of life for a whole community in order to encourage a single industry. We have often insisted that the principle of Free Trade is that which gives to our Empire its chief glory and moral justification. On that principle the New Sugar Bill is a serious infraction, and it is to be hoped that the House of Commons, which, inspite of Lord George Hamilton, is responsible in this case, will resist the reaction towards the old bad policy of protection.

towards the old bad policy of protection.

The Morning Leader declares that its purpose is avowedly protective, to help the produce in India. The Editor, however, goes on

"Free traders like ourselves would not approve such a measure save upon one condition—the condition namely that it was really and on substantial grounds desired by Indian public opinion (a very different thing from Anglo-Indian opinion). Such conditional approval would follow from the belief which we strongly hold that the authentic opinion of the Indian public is entitled to the same fiscal freedom as that which our colonists claim to exercise.

"We do not yet know enough about the origin and the nature of this particular measure to say whether the condition to which we refer is or is not fulfilled."

The "Stir" calls upon Parliament to keep a sharp lookout on this dangerous and re-actionary measure which has been hatched in the brain of Lord George Hamilton, not in that of the Legislative Council; and declares we are face to face with an introduction of the "protective" principle, and shall find to our cost that operations will not stop short at the Indian

The "Daily Graphic" devotes an entire page to a leader headed "A Step towards Protection and which goes very fully into all the pros and cons. It ends by asking why should the people be taxed upon an article of daily consumption, not in order to raise revenue for the purposes of Government, but in order to pui oney into the pockets of a handful of private persons who hold shares in Indian sugar refinaries."

The "Palt Mall Gazette" smells danger to the Government as there are mini terialists who do not like it and the Liberals we come it as a new weapon to be turned against the Government, though there are pienty who ustify it on grounds of expediency.

The Daily Chronicle has a long leader on the whole question and says:—

Lord George Hamilton is determined to make his tenure of the office of Secretary of State for India memorable. On every conceivable opportunity he has memorable. On every conceivable opportunity he has blundered, and when, as now, no opportunity seemed to offer, he has promptly created one. He inaugurated his term of office by breaking faith with the frontier tribes in Chitral; in his zeal "to protect the industries and interests of the, natives" (vide" Glasgow Hera d" of Saturday), he "interfered" with the Government of India at the bidding of Lancashire cotton spinners, and altered the cotton duties to suit our Manchester trade, still, of course, in the interests of the natives of ndis; at the time of the great famine he interfered again, this time with the Lord Mayor of London, to delay the flow of private benevolence towards stricken India, in the interests of the private trader, as he ingenuously put in; and now, when nothing seemed to call for his meddl-some and inept guidance, he interferes, in league with the unteachable Indian Government, in the nterests - of whom and of what?

India is being made the corpus vile of an experiment, to see how far the British people will stand ment, to see how far the British people will stand a return to protection. Is the imposition of protec-tive duties on a prime necessary of the Indian people to Le made the introduction to that duty on sugar imported into England with which the "Times" hreatened the country a few days ago? Or is it a part of that coquetting with fair trade with which the Secretary of State for the Colonies has made us familiar? After going at length in o the statistics upon wh ch the Bill professes to be based, the Editor closes with the following two paragraphs .-

reasons, or want of reasons, of the Government of India. What about the economics of the question. It is the old ignorant fallacy. Will these Tories and their friends in the Press never learn? How does it injure India if Germany and Austria tax Germans and Austrians to send good cheap sugar to the Indian ryot? Why should anyone, least of all a paternal Government, be so tenderly solicitous for the interests of the natives of India, want to interfere with so satisfactory an arrangement? We have shown that India produces coarse sugar in plenty, Front Opposition Bench, while agreeing in the main with Mr. Maclean, think it inopportune and premature to force, a debate on the Sugar Bounty Bill before Easter, and I doubt if he will persevere in his threat to raise it on the question of adjournment. Should the measure be passed by the Viceroy's Legis lative Council, there can be no doubt that a formal debate will be raised by the Front. high, the revenue for 1898-99 will far exceed the Budget estimate. The following is a fuller account of the plague disturbance in Nagpore, telegraphic intimation of which has already been sent.

On Tuesday morning intelligence was received that a dhobi's child had been attacked by plague in the native town near the Mayo Hospital, a pan of the city in which no cases had hitherto been discovered. Mr. Mayes Deputy Commissioners discovered. Mr. Mayes, Deputy Commissioner, Captain Hogg, Executive Plague Officer; Lieutenant Aimes, Executive Plague Officers, Jubbulpore, at present on leave, and Mr. Greany, Extra Assistant Commissioner on plague duty, proceeded to the spot. It was found that the dhohi child was uen stakably suffering from plague, and the dobi was informed that his child must be removed to the plague camp, and himself and his wife to the segregation camp, while his house would be dismant ed and disinfected. The dhobi fiatly refused either to go hi nself or to allow his child to be removed.

Captain Hogg, Mr. Mayes, and Lieutenant Aimes then entered the house. The former caught up the child to carry it out, while Mr. Mayes and Lieutenant Aimes were engaged in keeping off the dhobi, his wife, and brother-in-law, who struggled frantically to prevent the removal of the ckild. When Captain Hogg reached the door with the child in his arms he was greeted with a shower of stones, which seemed to come from the upper stories of t e neighbouring houses, no assailants being visible. He was lorced to deposit the child in the house again. The four gentlemen then came out and found that a crowd was gentlemen then came out and found that a crowd was assembling. Thinking it better to take no furrher steps to remove the dho i and his child just then, they stationed a Pathan policeman on guard outside the dhobi's house and started to walk quietly away. The crowd however rapidly increased, and arme with sticks and stones began to make things decidedly unpleasant. A stone narrowly missed Mr. Mayes' head. He dodged to avoid it, and it struck a policemen in the forehead and floored him. The crowd did not venture to tome to close quarters, but contented themselves with throwing stones and contented themselves with throwing stones and making loccasional salies. One man running up behind aimed a ferocious blow at Mr. Mayes with benind a med a refocious blow at Mr. Mayes with a heavy stick, which was fortunately warded off by Mr. Greany. Unluckily the rioter now come upon a heap of stones, and the volleys redoubled It was app arent that a serious riot was Leginning so Mr. Mayes mounted his horse, which was at hand, and rode away to get assistance, pursued by a shower of stones. The other three gentlemen were obliged to run, and took refuge in the Mayo Hospital. Disquieting reports presently arrived that the hospital was to be attacked in force. Two rifles were procured from the adjacent burgalow of Mayor of Mayor of the stone were procured from the adjacent bungalow of Mr. Ryana, Captain in the B. N. K. Volunteers, and the three refugees prepared to sell their lives dearly. Their position however was not assailed. It was afterwards found that an attempt actually had been nade to get out the mill hands of an adjoining mill to combine in an attack on the hospitat.

Someone had gone to the mill and asked for a half holiday for the hands on the pretext of its being

Mr. Mayes presently returned with Mr. Nedham, the Commissioner, and a detachment of the reserve police. The crowd were quickly dispersed. It was, however, reported that several of the ringleaders had gone into a house, where they had collected some swords and guns, and were arming themselves. Six picked pol.ce.nan were ordered to break into the house. They were met with a furious rush by two professional wrestlers, who proved to be the only occupants of the house. One proved to be the only occupants of the house. One was armed with a long knife which happily was wrested from him before he could do any damage. The two wrestlers fought furiously, and gave the six constables all they could do to capture them. They were eventually secured, and, with a dozen more of the principal rioters, were taken into police

Holi. Leave had by good luck been refused.

Mr. Nedham then ddresdse some words to the few Leople who remained, explaining the folly of their conduct. He also expostulated with the dhobi, and assured him that both his child and himall losses. The dhobi, however, would not be convinced, saying with loud lamentations that he had a number of Sah b's clothes in his housr which he would not be able to return—a ci cum sance perhaps just as well for the Sahibs. No s ance perhaps just as well for the Sahibs. No more resistance was offered, and the dhobi and his family were taken quietly away.

A week or two before this an incipient disturbance had been quelled by mild treatment. The husband of a woman living in the native town had left Nagpore by train, and had been taken into plague at the next station. Orders were niver left Nagpore by train, and orders were given to plague at the next station. Orders were given to te the woman and disinfect her Greany went down to carry them out, A crowd collected, and though no violence was attempted, they let it be clearly understood that they would not allow the woman to be removed. A reference was made to the administrative medical officer, and he decided that as it was not certain that the plague victim had contracted the dise ise in Nagpore, it would be sufficient to put a police guard on the house, and prevent outside communication.

It has long been known that there is a strong and widespread feeling among the poorer classes in Nagpore against the plague regulations. While the majority of the educated classes, profess to recognise and support these m asu es, it is to be feared that a certain section, through disliek of the personal inconvenience involved, to a extent foster the feeling against them among the poorer people. Rumours are rife in the bazar of the atrocities practised in plague and segre-gation camps. When the first patient was removed to gation camps. When the first patient was removed to plague camp, a crowd of over a thousand collected to see him deprived of his life, the rumour having spread that this interesting event was to take place at sunset. The crowd were but little reassured by the fact that the patient eventually recovered, as his escape from extermination by the Sahiblog was ascribed to their intervention. To the disinterested observer, it would appear that regulations log was asoribed to their intervention. To the disinterested observer it would appear that regulations involving the removal from their homes and segregation of all infected persons would be practically incapable of execution unless supported strongly by public opinion, much more so when public opinion is unanimous in recommending their evasion. One would be inclined to let the people die in their own way, and to rest satisfied with a close watch on the road, train, and water traffic to prevent as far as possible the spread of infection from prevent as far as possible the spread of infection from one place to another. Whatever the impracticabilities in the regulations, however, no doubt, can be retained of the zeal and energy of those who are rentrusted with their execution in Nagpore.—Pio. eer.

THE NATIONAL CONGRESS.

* CENTRAL COMMITTEE FOR BENGAL.

YESTERDAY, at 5-30 P. M., a meeting of the Calcutta Standing Congress Committee was held in the hall of the Indian Association at Bow Bazar, to consider the report of the Sub-Committee appointed to report on the matter of the formation and work of a Central Committee for Bengal.

Mr. Ananda Mohan Bose, who presided, said hat the Committee was appointed on the 24th the different centres for consideration and suggestions. It would then come back to them, after which, the plan of work having been settled, the Central Committee would be organized, which, it was hoped, would be the beginning of a sort of Imperi I Parlia

The meeting then proceeded to consider the scheme which was passed in the following form:

It is proposed, agreeably to the Resolution No. 21 (a) passed at the last session of the Indian National Congress, to form a Central Congress Committee, comprising within its jurisdiction the provinces under the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal and the Cnief Commissioner of Assam, for propagating the principles and furthering the Bengal and the Cnief Commissioner of Assam, for propagating the principles and furthering the objects of the Indian National Congress by, among others, the following measures: (a) Deputing agents and speakers in the m fussil from time to time; (b) publishing and widely distributing short and easy pamphlets in English and the vernaculars of the provinces on some of the more important questions in the Congress plank with a view to educate public opinion here and in England; (c) collecting authentic informations, facts, and figures on issues of importance to the people of India; (d) setting forth, through the medium of the press, the popular, the medium of the press, the populary and controverting, when necessary, wrong and one-sided, view of public questions; and lastly (e) by holding public meetings and organising Conferences in different parts of the Province and arranging to hold sessions of the Indian National Congress when required

THE long-expected visit by His Highness the Nizam to Sir Vikar-ul-Umra was paid on Sunday night at Sir Vikar's Begumpett palace. Sunday night at Sir Vikar's Begumpett palace. The great city of canvas, which stands on the brink of the Hoosain Saugor Lake, was gay with bunting and steamers, and it made the place look exceedingly bright and festive. For considerably more than a mile the road from the north of Begumpett to the Lake's border was picked out with stripes of lights arranged was picked out with strings of lights arranged in lovely devices, the six triumph al arches en in lovely devices, the six triumph al arches en route being magnificently illuminated, and the Minister's palace itself presented a fairy scene. His Highness, who was in excellent spirits and looked unusually well, drove up from his Mulkapett palace in company with Sir Vikar, who went down to Mulkapett early in the afternoon to escort His Highness. On arrival at Begumpett, the Nizam seemed delighted with his reception, and his noble host, who Mr. Ananda Mohan Bose, who presided, said hat the Committee was appointed on the 24th February last to submit a report on the matter of the formation and work of a central Committee had done with creditable punctuality. After they had considered and adopted the scheme which the Committee had prepared, it would be sent round to the different centres for consideration and suggestions. It would then come back to them, after which, the His Highness left early this morning. The event was one of striking significants, and was led with appreciation by all in Hyderabad.

MR. STEEVENS A STUDY.

SKETCHED ON THE SPOT. [BY A D--D NIGGER.]

AUTHOR of 'Pen and Ink Sketches,' 'Gup and Gos ip,' 'Letters from Fir and Near.' 'Telepathic Interviews' &c., &c.

It was at Government H use, Guind, that I first met Mr. Steevens—Mr. Steevens of the Daily Mail. I spotted him by his walk. It was slow, measured and majestic. When he trod on the ground, he thought he conferred a great boon on Mother Earth and Madras earth must have been Mother Earth and Madras earth must have been particularly gratified to receive such marks of favour from this high personage. His feet—and how puccious they? the very same that trod the ground with 'Kitchener to Khartoum'—were encased in tanned shoes. His legs were carefully wrapped in the usual 'male attire of ugliness, indeency, unsuitability and anti-hygienic stupidity which conceals all symmetry of proportion and yet imputently suggests nudity." Let me apologise at once to Mr. Steevens—Mr. Steevens of the Daily M.d. This quotation does not emanate from a nigger: it is written in no spirit of malignant Daily M. il. This quotation does not emanate from a nigger: it is written in no spirit of malignant revenge. However, as Mr. Steevens appeared in trousers, a black pair of trousers, concealing, 1 suppose, his white flesh within, 1 am unable to describe his legs or his thighs. His legs may be beautifully symmetric, splendidly proportionate. The trousers spoil their beauty. If separately exhibited, I have no doubt many would have fallen in love with them. The Madras n ggers would have clutched at them, taken them to their houses, set them up as the belongings of a superior being, decorated them with belongings of a superior being, decorated them with helongings of a superior being, decorated them with flowers, offered incense and prostrated before them! And such legs! They are the legs of a free man, not a slave, straight and not defective, and legs on which he could stand solid! By Jingo! Such pretty legs, not skin and tone, no knocking knobs for knees, not fat nor globular! A short cast of the same not fat nor globular! A short coat of the same colour as his trousers covered the upper portion of his body. Mr. Steevens of the Daily Mal, I thought, would be a giant—giant in body and mind! But no such thing! He is a very poor specimen of humanity as shoulders go. Narrow chest, narrow shoulders, it looked as if his body was chest, narrow shoulders, it looked as if his body was suddenly arrested in development. It may be that his head developed to the sacrifice of the body. And what was the state of his heart I cannot say.

And what was the state of his heart I cannot say. A heart in such a partially developed body, cannot be altogether sound and hence perhaps his heartlessness, his savage attack on Indian savages! Tough a globe-trotter, he had his white collar and black neck-tie; but it looked as if he persisted in wearing his winter suit so that he might perspire! And his face! It was well worth the study of a life-time! It had a pair of eyes—grey eyes, eyes which meant mischief, which were partially concealed by his pince n2z. It had a nose which looked as if it were the result of contempuous after. concealed by his pince n22. It had a nose which looked as if it were the result of contemptuous after-hought on the part of its creator. It had a pair of moustaches, rather slow in growth, which their proud owner was anxious to see prolonged, to judge from the frequency with which his left hand patronised, caressed, and played with them. It had a pair of cars rather long which reminded—hem!—and which looked as if thy were cut and pasted at the sides not exactly in their proper place. It had cheekbones which cauted some prominence and which gave the owner thereof a half-starved appearance. His cheeks, however, were not free from that glow, which Mr. Steveen's notice on Lo.d Curzon's face when he played the aristo rat at Calcutta. His forehead was broad and receding, indicative no doubt of the intelbroad and receding, indicative no doubt of the intellect and imagination of the author of "with Kitchener to Khartoum." His head was conical in shape and the crown of it was white, a central spo where hair refuses to grow in spite of all the efforts where hair refuses to grow in spite of all the efforts of the marvellous thirty-year old special correspondent. And Mr. Steevens walked with an in—de pen—dent air, his head-covered by a stra-what. I saw him walking, his head covered, in Government House; and I saw him sitting, his head uncovered in the Senate House. At both places, he was observing. At Government House, he talked, but only with the Governor Members of Council and observing. At Government House, he talked, but only with the Governor Members of Council and Governor's Private Secretary. He cared not for the natives, the "nigger" he only cared too bserve their naked feet, their shapeless legs, their white muslia, their broad namams, their curious turbans, their low salaaming, their meaningless chatter. But a nigger, bolder than the rest button-holed him at

"Excuse me, you are Mr. Steevens of the Daily

Steevens did not know what to think of it. He had scarce time to find out whether the

Oh! that is complimentary to us. But how do you like the country."

"W-e-II! I like it better than Northern India."

"Ah! We are pleased to here that. How long are you going to stay in Madras?"

"In Madras! w-e-II, eh! I don't know. But I shall be here for a few days."

"Mr. Steevens, don't you think, having come here as a special correspondent you ought to come in contact with the natives of the country, try to know more of them before you write, and if convenient, will you visit the Cosmopolitan club?" convenient, will you visit the Cosmopolitan club?"
"W-e-ll, eh! I shall try. eh! eh! And if convenient I shall let you know."

"Thank you. Here is my card. Please write to me. I hope you will come."
"Yes. But I must leave you, I am afraid."
And Mr. Steevens shook hands hurriedly and got away.

The object of the interview was to tackle Mr. Steevens as to what he has written about the Bengalees. But Mr. Steevens was in a hurry. He hated the contact with the natives and he struggled hated the contact with the natives and he struggled to get away. He cared and—n for the Cosmopolitan Club. But he is not as impolite in speech as he is unmannerly in his writings. His object was to steer clear of the niggers, the savages; but the savages had button-holed him. He did not like the contact. The Madras heat and the Madras Persimon water too much for his brings. the Madras Brahmin were too much for his brains. He ran home and plunged himself into a bath. "Boy! #### BALAJI NARAYAN NATU.

As the Natu brothers have been so much on As the Natu brothers have been so much an evidence ever since the news of the Jubilee night murders electrified the world of British puissance— Imperial, Colonial, and Dependent, we think we need not applogise for unearthing and presenting the following anecdotes to our readers. They relate to the late Balaji Punt Natu—the grand-father of the brace now on parole, and the first Natu of them all who ever achieved distinction. Balaji Narayan Natu left his father's land—Konkan and arrassed over the left his father's land—Konkan, and crossed over the Ghauts to Pcona for earning his livelihood. He first took service with Bhiwaji Naik—Hujare as private Karkun or clerk. Leaving him he worked for a time with Hasabnis, and afterwards with Khandarao Raste. He soon acquired a reputa ion for shrewd common-sense and capacity for doing good hard work; and coming under the notice of Elphinstone, a short while after the return of the Peishwa to Poona trom Bassein, he (Elphinstone) assistant to Poona short while after the return of the Peishwa to Poona from Bassein, he (Elphinstone) appointed him his akhbar-navis or news-reporter on a monthly remuneration of 200 Rupees. At the same time he maintained cordial and even intima'e relations with the Peishwa hinself, who oftentimes pressed him to quit Elphinstone and be a favourite palace retainer. To all of which Balaji turned a deaf ear, preferring instead to remain faithful to his employer, thus justifying the confidence and trust which Mr. Elphinstone reposed in him. Throughout those, roubleus the confidence and trust which Mr. Elphinstone reposed in him. Throughout those, roublous times he acted as Mr. Elphinstone's Dewan; and after the downfall of the Pieshwa, Elphinstone reward ed his Lieutenant's valuable services by the grant of lnam lands of the aggregate yearly revenue of Rupees twelve thousand. Owing to his position of chief adviser of the British representative he had unique opportunities of amassing a forture, the like of which mortal man is rarely favoured with. Thus he successively acquired Inam lands and villages from the Patwardhan Sardars, the Angria of Alibag, and the kings of Kolhapir and Satara, the sanads in which these were set forth being invariably endorsed by the seal and signature of his master Elphinstone for he never accepted a 1 thing, invariably endorsed by the seal and signature of his master Elphinstone for he never accepted a 1 thing, from anybody, without the sanction and approval of the Government he served. The influence and weight which he c rried in the counsels of the then Bombay Government may be accurately gauged by the signal fact of his appointment as Commissioner to enquire into the conduct of H. H. Buwa Saheb, Maharaja of Satara, who was at the end of the enquire removed to Benares, and Appa-Saheb enquiry removed to Benares, and A was installed on the Satara musnad in succession. Appa-Saheb on ascending the gadi conferred on Balaji Inam lands and villages worth twelve thousand a year. He also got considerable wealth from the Pratinidhi, the Sachiva, and others, when, mainly through his inter-cession, they o tained the privilege of adoption, failing heir in the direct line. At his death he was worth, in hard cash and jewellery, over seven y-five lakhs, in addition to the Inams which yielded him a snug yearly income of fifty th usand Rupees Besides he enjoyed for life a monthly pension of one thousand Rupees from the British Governmen II.

Two years after Balaji had prevailed on the Maharaja of Satara to allow the Sachiva the privilege of adoption, one day a Vakil or agent of the Sachiva waited on him. He politely enquired after his master's health, and asked him to tell him how his young master was progress ng in his studies. The Vakil replied saying, innocently enouge, that his master had sufficiently mastered Sanskrit learning so as to enable him to recite and expoundPauranic texts.
As we have mentioned above Balaji was very shrewd. He at once made the retort that in that case his master had learned something which insured him against starvation he could earn a seer of rice daily by reading the Purans. The Vakil was surprised at by reading the Parans. The Vakul was surprised at the remark, and he asked him what he meant by it. Balaji replied he meant exactly what he said. When further interrogated, he explained that he did not care or want to know whether the Sach va could construct he Purans. Men in high places wanted reduction suitable to their positions. places wanted education suitable to their positions. The chief of a State should be will-up in horsemanship, fencing, and the use of arms. He should be well posted in history, at least of his own country, and should also acquire other useful knowledge, which would come handy to him in after life. Instead of which he was told that the young Sachiva was lost in the maze of the Purans.

Baji Rao having decided to give batte to the English, orders were communicated to the troops to march out of Poona on a certain day. On the appointed day at 8 o'clock in the morning Balaji took his seat in his palanquin and started with the intention of going to Elphinstone and giving him information. On the way to the Residency a frie topped him asked 'Dada," (Balaji was thus addressed by his friends and acquaintances) "You are going to join the 'Dada," (Balaji was thus addressed by his friends and acquaintances) "You are going to join the English, have you taken thought about your return to Poona again?" The answer he made shows more clearly than anything we can say the kind of man he was. Here is:—"I have weighed both he was. Here is:—"I have weighed both sides in my mind and have come to the conclusion that the best course is to join the English. Bajy Rao thinks of fighting, but he has made no preparaon. He has thousands of internal enemies, and no ally or assistance from outside. He is therefore deemed to lose the battle. On the other hand the decomed to lose the battle. On the other hand, the English are well prepared and ready to meet him any day. Besides they are wise in their generation.

will quit Poona in a few days, and on his heels I will come back to Poona as safely heels I will come back to Poona as salely as I am now going out. That is my firm resolution, and I am joining the English after due and mature consideration of the pros and cons." It is a matter of history that Mr. Natu's estimate of the situation proved correct even to the minutest detail.

After the battle of Kirkee, Baji Rao Peishwa, thinking prudence the better part of valour sought in flight the safety which he could not secure in battle. After his flight the Queen of the Deccan was given over to rapine and plunder. Some of the Peishwa's officials and retainers accompanied him in his flight, while the rest sought refuge in hiding it the hilly county of Mawal. Son aftero General Smith at the head of his troops arrived at Kirkee and he requested Elphinstone to allow him to march on Poona, and plant the Union Jack over it Only he asked permission for his troops to sack the Only he asked permission for his troops to sack the city. Balaji Pu t Natu who was present on the occasion observed:—"The enemy had fled, occasion observed:—"The enemy had fled, then what good would they serve by plundering the poor d fenceless raiyats? They are all the poor d fenceless raiyats? They are all tired of the old regime in Poona, and are praying for the English to go and shield, them from further oppression." Instead of replying, the gallant General met him by a counter-question—"Dadu, will you go yourself and mount the British flag over the city?" He took up the challenge, and only asked for twenty-five sowars to aid him in the undertaking.

THE RAILWAY ASSAULT CASE.

THE man arrested on a charge of assaulting All arrested on a charge of assaulting a female passenger on the North-Western Railway was brought up for trial befora Mr. Muhammad Ahmad, Deputy Magistrate of Saharappur, on the 30th u'tim). Mr. Nigar Chand, M. A. Barrister-at-law, defended the accused. Seven witnesses for the prosecution, including the complement water armined by including the complaidant, were examined by the court inspector. The counsel for the defence reserved cross-examination.

The complainant deposed that between Nagal and Deob ind a min came into ber comp rement in which she was alone, while the train was in motion, through the window. He tied her hands and gagged her and after accomplishing his purpose left the compartment as the train was steaming into the Deoband stat on yard. He also took away from her a purse with eight rupees. She reported the matter to the guard at Deoband

Guard Mackintosh stated that at Deoband

the complainant reported the affir.

One Roz, a buscher affirmed that he and the accused travelled to gether, on the night of the occurrence in a third-class compartment from Saharanpur to Nagal where the accused got out by the foot board. He next saw the accused in an ekka at Deoband. In it three others besides the accused were sitting and they all drove together from the station to the town of Deoband. The accused said he had had some fun with a girl in the train.

Surja, another passenger in the same ekka, described the talk of the accused—that he had not given up his ti ket, that he had jumped cut of the train and that he had flirted with a girl. Karim, another witness, swore that the accused entered his compartment through the window as the train neared Deoband and requested witness to say, if questioned, that the accused had got in at Deoband.

Sub-Inspector Shahzada said the complainant identified the accused from amongst forty persons shown at Delhi. The case is proceeding.

ANOTHER case of Ghaz ism occurred at Peshawar to-night, a bindsman of the Hampshire; being shot dead in the sudder bazar, in the middle of cantonment. The murderer was pluckily caught and held by a native shop keeper unt l arrested. The in-dignation amongst Europeans is intense.

On the occasion of the first anniversary of Sir Syed Ahmed's death there was a commemorative gathering in Alighur on Monday night. About 350 old boys and others afterwards sat down to dinuer. The Hon. Thomas Raleigh, replying to the toast of the visitors, expressed his deep interest in educational movements, and his pleasure in having an opportunity of seeing the Alighur College.

RAJPUTANA this week reports 4,591 persons in receipt of famine relief, while the number of v lagers, who have emigrated up to date, is registered at 4,329. Slight rain fell at Bikanir curing the week. Agricultural operations are reported satisfactory except in Merwara, and the condition of the crops is generally good except in Ajmere-Merwara. Crops are being harvested, and the average estimated spring outturn in Ajmere is 11½ annas and in Merwara 6 annas. Fodder is scarce in nine States; prices are rising in two States, falling in two, fluctuating in two, steady elsewhere. The Bombay season report shows that slight rain feil in parts of Sind during the week. The standing crops have been injured by the high winds and rain in one taluka of Hyderabad and by rats in two talukas of B japur. American cotton has been blighted in two talukas of Dharwar, and the opiun crop has been damaged in parts of Baroda Territory. The reaping of the late crops is progressing in sixteen, and preparations for next season are being made in twelve Districts. Cotton-picking continues in parts of Gujrat and the Karnatak. Fodder is sufficient ent, and prices which has iisen in two Districts have fallen in ten. Madras reports watersupplies generally adequate, though no rain has fallen during the week. Pasture is scanty, but fodder is sufficient, and the condition of cattle is generally good. Rain is bidly wanted throughout the Punjab The Central Provinces report that the reaping of the spring crops is approaching completion in most Districts, and threshing has commenced. The planting of sugarcane is in progress in Chanda, Bhanadra, and Samb lpur. Some signs of distress are appearing in the open part of Damoh owing to want of emplyment. Water is getting scarce in parts of Mandla and Betual. Fodder is scarce in Sambalpur and in the Warora Tahsil of Chanda.

A RARE FIND.

A RARE find in the shape of a moa's egg has been made in a mining district in Central Otago. There was a fal of earth in a dredging claim, and presently the huge egg was seen floating uninjured in the water. The discovery is the more interesting from the fact that this is the second perfect moa's egg that has ever been found. The only other perfect specimen was unearthed by a man who perfect specimen was unearthed by a man who digging in the alluvial soil at the Kaikoura Moundigging in the anuvial soil at the Kaikoura Mountains in the early sixties. This egg, which was 9in. in length and 7in. in breadth was taken to England and sold for loogs. Some idea of the size of these eggs may be gleaned from the fact that a man's hat makes an excellent egg-cup for them.

THE KING OF MOUNTAINS.

THE title of Mount Everest to the Kingship of mountains is likely to be invalided ere long. Among the Thibetans a belief seems to pervail that there are some peaks further north loftier than Mount Everest and a European traveller observed some years ago from some high point on the Sikkim range which he pronounces to be higher than Mount Everest. Here is a tempting prospect for a daring climber to immortalize himself by discovering either of these two peaks.

THE TRADE IN WIVES.

EVEN IN THESE ENLIGHTENED DAYS HUSBANDS SELL THEIR "BETTER HALVES" FOR BEER. MANY people say that high society is nothing but a marriage market, and that scheming mammas sell their daughters as wives to the men who can offer the greatest wealth and finest title.

But very few people are aware that wives are literally sold to-day in England. It is not the husband, however, who buys them, but sells them to get rid of them.

get rid of them.

A very common error of the vulgar is that a man by selling his wife releases himself from the marriage contract as surely as as if he were legally divorc d.

In March, 1796, the Times announced the sale of a wife at Sheffield forsixpence. A short time afterwards the same journal calmly stated the "the price of wives has risen in Smithfield Market from half-a-guinea to three guineas and a half!" three guineas and a half !"

In 1803 a man led his wife, by a halter round her neck, into the cattle market at Sheffield, and sold her for a guinea, the purchaser leading away the woman to his home.

In 1820 a man named Brouchet hired a cattleper in the Canterbury Market, p'aced his wife in it and ultimately old her for 5s. Then wives begannet increese in value, for soonafterwards one was sold for £15. This was followed by a "slump." In 1855 a man led his wife with a halter round her waist into Derby market-place and offered her for sale, but all he could get for her was eighteen pence and a quart of

In 1875 a husband left his home and creditors in Belper for the liberty of America. The week after his flight all his goods were put up for auction to satisfy his debts. His wife claimed part of the money, and this being refused she insisted an being effered for sale as put of her husband's assets. There offered for sale as part of her husband's assets. There offered for sale as part of her husband's assets. There was on sale, however, for "Lot 29."

In even more recent days wife sales were common, and are even being effected in this present year of grace. In 1882 John Wilson a collier, of Aftreton, Derbyshire, sold his wife in a public-house for fourpence. Sheffield knife-grinders have long been noted for their transactions in the wife trade. Within quite recent times many, a Sheffield wife has been sold by her husband for a gallon of beer, which has been drunk on the spot. Some times these sales assume a more formal aspect.

In 1887, in the Shefield County-court, a man admitted that he had bought another man's wife for 5s. The agreement ran:

"At the Royal Oak, Shefield, I, Abraham Booter yd, agree to sel' my wife, Clara, to William Hall, both of Sheffield, for the sum of 5s."

Most of these discreditable "deals" escape notice but a case has come to light where a man agreed to sell his wife to a collier, and the trio, with the woman's father and mother and two family friends, assembled to arrange terms. Thirty shillings was the price finally.

agreed on, and this was the bill of sale:

"Mr.—to have my wife, Elizabeth—, free from me for ever to do as she has a mind, the day, December 11, 1893."

Four years ago, at Leads, a man charged with bigamy pleaded that as he had sold his wife for 3s. 6d. to another man, he could marry again legally Eighteen months' imprisonment was what he got and more than deserved. A police-court case in 1890 at Doncaster revealed the fact that John Tart sold his wife to Enoch Childs, on the understanding that the latter reared the vendor's four children. This is how the contract read:

"New Conisborough, March 28, 1896.—I Enoch Childs, is quite willing to take your wife and children as mine, that is your wife Ellen Tart, and Sarah, John, Henry, and Eliza.—Signed, Ellen Tart, Enoch Valentine Childs."

Lead Durham court in 1804 it transpired that a man

Enoch Valentine Childs."

In a Durham court in 1894 it transpired that a man named Shaw sold his daughter, a girl of sixteen, to a collier called Cudman The agreement was explicit:—

"I give my daughter into the care of your hands to feed and clothe her in a proper manner. If not satisfied, in one month return my daughter, same as she came to work for her, living. I give my daughter, she came to work for her living. I give my daughter, I sell you my daughter for 2s.—Yours truly, B.

Many a wife is at present sold in the Eastend of London, as well as in Yorkshire, for a quart of peer or an ounce of thick twist. It is the poor msn's method of divorce, and such is popular ignorance that there are scores of people who imagine that selling a wife is as legal a separation as a decree nisi pronounced by a bewigged and berobed jndge.

SOCIETY SCANDAL.

A PEER AS CO-RESPONDENT. . In the Divorce Court Sir Francis Jeune had before him the petition of Mr. Clement Martin Le Breton, him the petition of Mr. Clement Martin Le Breton, brother of Mr. Langtry, for a dissolution of marriage with Mrs. Alice Le Breton, on the ground of her misconduct with Lord Grantley. Respondent and co-respondent were represented by counsel, tut did not defend the suit.—Mr. Bargrave Deane, Q. C., who, with Mr. Barnard, appeared for the petitioner, said Mr. Clement Martin Le Breton was married on the 21st August, 1877, at St. Peter's Church, Eaton-square, to Miss Alice Jones. They lived together until the month of July, 1898, when the matters which gave rise to this petition They lived together until the month of July, 1898, when the matters which gave rise to this petition happened. There was one chill of the marriage, a daughter, born in 1881, and the child since this petition had been made a ward of court for portection. The co-respondent, Lord Grantley, was on the most intimate terms with Mr. and Mrs. Le Breton was the trustee under his (Lord Grantley's) marriage settlement, and they became almost like two brothers, visiting each other, going about together, and shooting together. The became almost like two brothers, visiting each other, going about together, and shooting together. The intimacy between the families lasted until the end. Mr. Le. Breton had no reason to think there was anything at all beyond the great friendship between the parties until July last year. In that month Lord Grantley took a shooting lodge in Inverness-shire, and he invited Mr. and Mrs. Le Breton and their daughter to go and stay with him there. Mr. Le daughter to go and stay with him there. Mr. L2
Breton, being a member of the Bar, was unable to leave London at that time and objected to his wife going without him, Lor Grantley being a widower. Both Mrs. Le Breton and Lord Grantwidower. Both Mrs. Le Breton and Lord Grantley were anxious that Ishe would go, and it was pointed out that Lord Grantley's sister and a governess would be there also. Eventually, though Mr.

Le Breton thought it was wrong that she should go, he gave way. Mrs. Le Breton went up with her daughter to this shooting lodge. Later Mr. Le Breton was unable to join them owing to this illness of his mother, he being, obliged to go to Jersey.
Subsequently he heard that instead of Lord Grantley's sister and the governess being at this shooting lodge there were no ladies at all in the house, except Mrs. Le Breton and her daughter.
A very great objection was at once raised by Mr. shooting lodge there were no ladies at all in the house, except Mrs. Le Breton and her daughter. A very great objection was at once raised by Mr. Le Breton, and eventually he said that without further explan tion he could not receive his wife back. Very shortly after that, in the early part of October, he got a letter from his wife, or a telegram, saying she was coming to London, and that she was going to the St. Pancras Hotel, Mr. Le Breton made inqu'ries, but found that she had not gone there. He then employed a detective to trace her, and found that she and Lord Grantley had come to London together, and had gone first to the First Avenue Hotel in the name of Mr. and Mrs. Gray from there to the Hotel Victoria, and thence the lady went to the Hotel Cecil. She arrived at the Hotel Cecil on October 5, and had two rooms, a bed-room and a sitting-room. Lord Grantley arrived from the Hotel Victoria on the 6 h, and had rooms in the south block of the Cecil—the bachelor's quarters. The two, however, were together throughout practically the whole of October. They had their meals together and Lord Grantley was constantly alone with her, and on one occasion the detective saw them both go into the lady's room. The respondent and co-respondent were represented by counsel, but they had intimated that they were unable to resist the charge of misconduct. The petitioner, examined by Mr. Barnard, generally corroborated counsel's statement,—Henry Martin Wright, chief reception clerk at the Hotel Cecil, also gave evidence, and the depositions of a waiter at the Hotel Cecil, and took a room on the same floor as her rooms were in order to watch her. Witness had seen Lord Grantley and the respondent frequently together, and on two occasions saw them go into the respondent's room—A decree misi with costs, with the of custodythe child, was pronounced.

PRIVATE PATRICK JOYCV, of the Buffs (East Kent) Regiment, who a while back caused injury to some natives at Kamptee with a razor, has been tried by district court-martial at Nagpur. The court was composed of Maj r Raven-hill, of the Buffs, President, and Captain Hawkes, 22nd Madras Native Infantry, with some subaltern officers as members. The prisoner was defended by Mr. J. C. Fraser, barrister-at-law. The decision of the Court has not yet been made public.

A FEW day since a fire broke out in the premises of the Phulgaon Spinn ng Weaving premises of the Phulgaon Spinn ng Weaving and Manufacturing Company, at Nagpur, which resulted in the destruction of a considerable quantity of cotton. The Kappas stocks contained about 500 khandies, while something li es 900 b iles were stored in a godown, and some 150 more bales behind the latter, and of all this fully half was destroyed. A female labourer and a broker, who were assisting at the extinguishing of the fire, were severely injured by the fall of a burning roof, and are at present under treatment in the mill dispensary. The loss is roughly estimated at Rs. 75,000, which is said to be fully covered by insurance. by insurance.

THE Government of Madras has been THE Government of Madras has been issuing orders in favour of type-written correse pondence, and an extensive use of thesmachines is anticipated by English firms patrolized by the India Office. Apropos of this impending change, one Mr. Randolph W. Savage, of New York, gives currency to a discovery he has made with a view to warn enthusiastic typists against a possible danger. He thinks that with the introduction of typewriting machines comes the use of aniline inks, which are believed to be volatie in character which are believed to be volatie in character-and utterly unsuited for the conservation of public records. "Indeed," he says there are records in that (office of Register—New York) to-day type-written only nine months ago which from constant use and handling are becoming blurred and indistinct and will becsme indecipherable after a few years." We invite the attention of the Superintendent of Government Stationery, Madras, to this drawback that he might provide against the possible contingency of subjecting the Government to enormous expense to rectify an error due, to the importa-tion of aniline inks.—Hindu.
