WHY THE RESOLUTION WAS MADE "CUMBEROUS."

THE "Englishman" contends that Sir Andrew Fraser's Resolution on the abolition

"In furure no candidate will be administed to the service unless he secures the personal approval of the Lieutenant-Governor or the omicials under him." And this being the case, our contemporary contends, the idea might have been condensed in a single sentence.

This is quite true. But our contemporary forgets that language is given to man, not only for the purpose of expressing his ideas, but also of concealing his thoughts. Who knows that it is the deliberate intention of the Government not to express itself an a puthy sentence and give prominence to its real idea? Who knows that sell on a pithy sentence and give promi-mence to its real idea? Who knows that the object of the Government is to conceau its real intention in the midst of a cloud of words, and menne the Resolution was made deliberately cumberous to serve a pur-

A Resolution like this might have passed uncharlenged fifty years ago, when there was no newspaper in India, and when very few people understood English. But now the Government has to weigh its words caretully before giving utterance to them, knowing very well that they will be examined critically by millions of intelligent men. The Government was fully conscious of this and ashamed to say in distinct language that, under the present system, merit mas no chance, but the sycophant is the master of the situation.

Let us now see how this new policy is likely to work in practice. Mr. John, say, is the Commissioner of the Patna Division, and a well-qualified Bengali youth of Burd wan applies to him for an appointment. Mr. John replies that, as the British Government is just and has to take into consideratoon the claims of both advanced and backward provinces in India, he must not aspire for any post in Behar, but try to secure one in his own Division. If that is the rule, Mr. John, who is a man of Argyllshire, has no place in India. Still he is here on poinal grounds. The Bengalee Babu has, however, no place in Benar, because, he was to say, he is ousted from Behar on geographical considerations. Hie would have, however, every, right to be in Behar if be was a native of Argyllshire!

(The Queen's Proclamation provides that merit ought to be the sole test in making But ment to be the sole test in mainly, selections for Government offices in India. But ment is ignored under Sir Andrew's new scheme; and the talented Bengali Babu is put aside for a less qualified man of a backward province, because, the post for which he applies happens to be in that province.

Let us now see what complications new arrangement is likely to create. A graduate of the University applies for a post to Mr. District Magistrate James. He asked by the Magistrate who he is. He says, he is an M.A. with a brilliant University career. "That may be," says Mr. James impatiently, "but who are you,—I mean who and what was your father, and what was his occupation?" The applicant replies that his occupation?' The applicant replies that his father was a distinguished man and respected by his countrymen; that he was the Editor of the 'Indian News' and did good service to the country.

loses temper. Says he: "Did not your father abuse the Government? And you come to solicit employment under the ie Government? How impudent of your Your so-called University education has not taught you decency," And the son of the Editor is expelled with ignominy.

Next comes another candidate. He is asked his qualifications. He says he is only an ordinary B.A., but he is a son of Babu A.B. Roy Bahado or, who was trusted by the Government. Mr. James countenance immediately beams with delight. "Are you a son of A.B., trust loyal servant of the Government," says, he. "Certainly you have good claims; your name is admitted."

Another, comes forward. He is also a son or comes forward. He is also a son Another comes forward. He is also a son of a Gryernment servant, well known to the arathorities for his ardent loyalty. This your g man, however, appears before the Preser ce with his shoes on, and assumes a bearing which is rather independent. His very sight gives offence to the Magistrate. Neither is Mr. James mollified by his salams, for he nods in a manner which shews that he has not lost all he self-respect. And the poor felnot lost all his self-respect. And the poor fellow's doom is sealed. He is given a long lecture and told that he is an unworthy son of a worthy father and is utterly unfit to serve the Government. His place is in a newspaper office.

Then comes another. After having failed in examination several times, he at last secured a B.A. degree. But then he is a son of a loyal servant of Government. And hi chief merit is that he salams gracefully. He salams with both hands; he stands with foldsalams with both hands; he stands with folded hands before Presence; he speaks on bended knees and calls Mr. James his own "father and mother" and also his father's "father and mother." What can Mr. James do? He has no option but to surrender; fo who can resist graceful salams and su h humble and loyal solicitations?

In the above we have no doubt drawn the real situation, no doubt with henour-the exceptions here and there. The Government was fully aware of it; hence it had to make the Resolution cumberous, vague and unreadable. Under the system introduced by Sir A. Fraser, pure merit has no chance; inde-pendence is fatal; and the path has been well paved for sycophants and worthless sons of loyal" servants of the Government to enter

AGRICULTURE AND RYOTS.

The new Department of Commerce, with a frightly-paid special member to guide it, affairs, has been heralded with the same trumpets as was done in the case of the Agriculture Department in the eighties. And, we all know, the latter exists only for show, though it costs a good deal of money. We trust, the Commercial Department, which will be a heavy burden upon the tax-payers, will show better results. As regards agriculture, let us hope the recent Conference of the European merchants in Calcutta will result, in THE new Department of Commerce, with pean merchants in Calcutta will result in giving an impetus in the direction of the development of the agricultural resources of India.

and mere waste of energy; that the sole object of the Resolution is to announce that at the hands on the State? It is shows that the service unless he servi Now is it not a wonder that, though the ionary arrangements.

But Englishmen are here not to stamp out crime. That task may very well be left to the people themselves. The mission of the English rulers of thus country is far nobler. It is to make the people more manly, more

It is to make the people more manly, more prosperous, more happy. Their mission is a failure if they fail in this duty.

Now instead of a Police stanton, there ought to be an agricultural school with a farm attached to it in every ten miles. Instead of frittering away their energies in stamping out crime, the Magistrates ought to devote their whole time to the improvement of the condition of the people. Instead of jails, we ought to have graneries in every sub-division, filled with grains, seeds, all modern agricul-tural implements, and well-bred cattle.

Do the local authorities know how the poor ryots are robbed of their grains? No somer is the harvest collected than the merchants purchase the grain at the cheapest rate. The immediate necessity of the peasants is so pressing that they have to sell their produce sometimes at half the rate. This done, they find that they have to purchase grain again at the end of the year to feed themselves at much higher races. Here as a matter m which the authorities ought to be able to help the ryots with their advice.

But the Government here is mainly for exercising authority. That is the chief function of the officials. And the result is disastrous -so d sastrous, indeed, that it has now become difficult to make the Government see what its real duties are. The exercise of authority is so pleasing that the rulers bewitched by the process, so that they are led to forget their true interests and real

It is a pleasure to read the reports of the Agricultural Department in America. They are State papers worthy of the great country from which they are issued. They show that the most earnest thought is given to the subject of agriculture.

But compare the American reports those issued here. We do not blame the Agricultural Department at all for its lifeless publications. The Department exists in name; and this is very well known to those who are in charge of it. Necessarily the reviews of the Government upon the works of this Department are feeble and heartless. The Department writes its reports in the belief that none will read them, and the Government bases its comments upon them in the same spirit.

Another suggestion of Mr. Hamilton is excellent. He says that, as "famines now-redays are more money famines than food famines, it would perhaps be more in accord with the ostensible object of Famine Insurance Fund if are starving for want of cheap money rather than use it for the avoidance of debt; and in any case a debt which yields more than it costs is not a thing to be avoided. Exactly so. The so-called tuccavi advances are made to the ryots so rarely and in such small sums that they do not benefit the agriculturists in any appreciable degree. But if the major portion of the famine taxes, which bring ome crore and fifty lakhs of Rupees annually to the coffers of the Government, were applied to the purchase of cattle, m-plements, and seeds for the peasants, that will really do them solid good and add to their prosperity.

SIR HENRY COTTON IN INDIA.

SPEECH, it is said, was given to man, botto to express and conceal his thoughts. Surely the measure of tree speech that we enjoy must be used with very great caution. For we may sometimes injure a good cause by too much frankness. We did a good deal or mischier to Mr. Tilak by taking his side argently. The more the press defended and sympathiased with him, the more his persecuors resolved to follow ham with unresenting agor. We aught to have, from this point or view, conceared our real feelings for him. the trankest of the rulers of Bengal was Sir George Campbell. The Police, he declared in official documents, was the "watch dog of the Government" and must be supported at any cost. When, therefore, Issur Napit of Howran died of police torvare, and the police officer chaefly responsible for this brutal act was sentenced to a long term of imprisonment, sur George stepped in and test no scrupic in securing has release by exercising the prerogative of mercy vested in him.

Another equally frank administrator was Sir Charles Elliott. He gave out what he meant, and did not know how and when to conceal has shoughts. Mr. Magistrate, H. A. D. Phillips, now in the other world, could not move, as it were, without committing an illegal, unjust, or indiscreet act, and so the newspapers had much to say of him. Sir Charles Elmott loved to defend his subordinates and profoundly hated the indian press. rinding Mr. Phillips so assailed by the Indian press, and finding also that the charges brought against him were generally true and indetensible, he declared, with great frankness, that he would never hold his subordiness, that nate responsible for his actions; and that the more the Indian press meddled with him, the greater it would be his duty to ignore its attack and offer him protection.

Its attack and offer him protection.

Is it possible that the same feeling is actuating our good ruler, Sir A. Fraser, in dealing with the newspaper criticism on the conduct of Mr. Carey of Hoppiny? We say so, because, we have nothing before us to feel that this official had ever been seriously that this official had ever been seriously taxed by his superiors for his manifold indiscretions. But that is a separate matter.

Now a word or two about our illustrious friend, Sir H. Cotton. He is a marked man

One of the enthusiasts in the cause of agricultural improvement is Mr. D. M. Hamilton, lately a member of the Supreme Council. He made a long speech at the Conference, and though we cannot see our way to agree with all he said, yet many of his suggestions are emimently good and practical. If or instance, he suggested "the establishment of agricultural instructes, as soon as possible, in various districts of Bengal and other Province."

Now is it not a wonder that, though the stairs," then perhaps he might have become

So his presence in our midst is possibly So his presence in our midst is possibly a cause of much uneasiness among the members of "the splendid service" to which he belonged. There is also a desire among many,—his superiors, equals, or inferiors,—to ignore, and, if possible to slight him, though of course they cannot openly express it or give effect to it. We hear on a reliable authority that the dinner given to Sir Henry by Sir Andrew Fraser was not to the liking of several members of the service.

We all know, with what warmth, was the Congress welcomed, in the beginning, to Lord Dufferin. We also know how subs quently was this kindly feeling converted into one of bitter hostility towards the organization. This change of attitude was due to one fact, namely, the condemnation of the greatest work of his life by the edu-of the greatest work of his rice of the greatest work of his rate of the soil.

The Viceroys in India have no doubt to earn the good feelings of the people of this country. But they are more vitally interested in securing the good opinion of their countrymen; for, the Indians can do own countrymen; for, the Indians can do them no good or harm, but Englishmen can. If Lord Dufferin had introduced any great reform in India, the incident would have scarcely excited the notice of the English people at home, his masters. But he was the author of one work which placed him in the foremost rank of English patriots, empire-builders and empire-makers

It was he who conquered Burmah for England at India's cost. If Clive conquered Bengal, Coote the Mahrarttas, Napier the Sindh, Gough the Punjab, Lord Dufferin subjugated Burmah subjugated Burmah for England. Lord Lytton tried to annex Central Asia to the British empire, but he failed. When this great act of Lord Dufferin was violently condemned by the Indian press, his feelings regarding the Indians were embittered and he dealt a severe blow to the Congress.
The greatest work of Lord Curzon is the invasion of Thibet. This is his only work invasion of Thibet. This is his only work which has brought his administration directly to the notice of his countrymen. The latter care very little for his partition scheme, University scheme, and so forth. But the Thibet expedition is a big slap in the face of Russia, and has put him in the same rank with the other great conquerors who founded this Asiatic Empire for England.

It is Sir H. Cotton, however, who raised a discordant note and has done all he can a discordant note, and has done all he can to undervalue this great work of His Lordto undervalue this great work of His Lordship. If there is a party, and an influential party, in England, who condemn the Thibet policy of Lord Curzon, it was created by Sir H. Cotton. It was he who has made a large section of the English community to condemn the expedition against Thibet.

And this Sir H. Cotton was made the President of the Bombay Congress! There was not much love lost between the Congress and Lord Curzon, and Sir Henry's presiding at its meetings has certainly not improved at its meetings has certainly not improved the situation. No wonder, therefore, His Excellency declined the offer of Sir Henry to receive from him directly the Congress resolutions, and invited him to a dinner ins tead! And is it not very natural he should to so? Why should he accept the resolutions from the hands of his great opponent who has condemned the greatest work of his life! Of course Lord Curzon is generous and highminded enough to be ab It is very unlikely that anything presented to him by Sir Henry will be accepted by him with special thankfulness and favour.

In the same manner, attempts were made to make it appear that Sir H. Cotton was taking a leading part in this agitation against the partition question. To do it is to excite the Government to go against us We already know that, the Government is undecided about this question; to make it appear that Sir H. Cotton is at the bottom or this agitation, or has a principal or any hand in the matter, is to lead the Government, which is now undecided, to assume a decided, we mean, an aggressive and determined attitude towards this measure. We are extremely glad to find that better counsels prevailed, and no such attempt was made at tine "Conterence" of Wednesday last, though a certain newspaper was most an-Mous to make Sir Henry the leader of the

When Mr. Charles Braucklaugh was at Bombay, lattempts were made to humiliate and thwart him. But he was a member of Parliament and had a following in the House. Indeed, Lord Cross feared him aimost as much as he did Mr. Gladstone. But Sir Henry is not backed by any such force except the good-will of the Indians, which, however, has no value in the eyes of the rulers of the land.

Day before yesterday's Town Hall meeting showed what a firm hold Sur Henry Cotton people of this country. The vast majority of the audience had permans never seen his race. Yet nundreds, nay thousands, deemed at their duty to come forward and express their sensor gratitude to him. Well may the guest or me evening be proud of the honour done to h.m, on Tuesday last, specially in consequence or its unique character. The Government nonours people with titles of honour, but they carry no souls with them. The honour done to bir Henry, however, emanated from the depths of the Jaeans of thousands, and was thus a living thing. And why was Sir Heary honoured in this extraordinary manner? Even he humself was staggered at the nature of the demonstration. What have I done to deserve such an honour an your hands?" said he, in surprised tone, in ms reply. As a metter of fact, he was only a Chief Secretary of the Bengal Government and could not thus do much. On the other hand, he was bound to carry the mandates of his Ohief, and was now and then an unconscious or unwilling instrument of mischief to the country. All the same, his heart was with us. He mixed freely with the educated have often noticed," said he, "that the people of India are over-whelming in their grantude to those English officials who have shown them kindness and sympathy." That is our strength, and that is our weakness also. Small mercies will make us slaves of those who will care to distribute them to us. How easy it is to satisfy the people of this country and evoke the feeling of gratitude in them! And yet, nowhere perhaps is the estrangement between the ruled and the rulers so wide as in this country. Is thus not a wonderful phenomenon? Gnatitude is divine feeling, and the more is it cultivated the better is the propect of the person or persons with cultivated the person or persons with the person of the person or persons with the person or persons with the person of the person or persons with the person or persons with the person of the person or persons with the person or persons with the person of the person or persons with the person of persons who cultivate it, if not in this world, but in the other. From this point of view, our "over-whelming gratitude" is a source of strength to us. At the same time, the easy and cheap way by which our grateful feelings can be called forth is our great weakness. We are apt to make much of the small mercies that are now and then scattered to us by men in authority. A few mere kind words from a Lieutenant-Governor will so overwhelm many of us with gratitude as to make us surrender our independence to him. How many good men and true we have lost in this way! There are few Bengalees, if in this way! There are few Bengalees, is any, who will venture to contradict a state ment, however unreasonable, coming from an English friend, say, like Sir Henry Cotton In short, this over-whelming sense of gratitude in us sometimes also means want of backbone and manliness on our part. Perhaps it is for this reason that many officials in this country do not attach much importance to our outburst of grateful feelings, and thus keep themselves aloof from us.

Is we reproduce the following from the "Indian Daily News," it is of course not for its fine sentaments but the genuine humour it contains. It will be remembered that, Sir Henry Cotton as President of the Bombay Congress wrote to the Viceroy to permit him to hand over the Congress resolutions. personally to His Excellency; and Lord Cur-zon, instead of acceding to this request, in-vited him to a dinner. And the "Daily News" thus seeks to eke out some amuse-ment at the expense of Sir Henry and the Congress people:—
"A correspondent sends the following fable, which he says brings La Fontlaine up which he says brings La Fontaine up to date:—'Once upon a time the mice flog' being much annoyed at the goings on of the cat held a Congress at which they passed resolutions annually to bell the cat. No mouse, however, could be found willing to undertake the business. At last someone suggested that they should call in a celebrated rat who, belonging to a more rowerful ted rat who, belonging to a more powerful order of vertebrates, would them. At the next annual meeting the celebrated rat was accordingly voted to the chair, and the usual resolution was passed; the Chairman undertaking that he would see to the matter himself. Amid loud cries of "shabash," the Chairman proceeded to the Capital, and there and then requested an interview with the cat for the purpose able. The cat, however, who was aware of the object of his visit, replied that he was unable, at the moment, to discuss the subject of bells, but that on account of the agree-able gastronomical relations which had always subsisted between himself and the rat in meeting him. The rat on getting this letter was extremely puzzled. 'It is couched,' he said, "in irritatingly ambiguous language and there are moments when it seems to me that I can hear him licking his lips over my mangled remains. Ami ki korbo, Mohashoy," he said turning to his trusted chief delegate, "shall I go?" "I should not go," said the chief delegate, "if I were you. A life like yours is too precious to the cause of progress.

He would probably partition you, which God forbid! I myself should put the bell parcel with a brick and send it belied 'Urdu manuscripts.' to pay. By 9 a.m. the to pay. By 9 a.m. the aing we shall at all evants have secured great moral victual to me" said the rat, and he sent his private secretary for a brick. "I am sorry I must leave you now," he added, "I have to go and see the Dalai Lama who has sent to ask my assistance and advice." Moral—Before you create an idol, see carefully that able to carry the straw stuffing."

The 'Indian Daily News' has drawn his moral; let us draw our own. Now "the ce-lebrated rat" in this case is no rat at all, but he is a cat, and comes from the same stock to which our contemporary's cat belongs. But "the celebrated rat," pained at the havoc committed upon the race of rats by his powerful colleagues, left them and cast his lot with the former to protect them, as far as he could, from the injustice of his own species. By thus joining with the weak and oppressed rats, he of course lost his caste with his own people. They derided him; they called him a "rat"; they would hiss and hoot him if they could. But then he was a firm believer in certain principles which was a firm believer in certain principles which are no doubt considered "sickly" by the majority of the cats, but which, in his opinion, are divine in their character. One of them is that there can be no higher duty for a cat or a rat, or even a bat, than to uphold the cause of the weak against the strong, when the former are in the right. Influenced by such a sentiment, "the cele-brated rat" risked the displeasure of the big cat, whose subordinate he was by upholding the cause of the weakest class of rats called coolies, and thereby lost his chance of ever occupying the position of the ruler of the Province inhabited by the rats. Now which of the two is really great and noble—a cat vho "licks his lips over the mangled remains" of the rats—to quote the words of our contemporary—or his colleague who, making immense personal sacrifices, himself becomes a rat, in order to save the rat species?

THE new Commissioner of the Burdwan Division, Mr. E. H. C. Walsh, seems to be cious or unwilling instrument of mischief to the country. All the same, his heart was with us. He mixed freely with the educated classes and came to love and esteem them. In shart, he made us feel that, he was one of us; that he would stand by us in our prosperity and adversity; and that, he would share with us in our joys and sorrows. Hence he succeeded in winning the hearts of the nation, well-to-do people within his jurisdiction, for subscriptions in aid of the local Lady Duffering Hospital, and in which not lication vile epithets were applied to the parties appealed to for money. The Commissioner, we hear, was so ashamed of the conduct of the Magustrate that he sent round one of his men to people insulted by Mr. Carey to express his regret to them for the indiscrition of his subordinate. This one fact shows that Mr. Walsh is above the ordinary run of Civilians. May we inquire of His Honour the Lieute May we inquire of His Honour the Lieute-nant-Governor, how long does he intend to keep Mr. Carey at Hooghli as Magistrate, to the annoyance of the people and the embar-rassment of the Government? We may guarantee that, no Magistrate has given the Lieutenant-Governor so much trouble or put-him into such an embaricissing position as Mr. Carey has done. All the same, he seems to be going to become a nermanent be going to become a permanent fixture at Hooghii. This will show how helpless are the rulers of Provinces when a subordinate of theirs, belonging to the Civil Service, is a syward and defiant.

Gun Gaya correspondent has furnished us the the particulars of "one of the latest freaks of Mr. Forrester" in his capacity as difficiating District Magistrate of Gaya. It refers to the criminal prosecution, or rather persecution, of one Miss Abbasi, her brother Mahabat, and a few others, on a most frivolous charge of kidnapping certain girls for ammoral purposes. There are two stages of the case. A full history of the case at the first stage was published in the "Patrika" long time ago, and we shall briefly recapitulate it to enable the reader to understand the situation clearly. On certain information having been lodged in the thanna, Manabat was brought before the Police and accused of committing a row. He admitted the offence but said that the row was caused by his demanding rents of a house from some people. demanding rents of a house from some people who had fled away to Lucknow for fear criminal prosecution. A regular complaint was then filed against these people who had nun away to Lucknow and a warrant was issued for their arrest. Some males and females belonging to the party were brought down to Gya under arrest from Luckhow. The case was tried by the Jeint Magistrate of Gya. The sbory of the defence was, that Mahabat and his sister had tried to win over the female defendants for imposed and failing defendants for immoral purposes, and fadin in their efforts had brought a charge of rio against them in order to coverce them through the help of the Court.

THE Joint Magistrate believed defence story and acquitted the accused. He next convicted Mahabat and sentenced him to imprisonment, which on appeal, was commuted into a fine. The matter should have stopped there. But Inspector Rees of the Gaya Police became Inspector Rees of the Gaya Police fired with the zeal of protecting suffering humanity and took up the cause of the dancing girls concerned in the above case, and so there was a further development. One day, he surrounded the house of Abbasi and her brother with a 'posse' of constables and arrested them. The accused did not know what offence they had committed, neither could their pleader enlighten them on the point. In great distress, they applied for bail, but Mr. Forrester refused to grant it. They then moved the Sessions Judge. When the pleader for the accused related the facts the pleader for the accused related the facts of the case, there was a roar of laughter in the Court, for, it transpired that the girls were not kidnapped at all by the accused but arrested under a warrant and brought to Gaya under the orders of a Court!

Judge at once released them on bail.

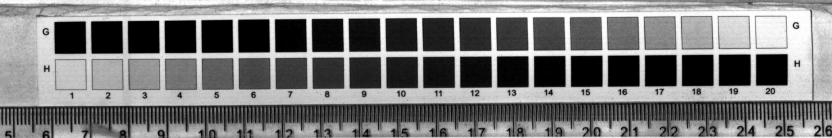

Mr. Forrester however was much impressed with the gravity of their offence, that he kept the case in his own file and at last unusual referring to the High Court for quasing the commitment. The Honble Judge however refused to interfere at that Judge however refused to interfere at that my stage. Thus the accused had to undergo all the hardships of a criminal trial, which resulted in their ultimate acquittal. The Judge was so much impressed with the frivolous character of the prosecution that he passed his order of acquittal without cross-examining witnesses. All is well that ends well. But, pray, ought not somebody to be held responsible for the mental agony, physical trouble, not to speak of unnecessary expenses, to which the accused were subjected during the lengthy course of the trial before the lower Court and the Court of Sessions?

A CORRESPONDENT Writes to us from Krishnaghur, complaining of the great hardship to what sustois, pleaders &c., are subjected, owing to Mr. McBlane not attending his court now and then. Says our correspondent: -

He did not come to court on the 6th and 7th urtimo, as he had his right thumb injured. It is not known how he came by this acci-Again on the 12th alkimo, he did not also attend. The jurors, pleaders and the accused were kept in waiting till 5 p.m., Mr. McBiaine not thanking it necessary to intimate to them that he would not attend his court." It is the old story over again. Graver charges than the above were preferred against him, but, neither the High Court nor the Government of Bengal took any notice of them. So like Mr. Carey, Mr. McBlaine also threatens to be a permanent fixture upon the people of Krishnaghur.

WE congratulate the people of the Central Provinces on the appointment of Mr. J. O. Miller as their Chief Commissioner. Lord Curzon has shown real appreciation of merit by conferring this high appointment upon this official. It will be remembered that Mr. Miller served the Vicery as him Private Secretary after the retirement of Sir Walter Lawrence. In this way he came in constant contact with His Excellency, and the latter was thus able to know him and the latter was thus able to know him intimately. Mr. Miller is perhaps not a pushing officer; but he is able, industrious, kind, and sympathetic. We dare say he will prove a blessing to the people of the Central Provinces. This Province, though backward, has always been lucky in its Chief Commissioners. Indeed, almost all of them left a sweet fragrance behind them, them left a sweet fragrance behald unem, thereby enabling the people to remember their names gratefully. Many of these good Chief Commissioners subsequently became the Lieutenant-Governors or Bengal; but, such is our "nasib" (lot), that every one of them, except Sir Richard Temple, proved a ruler of a very different kind. Sir Richard Central Provinces who got the Lieutenant-Governorship of Bengal, and he gave us an elective system by which the administration of the Calcutta Municipality was practically placed in the hands of the representatives of the rate-payers. Sir John Woodburn was the last of the Chief Commissioners who was appointed as Lieutenant-Governor of this Province, and one of his main works was to kmock this excellent system on the head and officialize the Calcutta Corporation thoroughly! Sir Andrew Fraser, to our misfortune, has not begun well. Let us trust, however, that, in the end he will show his acts that he is as much a benefactor of the people of Bengal as he was of those of the Central Provinces. As for Mr. Miller, his turn is to occupy the gadi of Belvedere when Sir Andrew vacates it.

WE call the following from the sayings of

"Do I believe in butting a stop to swearing? No, I don't, if you prevent the working man from swearing, and thus relieving his feelings what will happen? Why, he will go home and ourder his family."—Grand Shaw." ernard Shaw."

"The same kind and measure of thought

The same kind and measure of thought and care that are now given to a case of disease should be given to a case of crime."

—"Sir Robert Anderson."

Bernard Shaw says that, if the working man is not permitted to swear, he will go home and murder his wife or son. It is this trait in human character that led the British Government to grant freedom of speech to the natives of India. The anarchists, the bloody socialists, and other dangerous characters have no position here, because of the freedom of the press. The people have the permission to swear and relieve their surcharged hearts, and thus they do not take to objectionable methods for the purpose of obtaining redress.

WHAT Robert Anderson says is that men have not been able, in spite of their boasted civilization, to outgrow their savage nature. Because they have the power, therefore, they hang a man, who had, from uncontrollable impulse, killed a fellow-being, or imprison another, because he had inherited the passion from his parents who were thieves. Of course dreadful is the position of a man who finds nimself in the position of an accused before Judge with a passion for conviction and the position of the Judge who, by indulgence in this passion, has brutalized his soul. Such a Judge converts himself into a beast of crey, though originally he was a man, made after the image of God.

THE "Statesman," we find, has a fling at s in an article on Sir Andrew Fraser's new cheme for the recruitment of the members of the Province in its issue of the 10th insant. One of our contemporary's peculiar haracteristics is that, if he condemns a thing he must also say a few words in favour out with the help of his oft-used expressions, "at the same time." In the present case he points out a grave defect in Sir Andrew's scheme, namely that, it is not the case that, in the distribution of appointments under the present rules, "an Honours degree s to be regarded as constituting a higher degree. Having thus deapproved of the scheme, he brings his "at the same time" into requisition for the purpose of condemning us and showing that the scheme is not as bad is represented to be. Says our contem-

"At he same time, it is a misrepresentation to say, as one of our Indian contemporaries lately did, that "if there were two candidates, one an ordinary B.A., and another with an Honours agree, the former should pe preferred in a backward province."

Whether the misrepresentation is ours or n the part of the Statesmal," we shall preently see. But may we enquire of contemporary, why does not be call us by name, instead of an Indian contemporary? As the meaning of the "Amrita Bazar Put-As the meaning of the Amrita bazat of ricka" is a paper which is a market of nectar," that is to say, which distributes sweetness and ambrosia, surely he would not have lost but gained by publishing our name in his columns, for, it might have possibly roudered his pages more treatment than they rendered his pages more fragrant than they are. Now to the point. Has our contemporary quoted us correctly? This is what he makes us say: es us say:

"If there were two candidates, one an orlinary B.A., and another with an Honours ree, the former should be preferred backward Province."

Now is not the above quite meaningless? We have written so many articles on subject that it was with some difficulty that we could lay our hands on the pass ge which as been quoted by the writer in the "States an" in a distorted form, no doubt to suit is purpose. This is what we wrote in our of December 30:-

"Sir A. Fraser lays down that 'an Honours legree shall not be insisted on, either throughout the province or, in any part of the prorine at the present time, because there are parts of the proed if an Honours degree were insisted on.'
That is to say, according to the scheme of if there were two candidates, one an ordinary B.A., and another with an Honours degree, the former should be pre-ferred if he belonged to a backward community!" The words italic;sed above have been clean emitted by our contemporary. Any one can now see who misrepresented, we or "Statesman." First of all, our contemporary misquoted us and sought to make us look foolish; and secondly, the only construction that can be put upon the words of Sir Andrew, quoted above from his Resolution, is the one given by us, namely, that an ordinary B.A. in a backward province has greater chance in securing an appointment than an Honours degree man in an advanced Ir goes without saying that the speech of Sir Henry Cotton on the question of the par-tition of Bengal at last Wednesday's so-called rence-for, it was no Conference but a regular public meeting—was a splendid one It is of special value to us for a particular reason. He supported every statement in the memorial, adopted at the Town Hall meeting of March last. Speaking of this document, "A few months ago a great meet ing was held in this hall in which a memorial I hold up in my hand, well-reasoned forcible, was prepared protesting against all the schemes." Now when Sir Henry approves the schemes." Now when Sir Henry approves of (this memorial, it is, we submit, entitled to the best consideration of the Government; for, the Viceroy is no doubt high-minded enough to concede that, if any official can speak on this subject with authority to is the late Chief Commissioner of Assam, who also served thirty years in the Bengal Secretariat and had thus opportunities of knowing the views of more than half-a-dozen Lieutenant-Governors of Bengal. It is also gratifying to find that Sir Henry Cotton travelled over all the reports resisted in the memorial and most all the points raised in the memorial and confirmed them emphacically in his vigorous language. Indeed, he followed the very lines upon which the memorial was based.

SIR HENRY'S declarations upon two points Sir Henry's declarations upon two points are also deserving of the special attention of the Government. One is the conversation he had with Sir John Woodburn when the latter was Home Member. After the Lushai Hills had been transferred to Assam, Sir Honry asked Sir John what had happened of the proposal for the transfer of Chittagong to Assam, and he said that, "the whole question has been allowed to drop after the receipt of your (Sir Henry's) minute." Now when he pre-(Sir Henrys) minute." Now when he pre-decessor of Lord Curzon showed such regard to the views of Sir Henry in this matter, we to the views of Sir Henry in this matter, we may expect the same consideration at the hands of His Excellency. The other point relates to the alleged over-work of the Lieutenant-Governor. This question has no doubt be nexhaustively dealt with in the memorial, but, coming from Sir Henry, his views on the subject have their special value. He totally denied that the present-day Lieutenant-Govdenied that the present-day Lieutenant-Gov-ernors are more hard-worked than their pre-decessors; on the other hand, the latter have far less works than the Provincial rulers of the seventies, eighties, and even a part of the

SIE HENRY suggested two alternatives for the solution of the problem. One was the substitution of a Governor in Council for the Lieutenant-Governor, and other was to cut out Benar, Bnagulpur, and Chota Nagpur from Bengal and establish them under a separate Chief Commissionership. The first suggestion has already been adopted in the memorial, but the latter is absolutely unacceptable to the promoters of the movement set on foot in Bengal to procest against partition. The "Englishman" has the following on this sub-

"We do not know that Sir Henry Cotton assisted the cause of non-partition much by his counter proposal of Wednesday night. If you must have partition, he said in effect, why not separate Bihar, Bhagalpur and Chota Nagpur from Bengal instead of Dacca, Mymensingh and Chritagong? Doubtless this would be a less objectionable plan than the one put forward by Lord Curzon last year, but Sir Henry Cotton in the same speech stated the answer to his own suggestion. He denied that there was any call for dismemberment on the score of an overworked Lieuten-ant-Governor and pointed to the number of prize givings and other functions in Calcutta which the provincial ruler now finds time to attend, whereas formerly he did not. Sir Henry Cotton laid his finger upon the proper remedy for any congestion which now exists when he advocated the changing of Bengal from a Vice-Governorship to a Governorship, from a Vice-Governorship to a Governorship, whose Governor might be appointed direct from home. The case for bestowing a Governor upon Bengal is overwhelming, when we recollect the comparative insignificance of the other two Presidencies."

The promoters of the anti-partition movement would, on no account, agree to the separation of Behar, Orissa or Chota Nagnur from Bengal. When Orissa or Chota Nagpur from Bengal. When Sir Henry holds such a view, it would have been succidal on their part to make him a leader of the agitation. As for the so-called Conference held at the Town Hall, it was a mistake and this we intend to show in a future issue. The conference has served no purpose whatever; perhaps, it has done some mischief.

The final report on the sesamum ("til") crop of time Punjab for the year 1904 states that the area placed under til was 158,900 acres as compared with 244,400 acres last year and a decennial average of 190,620 acres. The causes of this contraction are the late arrival of the monsoon in most districts and its failure in the Central Punjab, where "cil" is most largely grown as an unirrigated crop. Decreases are most marked in H.ssar, 22,100 to 13,600 acres; Ferozepore, 16,400 to 1,800 acres; Montgomery 23,100 to 4,500 acres; Lahore 15,400 to 6,900 acres, and Multan 37,300 to 23,800 acres. Slight increases appropriate the control of the contr Montgomery. Yields above the average are reported from Muzaffargarh and Gurgaon. The outturn in Gurdaspur was average. In pear in Karnal, Jullundur, Gurdaspur, and all other districts the outturn was unsatisfactory. The total outturn is estimated at 317,925 cwts. against 519,369 cwts. last year, and a decennial average of 352,618 cwts.

THE Ludhiana merchants have some serious grievances against the local railway station. But let us quote their own words:—"It seems all anarchy. Phatak is closed is always the cry. Unfortunately if the goods are accepted, they remain lying exposed to wind and rain, thus causing a heavy loss to the owners. Such practice has got a very bad effect on the Ludhiana Trade. The merchants cannot send their goods in time and hence they receive no orders for supplies. Poor merchants are nowwhere. The attention of the Station Master is invited every day but he turns only a deaf ear to all these. The District Traffic Superintendent has address ed on the subject but no substantial result is arrived at." KAPIL Tirtha is a sacred place of pilgrimage in memory of the saint Kapil in Kolhapur. It is an object of veneration to every good Hindu. In 1895 the local Municipality de-cided to fill up the Tirtha or tank attached to at. The above order was passed as far back as 1896 but up to now, unfortunately, nothing has been done to give effect to that decision of the Maharaja. The Hindu residents of Bombay and other towns and places in the Maharashtra have again approached His Highness with a memorial, praying that the authorities be directed to give effect to the orders of the Maharaja. This arbitrary mode of proceeding is not only unjust and unlawful, but resalts in the merchants being compelled to pay toll on quantities of straw which do not exist. The method adopted by the Superintendent causes not only obstruction and delay in the conduct of business but unnecessary expense and damage. We are sorry to note that although repeated memorials have been submitted to the Vice-Chairman nothing has yet been done to remedy the evil. They have now approached the Chairman and we hope this officer will institute an enquiry and pass such orders as will remedy the and pass such orders as will remedy existing evil.

DISAPPOINTED HOPES IN RUSSIA.

London, Dec. 23.

Reformers must needs become hardened to disappointments, and the Russ ans are no exceptions to the rule. When the cause of progress and of the will of the people has to be championed against an old established autocracy, there must of necessity be actack after attack on the stronghod. Pat ence, courage, perseverance and faith in the ultimate victory are essent al characteristics of those who would better the condition of the downtrodden and oppressed. The reform movement in Russ a has received a disappointing set-back. The Czar has declared that, having received an autocracy on h s accession A meeting of the Senate of the Calcutta University will be held at the Senate House, College Square, on Friday, the 27th instant. All the Russias! Although the champons of liberty have fought a good fight, the reactionar es are reported to have won the day, and the eagerly awaited manifesto, when it comes in January, will only include in ernal reforms. No official reports of the solemn Council of the Czar and his Ministers, held a few days ago, are as yet available, but it is evident that the high hopes recently entertained and regarded as likely to be granted owing to a marked change of atti-tude in the direction of leniency, are doom-ed to disappointment. The Grand Duke Sergius and the Procuratoe of the Holy Synod are considered to be the most powerful enemies of reform. The argument of the religious autocrat is that the Czar is not only the political master of Russia but head of the Church, and any weakening of his absolute rule would be a blow to religion and molute rule would be a rality and likely to lead to a relapse into barbarism and sin. It has always been the experience of men and nations that when zeal for religion becomes the support of despotism, the result not only cramps all free dom but frequently provokes b'oodshed and deeds of ruthless violence. No war is so terrible as a religious war because of the angry passions let loose under the justification of conscientious obedience to doctrines of faith. The St. Petersburg Correspondent of the Fresch journal, the "Matin," declares that at the Council M. Witte, formerly Finance Minister and now hold the offices of Head of His Majesty's advisers, told the Czar plainly that his refusal to listen to the reasonable demands of the Zemstvos would open the way to revolution. What was not granted by peaceful means would very likely be seized by force. The sop offered, according to latest reports, of small concessions in administrative measures is not sufficent to satisfy the hopes of the people; the freedom of the press is again curtailed the right to discuss Government actions whether in the press or at meetings is withheld, and it looks as if the receil and the result meaning the same of the receil and the receiver as if the recoil would result in further restrictions of a galling character. There are very dangerous elements in the situation and they have a marked similarity to those that led to the outbreak of the French Revolution. This set-back is grievously disappointing even though it was scarcely to be hoped that all the demands of the reformers would be conceded; but it cannot be regarded as final settlement. The forces of autocracy may appear to triumph, but the force of the people's will, when really aroused, can-not thus be held in check. It is thought that the Czar himself is desirous of granting some measure of reform, but he is held by the fetters of the autocratic conviction on which he has been nurtured, and he allows himself to be over-ruled by those of his Ministers who declare that freedom is a dangerous weapon in the hand of a people not prepared for it. As one of the London journals remarks, in commenting on the situation, Nicholas II. is not strong enough to take the lead; he is of a hating mind. It would need a Peter the Great, backed by Min's than a year ago, he has caused us conside- ter as wise as Stein and as bold as Bismarck shown himself so staunch an advocate for progress and for breaking down the iron bands of autocracy, has won the gratitude of the reformers, and even if he be compelled to resign his influential position the progress made under his administration will not soon be forgotten. It is certain that the refusal, if events verify the report that has reached us, to deal with the desire of the enightened Russians to take a shore in the conduct the affairs of the nation will bring troublous times in the near future. The war is exceedingly unpopular and the latest dis ppointment Kuropatkin must be largely reinforced by a further calling out of the reserves, to-gether with the destruction of the Pacific fleet and the fall of Port Arthur which is now looked upon as almost inevitable betoken a very serious aspect of affairs. No one looka very serious aspect of analrs. No one looked for the regeneration of Russia by a single stroke of the pen, but the danger of destroying hopes that had been raised in some measure of justice being granted is one which not even the Czar's most reactionary

(Before Justices Henderson and Geidt.) A RULE ISSUED.

Babu Gobinda Chundra Roy obtained a rule on behalf of one Abdul Majid calling upon the Deputy Commissioner of Kachar to show Deputy Commissioner of Kachar to show cause why the sanction of prosecution passed against the petitioner should not be set aside.

One Mobshur Ahi instituted criminal proceedings against Abdul Majid under Sec. 133

Cr. P. Code alleging that the latter had caused an obstruction to a certain "Nala."

The Extra Assistant Commissioner of Silchar and the second of the ordered a police enquiry before issuing any notice to the defendant and on receipt of the report stayed the proceedings. The complament thereafter moved the Deputy Commissioner of Silchar, who referred the case to the Lower Court with directions that the defendant should be required to convert the defendant should be required to open the "Nala" within a fixed time and if he failed to do so, the obstruction should be removed by the Police. The case was accordingly revived by the Extra Assistant Commissioner. The petitioner filed a written statement and prayed for the appointment of a jury; but no notice was taken of it. The petitioner then formally applied to the Extra Assistant Commissioner for permitting him to produce Commissioner for permitting ham to produce his documents; the case was accordingly adjourned till following day but owing to want of time time Extra Assistant Commissioner could not see the documents on that day. On the 3rd November the petitioner produced some "pattah" and the Cadastral map and the Extra Assistant Commissioner after perusing them returned them to the petitioner but then returned them to the petitioner but passed no order in the case. Thereafter the complainant made an application praying for sanction to prosecute the petitioner on one ground that he had not opened the "Nala," The sanction was granted in the absence of and without any notice to the petitioner.
Aggrieved by the said order the petitioner moved this Court.

THE PALAMOW SENSATION.

Moulvi Syed Abdul Majid is a Zemindar in the District of Palamow. On the 13th June 1903 Mr. Lyall, the Deputy Commissioner of Palamow, instituted a proceeding under Sec. 145 Cr. P. C., in respect Zof 3000 Bighas of land, making the petitioner as the first party and one Babu Indradeo Narayan Sing as second party. The Deputy Commissioner upon a consideration of the evidence adduced by both sides held that Indradeo Narayan to be in possession of 4 annas and 7 gundas Mokorari right on the entire land. He also held that Moulvie Abdul Majid had committed offences under sections 193, 211 and 471 I.P.C. and directed the District Superintendent of Police to enquire into the circumstances of the case and of the documents therein filed. The petitioner moved this Court against those orders, which were afterwards set aside. While the case was pending in the High Court and while further proceedings were stayed a warrant was issued against the petitioner and his elephants etc., were attached. After the case was disposed of wartached. After the case was disposed of warrants were issued against the pethioner, Dhaniram, who, it was alleged, had executed a "kobla" in favour of the petitioner in respect of the purchase of the land in dispute, and one Tulshi Sing, the writer of the "kobla." It was alleged in the petition that on the 13th September Mr. Lyall called R. Hossain, an attesting wirness to the "kobla" and a respectable Zemindar, to his bunglow, a sted him and sent him to hajut because and the sted of the petitioner. ould not depose against the pet.tioner. eased on bail. Dhaniram was also he was released on bail. A warrant of arrest was released on bail. A warrant of arrest was issued against fulsi Sing, who for fear or being sent to hajut, on the 1st October last accompanied by a pleader of Gya surrendered himself before Mr. Lyall and applied rendered himself before Mr. Lyalf and applied for bail. Mr. Lyalf after hearing the pleader sent Tulsi in custody to the Court St. Inspector who told Tulsi that the case was an unbailable one and that the only way by which he could be released on bail was to obey the orders of Mr. Lyalf Thomaston the obey the orders of Mr. Lyad. Thereafter the District Superintendent of Police came and took Tulsi in custody to his bunglow where he mad to wait for an hour and was sent with the orderly peons to the bunglow of Mr. Lyall. Tulsi was told to sit in a chair before Mr. Lyall who asked him as to why he had brought a pleader from Gya and he had not gained anything by bringing a pleader. Mr. Lyall then told Tuisi Sing that he must speak the truth otherwise he would be sent to jan tor seven years. Tulsi was here shown the record of statements of the other witnesses. Mr. Lyall then sent for two constables with hand-cuit; this frightened Tuisi very much and me made his statements. Tulsi was then taken before the District superintendent of Police under the custody of an orderly peon of Mr. Lyall. There he was asked to speak tme truth; he was further told that other witnesses had spoken against Abdul Majid and that the latter would not be saved by his (Tuisi) speaking in favour of Abdul Majid. The District Superimendent of Police said that unless anish deposed as others did he would be sent to hajut. Tulsi Sing was here ordered to be released on bail of Rs. 200 at about 8 p.m. On the 1st October an application for a copy of the order sheet of the proceedings with expedition fee was filed under the signature of a pleader in the ordinary course, before the Senior Deputy Magistrate, but the application was sent to Mr. Lyall for orders. Mr. Lyall by his order dated the 11th October last refused to grant a copy. Thereafter a Counsel moved the Deputy Commissioner for obtaining copies and Mr. Lyall passed orders for granting copies of such papers as affected Tulsi Sing but refused to grant copies of other papers. When Counsel appeared before Mr. Lyall the former was asked if he appeared for Abdul Majid. The peutioner therefore apprehended that he would not get a fair and impartial trial in the Court of Mr. Lyall He moved this Court for the transfer Lyall. He moved this Court for the transfer of the case front the District of Palamow.

Their Lordships issued a rule on the Deputy Commissioner of Palamow to show cause why the enquiry under Sec. 476, now pending before him should not be transferred to the Magistrate of some other District competent to try the same on the grounds stated in the petition. All further proceedings would be stayed until the disposal of the rule. This rule would not have any effect, until the rule would not have any effect until the petitioner surrendered, but on his surrender he would be forthwith admitted to bail to satisfaction of the Magistrate.

SIR H. COTTON AT GAUHATI.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Gauhati, Jan. 10.

A UNIQUE SPECTACLE. Gauhati witnessed a spectacle on the 7th Jamuary last, on the occasion of the reception of Sir Henry Cotton, which, it can be supposed, it will not very easily forget. The reception of such a grand personage by only a few inhabitants of this place—all nonofficials—proved once for all how much strained the relations between the rulers and the ruled have grown and what a depth of degradation the Britishers in this benighted province can stoop to. Of that by and by. ARRIVAL

The express steamer from Dhubri with Sir Henry Cotton on board, arrived at about 2-30 p.m. at the Gauhati station. The river being silted up near the station that, steamers cannot come near the shore, but stay in the midstream whence mails and passengers are trans-shipped ashore. Sir Henry was conveyed in a jolly boat to the sands where a Shamiana was set up and the whole way from the river-side to the Shamiana was lined on both sides with plantain trees was lined on both sides with plantain trees and flags. The local band was requisitioned and kept the whole thing lively with occasional tunes. At the landing place as well as under the Chamiana waited a few gentleas under the Chamiana waited a few gentle-men of the place including the pleaders of the local bar with a sprinkling of school-students, and a motley crowd of the steamer-ghat coolies and Khalasies. There was not a sin-gle white face to be seen, nor any Govern-ment servant, worth the name! Even the students of the local Cotton College and Collegiate school were strictly prohibited by their Principal Shahib from joining in any demonstration for Sir Henry Cotton. It did not require much time and effort for Sir not require much time and effort for Sir Henry to realise the whole situation. parently he was prepared for it. He, how-ever, enquired about all the gentlemen—big officials and small—Europeans and Indians—and did not express much surprise when told that almost all the European residents of the town were, all on a sudden, called away to attend to their duties in the muffasil; some of them within a couple of miles or so! He was not also consequently more than reasonably surprised to mark the absence of even the E. A. C's and the Sub-Deputy Collectors and other Government officers whom to see Sir Henry would certainly like very much. He understood everything at a glance and with great equanimity and firmness stood it with great cheerfulness and presence of mind.

After a few minutes' talk with all the gentlemen and very cordially shaking hands with all, Sir Henry was driven in a Tonga cart beautifully decorated with flower-garlands and flags for the occasion to the Curzon Hall—the other gentlemen and the school-boys, whose number increased every minute, following, some in carriages, some on foot—forming a small procession on foot-forming a small procession.

AT THE COURT COMPOUND. There was no exhileration or jubilation whatever. All faces seemed to with melancholy and gloom as if bearing the marks of some great pressure upon their hearts. When the procession reached the court-compound, Sir Henry stopped and asked court-compound, Sir Henry stopped and asked if there was anybody in the court-offices who wanted to see him. Of the whole fry of the Government-servants, crowding the court-offices, one alone (whose name for evident reasons I omit to mention) boldly rushed out of his office to pay his humble but most sincere respects to Sir Henry Cotton, his old master and chief. The others—oh! the whole lot of them—skulked in the corners of their offices and hid their faces in sorrow, if not races in sorrow in shame. None dared come out. Oh! the service! the service! how slavish people may become under the iron rule.

AT THE COLLEGE.

Sir Henry next expressed a desire to meet the gentlemen-of course those who wanted e and hear him, at the local Curzon Hall and then walked on to his beloved Colthe Cotton College of Gauhati. The ere not, as I have said before, bollowed to receive him. A few, however, where feelings we too true and strong to be kept in check, brands and defying all threats of the dum. essors rushed out to show their Sir Henry Cotton—the founder loved institution.

IN SEARCH OF THE PRINC

When Sir Henry went to the C walked from room to room, followed by thick crowd but nowhere could the Principal or the Professors be seen! But Sir Henry was not to be baffled. He was determined to find the whole loft out from their hiding places. He gathered from a boy that the Principal and some of the Professors had been into the Laboratory-room, how busyof course nobody could say. Sir Henry instantly repaired to the Laboratory and met them. He came away in a few minutes.

AT THE CURZON HALL.

Sir Henry next went to the Curzon Hall which, and the approach to which, were slightly decorated with paper-cuts and evergreens. A pretty large gathering waited there to see and listen to Sir Henry Cotton -the once beloved Chief of Assam. Henry addressed the audience in very feeling terms and assured the people of this province of his warm love and sympathy. The address was couched in so very pathetic terms and expressed in so sincere feelings that not a few of those present were with their eyes wet with tears. After he took his seat Messrs Ram Das Brahma, pleader of the local bar, and J. N. Baruah, Rai Bahadoor, spoke a few words in praise of the high merit and virtues of Sir Henry and in appreciation of the valuable services done by him to the country and its people. They were followed by Babu Bepin Behary Chakraverty B. A., Headmaster, Private H. E. School, who on behalf of the students of the town expressed their deep reverence, respect and love for Sir Henry Cotton. The pentagonal control of the students for a time certainty of the students for a time certain the students of the students for a time certain the students of the s up feelings of the students for a time got free vent and were expressed in three hearty, loud cheers. Sir Henry was apparently much moved by the addresses and again rose and spoke a few words exhorting the students to be very earnest, steady and persevering in their ende vours for, nothing but these divine qualities would ensure their success in life—in the long run. He took his seat amidst cheers.

AT THE DAK-BUNGALOW.

Two rooms were secured in the Dak-Bunga-Thither he was next conducted by the gentlemen—a thick crowd following him and giving vent to their feelings in different ways sometimes cheering Sir Henry but at other times throwing not very parliamentary epithets upon the absentee grandees of the town. Tiffin and dinner were ordered in the Dak-Bungalow. As the day closed, the students of the Cotton College and other dents of the Cobton College and other schools gathered there in large numbers and cheered Sir Henry as the 'Champion of Justice.' Sir Henry very kindly spoke to the boys, familiarly and cheerfully talked with them, shook hands with all and heartily encouraged them in their life work and mission. The classification part of Sir Henry's mission. The closing part of Sir Henry's half-a-day visit to this town was most interesting, pathetic and dramatic.
"STOLEN" VISIT.

Although not a single European official thought it worth his while to see the 'People's man', Sir Henry, however did not omit an opportunity of seeking a few out and an opportunity of seeking a few out and bringing home to their minds what stuff and material they are made of. It was really very dramatic and interesting, this painful surprise of Sir Henry's stolen visit to a few worthy Britishers—Sir Henry's own countrymen—and some of them, if I am correctly informed, owing their very position and influence to his favour! One European gentleman is said to have extended his hospitality to Sir Henry but on second thought sent man is said to have extended his hospitality to Sir Henry, but on second thought sent word to say that as he was going out of the town he was sorry not to be able to have the opportunity and pleasure of entertaining Sir Henry. Sir Henry very good naturedly expressed his gratification at the unavoidable absence of the big officials for he was, as he said, thus enabled to get greater opportunities of mixing with the people.

DEPARTURE.

Sir Henry to the last minute of his star

Sir Henry to the last minute of his stay talked with the gentlemen and assured them that he would never forget the love and kindness of the people of this province. He left for Calcutta by the express steamer that very evening.

ATTITUDE OF THE EUROPEANS AND

ITS RESULTS. Though not a single European or Indian official took part in Sir Henry's reception official took part in Sir Henry's reception though no very great demonstration was shown on the occasion, peoples' feelings, spontaneous and natural, could not be checked but flowed too freely in unbounded love and reverence for Sir Henry Cotton. The present attitude of the European residents has rather served to bring to the minds of the Indians how a friend of theirs—how one who feels for them a bit and speaks a word for them, even if a Britisher, is held by his own countrymen. The growth of this feeling between the rulers and the ruled is certainly not a very happy thing to see and contemnot a very happy thing to see and contem

A CASE OF MURDER.

The Sub-divisional Magistrate of Kusthia committed Polla Mondal and others on a charge of committing culpable homicide under the following circumstances. Since Srayan last Pollan lost 3 buffaloes and 2 cows. This time they left use dead body of the animal in a field surrounded by "Bubla" trees near a "Jole." ### MATTERS MUNICIPAL.

Yesterday, a meeting of the Rate-payers Association was held at the Govinda Sarak Banga Bidyalaya, to discuss municipal mat-ters and resolutions to the effect that the conditions of almost all the roads are lamentable, the conservancy arrangement is very defective, patch works of road repairs are absolutely necessary as the dust and ditches have rendered traffic most inconvenient, the system of watering is very unsatisfactory were passed unanimously. The copy of the resolutions will be sent to the District Magistrate and the Chairman of the eMunicipality. We hope prompt steps would be taken to indress the grievances of the rate-payers.

A Poona correspondent writes under date the 9th instant:—Private Walker, of the East Lancachire Reg ment, has been arrested by the police on a charge of attempting to murder a woman named Annetta, living near the bazaar. On Sunday night Walker, who has recently been reduced to the ranks from sergeant, was on guard dut- at Ghoripuri when he left his post and went to the woman's house, taking with him his rifle. He appears to have had a grudge against another woman living in the same house and while hid no near the place in the hopes of seeing her come out saw Annetta, the owner of the house appear with a lantern in her hand mishouse appear with a lantern in her hand mis-taking her for the woman he desired to be avenged upon Walker fired, but luckily avenged upon Walker fired, but luckily missed his mark. Ram Lal Barhi says he lent his axe to Juggernather will be laid before the military authorities to decide whether Walker is to be tried by a civil or military court. Walker was placed before Major Wake, Cantonment Magistrate, this evening, and remand d for a week.—"Times of India."

there Gunga Chamar say they sat at a distance and played the drums and cannot say if there were one or two bodies on the pyre. Ram Lal Barhi says he lent his axe to Juggernath to cut fire-wood for the pyre, but did not himself attend the funeral or witness the burning of the bodies. These statements have yet to be proved but it is a significant that such a complete change has been made in the line of defence to be adopted.

A CASE OF SAIT.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Bankipur, Jan. 12. Sometime back I sent you an account of a case of Sati that had taken place in Behar Sub-division. The son of the deceased named Juggernath Missir with 12 others were committed to take their trial in the Sessions. The case came to a close yesterday, when seven of the accused were sentenced to various terms of imprisonment and the remaining six were acquitted. The whole facts of the case will appear from the following:—

COMMITMENT ORDER.

Emperor vs. Juggernath Missir and 12 other charges under Secs. 304, 304-114, and 306 I.

Five of the accused in this case s and committed for trial on coarges of culpable homi cide and abatement of suicide, whilst the re maining eight have been committed on harges of abatement of suicide. Though the 13 accused committed for trial have thus been divided into two distinct bat hes—the charges nevertheless are with reference to one the same transaction. This was the immolution of a Hindu widow on the funeral pyre of the deceased husband or as it is termed in the vernacular a case of Sati, which may be described as a ghastly offence against nature, against humanity and law of the land. Happily the offence is ex remely rare, indeed it was hoped that the great blot of Hindu rites and ceremonies had been effectually and permanently exterminated. It is wherefore not a little startling to be thus presented with instances of a revival of the barbarism of the dark ages. The evidence goes to show that one Chaudhuri Missir alias Chatturbhuj Missir, a Brahmin of Sanchari village, having died on the 8th October last, village, having died on the 8th October last, arrangements were made for the cremation of his body at the "Devi Sthan" of that place, on the banks of a small river. A piece was cut in the ground in the shape of a St. Andrew's Cross and the funeral pyre was built over it. The body being laid on the pyre, the widow having bathed in the river and adorned herself as for her marriage, took her seat on the pyre and called on her son, the accused Juggernath Missir, to do his duty as a devout Hindu, Juggernath lighted some wheat stocks and having walked round the pyre three times, applied, according to custom, the fire to the mouth of the deceased. This failed to ignite the pyre and it is said custom, the fire to the mouth of the deceased. This failed to ignite the pyre and it is said that he and the four Brahman accused, viz., Balkishun Missir, Dwarka Missir, Ram Charan Missir and Sachman Tewari, performed the Humad, which consisted of the burning of incense and the placing of lighted chips of wood, dipped in ginee under the pyre until it ignited. By this time a vast crowd had assembled. As the smoke from the incense ascended and the flames reached the mister. cended and the flames reached the widow, cended and the flames reached the widow, she is said to hve "moved about" or writhed and finally to have stood up and turned towards the setting sun but immediately fell back on the pyre apparently overcome by the increasing flames and amidst cries of "Sat Ram," "Sita Ram," "Sati Mai Ki Jai," the beating of drums, the clang of cymbols and blowing of the Sank or shell, was burnt to ashes with the corpse of her husband. The evidence goes to show that the five Brahmin accused (1) Juggernath Missir, Balkishun Missir, Dwarka Missir, Ram Charan Missir, and Lachman Tewari, were the persons who Missir, Dwarka Missir, Ram Charan Missir and Lachman Tewari, were the persons who lighted or assisted in high: ng the pyre. The accused Luchmi Narain Singh (2) Udit Singh, (3) Adit Singh, (4) Langru Singh have been identified as persons who were standing round and near the pyre crying "Sath, Sath" "Sat Ram" and "Sati Mai Ki Jai." If these cries of Hindu picty were not actually a peressary corollary piety were not actually a necessary corollary to the cremation and immedition, they cer-tainly signified sympathy with approval of the act and by thus giving it their support they can only be regarded in the light of abettors. The accused Ram Lal Burchi cut and prepared the wood for the pyre and was present during the whole of the proceedings. Dil-chand Chamar and Ganga Chamar were two if the drummers employed during the progress of the ceremonies and thus participated in them whils. Sawar Choukidar the watchman of the village being present refused to lay any information before the police, though the necessity of doing so was suggested to him. . . It is an unfortunate circumstance that the majority of the witnesses are Hindus and as such the accused have the full benefit of their sympathies. Of this, several of the witnesses gave every indication and some of them were distinctly unwilling witnesses. Apart from this, the character and nature of the transaction itself was such as would are inverted to the character and continue the character and continue the character and nature of the transaction itself was such as would be character and continue the character and nature of the transaction as considerable diversity of ordinarily occasion a considerable diversity of description in the statements of the different witnesses. The points to which their attention was riverted was the funeral pyre itself and the terrible scene that was there being enacted. The individual acts of those who were ministering to the ceremonies were of but very minor importance. There was much excitement, the crowd was great and the noise of drums, cymbols and gong whilst effectually drowned any agonised cries there may have been from the unfortunate victim mly added to the confusion and blurred the powers of accurate or rather detailed observation of the attendants. To them it was of but little consequence who applied the fire to the pyre, the great thing was to see the pyre burn and with it the unfortunate woman...The accused Juggennath Missir beyond saying that his mother died as Sati on the same day that his father ded, refused to make any statement. He, however, admits having made the statement recorded by my predecessor on 22nd Oct., 1904, in which he said his mother "went and sat upin the funeral pile and fire broke out from her person". The accused Ram Charan Missir, Dwarks Missir, and Ram Charan Missir, Dwarka Missir and Balkishun Missir now say that Chatturbhuj Missir and his wife died in the same day from natural causes and were burnt on the same pyre and thus the woman became Sati, but that is not in accordance with the statements previously accordance with the statements previously made by them before my predecessor under sec. 164 C. P. C. Ram Charam Missir them said that when the body of her husband was placed on the rore, the widow declared she would be a Sati and that "she went and sat on thepyre and fire broke out from her person".... Dikchand Chamar and his brother Gunga Chamar say they sat at a distance and played the drums and cannot say if there were one or two hodies on the pyre

MINERAL DISCOVERIES IN CEYLON.

The "Ceylon Government Gazette" has recently published a notification which will have a considerable interest for mining people. The new mineral "horianite" which has been The new maneral "horianite" which has been discovered by Mr. W. D. Holland and the Mineralogical Survey and analysed at the Imperial Institute, has been found to contain over 70 per cent of "thoria," the material from which lineandescent gas mantles are made. The mineral occurs in very black cubic cystals, and is abundant at Bambarabotuwa in the Province of Sabaragamuwa where it was first found. Slight traces have also been discovered near Balangoda, and also near Ratnapura and near Russella, and perhaps also in a plumbago mine in the Kurunegala Distrect. Thorite is another mineral containing over 60 per cent of thoria, and it has ing over 60 per cent of thoria, and it has been found by the Mineralogical Survey at Bambarabotuwa and at Gilirmale, in the Province of Sabaragamuwa. The Government is informed that £30 per cwts. is now offered in England for thorianite containing from 70 to 72 per cent of thoria; the value of the thorite would, therefore, be slightly less. In view of their high commercial value, Government desires to encourage a search for these minerals; intending prospectors are accordingly informed that the Government will for three years undertake to levy no royalty on the mineral, except in the case of extraction from Crown lands, where the permission to wash will be by agreement on liberal terms. Samples of thorianite are, we believe, on view at the Colombo Museum, and at the office, of the Covernment Agents in the discontinuous contraction. offices of the Government Agents in the dis-tricts mentioned.—"Bomaby Gazette."

On Tuesday afternoon next the Vicercy and Trustees of the Victoria Memorial will be at home at 4-30 in the Galleries of the Indian Museum to a number of invited Rectoria Memorial Exhibition. A large numbe of valuable additions have been made to the collection during the past year and a third gallery has now been opened for the purpose. His Majesty the King has continued to take the warmest interest in the undertaking designed to commemorate the late Queen Victoria; and, in addition to the oil-paintings which he presented a year ago, has now forwarded to the Trustees two bronze busts of Queen Alexandra and himself as well as a costly writing-calinet and chair from Windsor Castle which were in daily use by Queen Victoria while conducting her official and private correspondence. The interesting pictures and memorials so generated rously lent by the Judges of the High Court and the Asiatic Society of Bengal, will also be on view: as well as a complete collection of Indian Army medals and coms, a large number of exquisitely illuminated Oriental manuscripts of extreme rarity, and many notable additions to last year's collection of oil-paintings, prints, engravings, and personal relice: These include a number of objects relating or originally belonging to Warren Hastings, which have been presented by a lady in England who has inherited a large lady in England who has inherited a large number of his personal effects. We are informed that models of the battle-fields of Plassey and Seringapatam are also in course of execution: and that many oil-paintings of distinguished Indians and Anglo-Indians have been promised. The exhibition will be open been promised. The exhibition will be open to the public after Tuesday next, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., until the middle of February, and after that date to 6 p.m. until the close of the season. It will also be open on Surdays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

A report from Zhob Valley states that a prisoner under detention at Kinka Saijallah, after receiving a sentence of 14 years' imprisonment, secured a rifle and shot a sentry and escaped. He wounded another sepoy before being recaptured. The sentry died of his wound.

While some villagers were passing the jungle at Pallikuda, in the district of sunakaryn, Ceylon, they met to their surprise anumber of elephan's headed by a tusker. Fearful for their lives, one of them, who happened to possess a gun at the time, discharged a shot in the direction of the herd of elephants, which brought down after some hours the tusker to the ground; but they ran helter-skelver to their homes, tuhinking that the show was a miss. The tusker, which fell dead in the jungle about fifty yards from the road, was noticed by another villaer, who removed the tusks, which were very valuable, and kep them in his house, taking every precaution not to let the secret out. It appears that the District Mudaliyar of the place, while on circuit, found the carcase of an elephant deprived of its tusks. He investigated the matter and traced the hidden tusks, which are said to weigh over 70lbs. and are valued at Rs. 600. The tusks will be advertised for sale. be advertised for sale.

---: (1):--SIR H. COTTON'S VIEWS.

On Wednesday evening a conference was held at the Town Fall under the presidency of Sir Henry Cotton to consider the question of the partition of Bengal. The conference was held in the ground floor. It was largely attended. All the leaders of the people of Bengal—Hindus and Mahomedans.—were there. There were more than 300 delegates from muffasil towns present and they took active part in it. It was in fact. they took active part in it. It was in fact a second protest meeting similar to the one held sometime ago to protest against the partition scheme.

Raja Peary Mohun Mukerjee proposed that the char be taken by Sir Henry Cotton.

In doing so he sad:-

You, gentlemen, who have come from remote districts to attend this conference to give us the benefit of your counsel in determing our course of action in the matter of the course of action in the matter of the proposed partition of Bengal have received with no greater sense of re-lief than we men of west Bengal the scate-ment made by Sr Denzil Lobetson in the Council Chamber in reply to the question put by His Highness the Maharaja of Durbhanga. We have in that statement an indication that before coming to a decision His Excellency the Viceroy is anxious to examine and deliberate upon thoroughly a measure which is so very repugnant to the feelings and wishes of the people. We are deeply grateful to His Excellency for it. It has reduced to narrower limits the work of the Committee appointed at the public meeting held in this hail in March last and at which I had the honour to preside, a meeting by the way more largery and influentially attended than perhaps any ever held in this historic hall. We may now venture to presume that His Excellency is no longer particularly in love with the scheme and we may view it with equaminity freed from the apprehension that the measure had been settled by the Government of India and that mmediate effect would be given to it. Luckily we have now in our madst one illustrated gentleman who has always been a sympathetic and warmhearted friends of the people of India and whose knowledge of the people of India and whose knowledge and experience gained in a long and distinguished career in the public service of the country entitle him to speak with authority on the question. We should not sly the opportunity of hearing his opinions on this momentaus question. I am sure we shall vastly benefit by it. I now beg to propose that Sir Henry Cotton be requested to take the chair and request him to address the assembly. SIR H. COTTON'S SPEECH.

Amidst loud cheers Sr Harry Cotton rose

najas and Gendemen, I fear it will be quit. impossible for me to throw my voice so 1.17 back as to be audible in this great half and indeed it will be useless for me to attempt the impossible. I have come here this attempt the impossible. I have come here this atternoon to preside at the conference to be neld regarding the proposed partition of Bengal. Well, gentlemen, the first thing I have to advise to you in this connection is to be moderate. our views, to express them with clearness out at the same time with every respect an consideration to the authorities of the country Noching is to be gained by the use of vilent or strong language. Our object is, il possible, to concluste our relation and to win them round by argument and reasoning to our own views of the situation. Least of all, gendemen, is our present Viceroy a man to be approach by any research by any research. coerced by any violence of opinion of expression. I have ever allowed myself on every occasion to speak language—rather most respectful language—of our emment and distinguished Vicercy and am convinced that he is devoted to the interests of this country ac cording to his own lights, these lights being ferent from our own. But or mis consc-e tionsness and sincerity, of his ardent love of justice, his detestation of wrong there can b no doubt wnacever. But we differ from him widely in respect of the proposal me has pu forward on his own responsionity for the dis-memberment of this province. All we can d is to approach him with atmost respect and beg him to reconsider the opinions he has already expressed and it possible to drop the scheme; or, it not, at least so far to modely it as to make it as little objectionable as

Now, we labour under one great disadvan tage as we do not know exactly what the present scheme is. The proposal of dismenhering nengal sprang from small beginning. In rose from a small conference field in this city just 13 years ago with the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, the Chief Commissioner of Burma, the Chief Commissioner of Assam and a tew migh military authorities. They sat to consider measures for the better protection of our North-Eastern frontier. It was then proposed that the Lusha. Hills should be transerred to Assam and in order to facilitate the administration, it was recommended that the Chattagong D vis.on should go with them. That was in 1891. In 1896 the matter had proceeded a little further. In the earlier part of that year Sir William Ward was the Chief Commissioner of Assam and he prepared a somewhat elaborate scheme for the transfer of the Chittagong Division to Assam and he added to it in a general way a hope coupled with a rew recommendations of his own time districts of Dacca and Mymensing might also be transferred. Then I succeeded to the Chief Commissionership of that province. The matter was referred to me for my opinion by the Government of India and I said in a m.nute, which has been published in this country and which doubtless many of you nave seen, speaking with the right of experience which I possessed of time districts of Chittagong and Comilla as well as from long experience in Rengal in all its districts. I caid perience in Bengal in all its districts—I caid that I thought the proposal to transfer the Chittagong Division was very ill-advised and as for the transfer of Dacca and Mymensing as for the transfer of Dacca and Mymensing I alluded to at only to scout it as altogether out of the question. I said I would be very glad to take over the administration of the Lushai Hills. Accordingly Lushai Hills were transferred to Assam and the proposal to transfer any other part of the Bengal Province was allowed to drop. I remember speaking on the subject shortly after about a year after or permaps a little more, two years after—with Sir John Woodburn who was then Lieutenant-Governor of the province and had Lieutenant-Governor of the province and had Member of the Viceroy's Council. I asked him what had happened of this proposal for the transier of Chittagong to Assam and he said that "the whole question has been allowed to drop after the receipt of your minute." It was evident, he said that "you showed no continue knowed and the proposal to the proposal of the proposal to the p showed no particular keenness or desire to become Lieutenant-Governor of the new pro-

The question was then re-opened by the well-known letter under the signature of Mr. Risley, which when published, I tihnk about Risley, which when published, I think about 18 months ago, created much consternation in your community. It was then suggested that as Bengal wass too large for any one man to control, certain portions of Bengal including not only Chittagong but the Ducca Division also should be transferred to Assam. In consequence of the violent agitation which the public in this matter caused, Lord Curzon visited those districts Chittagong, Dacca and Mymensing—and he made certain speeches about a year ago in which he adumberated a third and still larger scheme. This time, as I understand, abandoning any idea of augmenting the Chief Commissionership of Assim but framing the constitution of a new Assum but framing the constitution of a new Lieutenant-Gevernorsh p with all the appen-ages of a Leutenant-Governor. That scheme Lieutenant-Governorsh p with all the appenages of a Leutenant-Governor. That scheme included the whole of the Dacca Division, the Chittagong Division and also Rajshye Division excluding of course Darjeeling. There must be a new Lieutenant-Governor with his head-quarters at Dacca; there must be a new Board of Revenue; a new High Court and all the functionaries which are usually associated with the Lieutenant-Governorsh p distinguishing it so far from the Chief Commissionersh p. That proposal has been before the public about a year. It gave no more satisfaction to your community than the scheme which it superseded. On the contrary there aroused, if possible, greater opposition. A few months ago a great meeting was held in this hall in which a memorial—I hold up in my hand well-reasoned and forcible, was prepared protesting against morial—I hold up in my hand well-reasoned and forcible, was prepared protesting against all the schemes which have been put forward and praying that they might be abandoned. This memorial was, I believe, presented to His Excellency as long ago as May last and up to the present time no answer has been received to it. Various rumours have rent the air. We have heard of one thing and another thing. We are told that the last scheme of the Vicercy has been sanctioned by the Secretary of state in Council and we have the Secretary of state in Council and we have further told that it has not yet been submitted at present to the Secretary of State for his considera-Secretary of State for his considera-tion. I gather from an answer recently made in Council to a question put by the Hen'ble the Maharaja of Durbhanga—I gather that the Government of India has up to the present moment not made up its mind as to what scheme it will adopt or whether it will adopt any scheme at all. I gather from an answer recently made in Council to a question put by the Maharaja of Darbhanga that the Government of India has up to he present moment not made up its mind as to what scheme it will adopt, or whether it will adopt any scheme at all whether the Government of India, even at the eleventh hour, is not prepared to abandon the proposal which has given such just irritation throughout the province. This is how matter stands in regard to the history of this measure. It is, I think, an opportune momeasure. It is, I think, an opportune moment that I am able to stand with you at a time when it is possible that our united protest, temperately and moderately expressed may be able to influence the Government of Irdia so far as to reconsider the whole questions.

Upon the proposals, gentlemen, the first point I have to come is that this suggestion for the partit on of the province appears to have come spontaneously and uninvitedly from the Government of India itself. I do not believe that the proposal was made at the first instance either by the Government of Bengal or the Administration of Assam. It sprang like the mapple from the head of Jove not in full but partially equipped. The subsequent weapons have been furnished by the Viceroy himself after his visit from Dacca and Mymensingh. The proposal was strongly and Mymensingh. The proposal was strongly objected to the moment it was understood and recognised. I suppose that there is not anybody of opinion whatever in the province, of the least weight or importance, in favour of any of the schemes put forward.

They are condemned by the sent ment of the community. But Lord Curzon is the last person in the world to despise the influence c. emilment. He is himself possessed of extra ordinary sentimental disposition. I am sure had he must realise in his neart that this sentimen at objection on the transfer is entailed to the greatest weight. But the objection is much more than mere sentimental t cuts at the root of your national existence All your usual relations will be severed by this transfer, all your historical associations will be suptured, linguistic ties will be snapped and matters of aumin stracive interest and importance will be most seriously injured. is difficult to exaggerate the nardships which will follow from this transfer. Look how many of our bigger zemindars have their estaxes and properties in time eastern Bengal convenience just as our hy noblemen in London with estates in the country re-in London. It is in Calcutus side that they have all their agencies of management. All management is controlled from Calcutta. Calcutta is the centre of Benga from which everything radiates to the distant muffasil towns. No one will feel this separation of eastern Bengal from Calcutta more than the zeminders. The administrative inconvenience of the parties will be enormous it is difficult to exaggerate the inconvenience attaching to the reorganisation even of the I hear talk now of the bre up of Midnapur into two districts, of Mymensing into two districts. Well, whatever benefit may result from such partition in their case there can be no doubt that it will result in great administrative inconvenience in those districts and this will magnify a hundred fold when you break up a province. In this connection, gentlemen, I would like, if I may, to make what may be called a personal appeal to His Excellency the Viceroy and to the Gentlemen, Lord Curzon was though he somet now, a member of the Unionist administration. He is one of those who have protested with his whole heart and voice against the separation of Ireland from Great Britain and that although the Irish people longed for this separation. Now I find him in Bengal putting forward proposals of the separation of half of the province although the people of both parts are emploring him to leave the whole province to them. Well, there is a curious inconsistency in this. It shows how differently one judges when one's own in crest is affected from that when dealing with the interest of others. But if Lord Curzon could do this—if he could put himself in your places and realise how detestable was the idea of the partition of Bengal—if he could reate how revolting it was to your feelings—then he would not have hesitated in aband Gentlemen, Lord Curzon was though he vince. Well, sos the matter rested until I ing the unfortunate scheme with which tire. It is not therefore likely that Lieute-

he has identified himself.

I ask him why he has proposed the partition of the province. It is said, and I believe the only ground, that the administration of Bengal is too heavy and large for any one man a Governor saisted by a Council, which I according to the control of the province of the work in Bengal would be too heavy for a Governor assisted by a Council, which I are the control of the province of the work in Bengal would be too heavy for a Governor assisted by a Council, which I are the control of the province of the control of the the only ground, that the administration of Bengal is too heavy and large for any one man to control. Now, gentlemen, undoubtedly the Lieutenant-Governorship of Bengal is a very heavy and onerous charge. I should be the last man to depreciate its responsibility and importance. But I hesitate to say, and I believe there were no real grounds for saying, that it is beyond the power of one man to adequately control and manage it. Now, gentlemen, I am in a position to speak with some authority on this point. It so happened that I have had a longer and closer experience of distinguished Lieutenant-Governors than any other man of my generation. I was Under-Secretary to Government in the time of Sir George Campbell. I was junior Secretary under Sir Richard Temple and Sir Ashley Eden. I was Secretary to the Board of Revenue under Sir Rivers Thompson. Sir Steuart Bayley brought me into the Secretariat and there I remained during the administration of Sir Charles Elliott, Sir Antony MacDonnell and for some period of Sir Alexander Mackenzie. I was however brought into closest relation with all those distinguished Lieutenant-Governors for a period covering nearly 30 years and I hesitate to say that the Lieutenant-Governorship of Bengal is a heavier charge now than it was 30 years ago. heavier charge now than it was 30 years ago. In many ways it is a much easier charge. Population has increased, resources of the province have developed, communication has enormously expanded and what is the result of this development of communication. It means that the Licutenant-Governor, with his headquarters in Calcutta, is in immediate touch with all the portions of the province. I can remember that Sir George Campbell visited Dibrugarh in Assam and that it took him a whole month to get that district. It visited Dibrugarh in Assam and that it took him a whole month to get that district. It is inconceivable to them—the Lieutenant-Governors at the present time—taking months on the way to reach any portion if his territory. I submit, gentlemen, when I joined the province I was posted to the district of Midnapur, only 70 miles off, and it took me two days to get to my head-quarters. You can now get there within 3 or 4 hours. When I was quartered at Chittagong the posts used to take 3 or 4 days to come from Calcutta to Chittagong. It now comes in less than 24 hours, and so in every other part of the province. What a journey it was for a Lieutenant-Governor to go to Puri marching down the whole trunk road which took him days and days together disconnected as he was from this hear-quarters to reach his destination. Those times have passed and in all these tion. Those times have passed and in all thes matters at most as far as closeness of connec matters at most as far as eleceness of connection is concerned, as far as being in touch with his officers is concerned, the position of a Lieutenant-Governor is infinitely easier than it was a quarter of a century ago.

When we have only a few months ago a conference of the Divisional Commissioners at Darjeeling, there was no practical difficulty in collecting the Commissioner from all part of the province to advise the Lieutemant-Go of the province to advise the Lieutemant-Governor to some important points. Would that have been passible 30 years ago? It would have taken 10 days at least by many of the Commissioners to have arrived at Darjeeling and such a proposal as that of convening them together to advise the Government on any point would not have been possible.

I am now disposed to think that consideration of this kind seems not to increase the burden placed upon him by any increase of population or development of provincial resoures, and certainly I can not say that during my long experience at the Secretariat the work of a Lieutenant-Governor was appreciably heavier than it was 30 years ago. On the contrary Sir W. Grey, Sir G. Cambell, Sir P. Grant in those times were never able Sir Charles Elliott with all the impressed work thrown upon him found time to visit sub-divisions and I say that Sir Andrew Fraser with his energies will find time to do it. The Lieutenant-Governors find ample time now to preside over comparatively small and unimportant meetings in this city, they find time to inspect public works, great and small, very often which are going on at different places. If they find time for such duties I do not think it can be just to say that they are overworked, certainly they have time to attend to indefinite number of details which their pedecessors never attempted. I do not know whether one of the objects of the proposed partition is to enable the Lieuter Governor to go into such details as the which I have referred. But a Lieuter Governor should concentrate himself on important matters. And I believe that Lieutenant-Governors find ample time now to important matters. And I believe that gal, as it now is, is not too heavy a charg for a Lieutenant-Governor who can find him self unable to cope with matters which really demand his personal attention.

Gentlemen, what is needed in Bengal is not the partition of the province but the appointment of a Governor brought out from England and assisted by experienced councellors like Bombay and Madras. That is the real reform. Bombay and Madras. That is the real reform, urgent reform and simple reform which is now called for in Bengal. If I remember rightly Lord Curzon in his Mymensing speech discarded this idea and suggested that administration by Governors was not found to be very satisfactory. Well, if so I would ask him why does he not propose that the Governorship of Bombay and Madras should be abolished and Lieutenant-Governors appointed in their places. He thinks that pointed in their places. He thinks that pointed in their places. He thinks that if he were to suggest any such proposal it would be condemned as absurd and ridiculous. The Government at home will never listen to such a proposal for a moment. But if, on the other hand, the Governorship of Bombay and Madras are advantageous to those provinces why should it not be adequately advantageous to Bengal. I tell you gentlemen, that it would be advantageous and for this among many other reasons. You will always find the Governor of a province a nobleman or high officers appointed you will always and the Governor of a province a nobleman or high officers appointed from England directly by the Secretary of State who will be more independent than any Lieutenant Governor is or possibly can be and what we want nowadays is independence in our Governments. A great drawback to a Lieutenant-Governor or to a Chief back to a Lieutenant-Governor or to a Chief Commissioner is that he is not in a position to be independent without risking or sacrificing his future prospects. That remark has application to a Chief Commissioner. It is also strongly applicable to Lieutenant-Governors. In the first place these officers owe their appointments to the Viceroy and it is not likely therefore that they would oppose him in any matter in which the Viceroy sets his heart. But more than this the Lieutenant-Governors are human beings and most of them, if not all, return in their hearts a desire to be enshrined in the council of the Secretary of State when they rethe work in Bengal would be too heavy for a Governor assisted by a Council, which I deny, the desired result of relieving him of responsibilities can be attained by other measures than that of partitioning Bengal. It will be for you to consider the scheme. I do not say that it will be accepted with I do not say that it will be accepted with any unanimity by the population. I can say that this certainly will not be opposed with anything like the vigor and force to which the partition of Bengal has met. If the dismemberment must be made I would say separate Behar, Bhagalpur and Chotanagpur from Bengal and establish them under a separate Chief Commissionership. It will be infinite times preferable to any prepresed for dismembering Bengal. There is It will be infinite times preferable to any proposal for dismembering Bengal. There is a large section of the Behari population who would welcome and rather they would shake their heads in approving it. Others would prefer to remain in Bengal as now. But a proposal of this kind will not certainly excite anything like the opposition that the except proposal has aroused.

cite anything like the opposition that the present proposal has aroused.

Gentlemen, I will go further evem about the redistribution of the province and taking away the districts. I would say that if you dismember Bengal and create a separate province bring Assam back to Bengal. It would be, I believe, a popular measure in Assam and I am certain that in the districts of Sylhet and Cachar it will be welcomed with greatest delight and joy. These districts have never ceased to regret their separation be welcomed with greatest delight and joy. These districts have never cessed to regret their separation from Bengal. Il would suggest to give the Chief Commissioner of Assam powers similar to those with which the Commissioner of Sind is vested in the Government of Bombay. He exercises greater power and greatly relieves the Government of Bombay. So there will be a Commissioner in that frontier. This proposal would at all events involve very little exercise.

The suggestion of a new Lieutenant-Governor is to be condemned if not on any other ground but on enormous expense. Everything would be doubled. You in Calcutta will lose many things by the creation of a new province. Everything will be affected. Your High Court will be awindled to a second grade court and the power and independence and the influence the bar holds and most of its duties will be greatly reduced. Trade will be affected by the transfer. The object of the new Government will be to establish a rival post and rival everything in that metropols. If the partition must be made I say let it be made on the lines I have proposed. In any case I suggest in Calcutta a Governor and a Council and that, gentlemen, is the line to which I recommend you to agitate.

Do not cease to agitate. Nothing will be gained if you keep quiet. It is certain nothing will be lost if you agitate. You have before you examples of the mode of agitation which is taking place in England, not at the present days only but also in the past. Look at the agitation of free trade made by Cobden and Bright years and years. Hundred thousand pounds were expended. They did not win the victory in a day. Now look at the Joseph Chamberlain. He is now trying to undo what Bright and Cobden achieved. Look at the energy he throws himself into it, look at the energy he throws himself into it, look at the hundreds and thousand pounds he is expending. He is setting you an example of how to agitate. The suggestion of a new Lieutenant-Gover-

These, gentlemen, are the principal observations I have to offer you on the subject of this conference. I hope they will fructify in your mind and strengthen you in your arguments and reasons, for I am freely covinced that if you are only firm, persistant and resolute you may win you may carry the day if not in India, I sencerely hope you will be successful at least with the British public.

The following resolutions were then proposed seconded and carred with acclamation:—

INDIAN AGRICULTURE.

THE CONFERENCE AT PUSA. THE CONFERENCE AT PUSA.

It is rare indeed that so important a conference is held in India, as that which opened on Fr.day last at Pusa in Behar, and which is formed by the meeting of the Directors and Deputy Directors of Agriculture in every Indian province together with the expert advisers of the Imperial Dipartment of Agriculture and two or three other gentlemen representing several agricultural industries in India. The purpose of the conference is to consult as to the subjects which can best engage the attention of the experts attached to the Imperial Department, the most effective lines of investigation for each previous, and, generally, to advise as to the best means of making the departments of agriculture of as much use as is possible to the cultivators of every class in the country.

The first day's deliberations were principally taken up with the consideration of the pro-taken up with the consideration of the pr gramme for the new Imperial experiment station at Pusa for the work of the chemi and other experts of the department, and and other experts of the department, and of the work suggested for the ensuing year in each province. In connection with the first of these subjects it was pointed out by Mr Bernard Coventry, the Director of Pusa the the whole place has only recently been reclaimed from jungle, and the present years work would very largely consist in bringing the fland into general culture, coupled with the testing of varieties of several of the crops which can be grown. A considerable area has been set aside for the culture of Java indigo, which is very promising. It was suggested that a plan for permanent experiments should be drawn up by the Pusa staff at an early date, and experts from other parts of India should be invited to make suggestions in connection with it.

A long programme of work was brought bein connection with it.

A long programme of work was brought before the Conference by Dr. Butler, the experim fungus diseases under the Imperial government, the principal feature of which is a study of Rust in wheat with a view to the production of types resistent to the disease, both in the United Provinces, in the Punjar and in the Central Provinces. Dr. Butler also promised to arrange a visit to Assam, chiefly to study potato blight and to recommend means for combating it.

After a consideration of a programme arranged by Mr. Lefroy, the Government entoranged by Mr. Lefroy, the Government entermologist, (which included a visit to Assau a study of insect pests there), the property as taken into consideration. It is unecessary to describe these programmes he in detail and we will merely indicate the resolutions passed and suggestions made which are of general interest.

The lack of an organ ed department agriculture in Burma and in Assam was m agriculture in Burma and in Assam was much deplored, and the conference was strongly of opinion that such a department should be arranged, with a staff of expert advisor it this is in any way feasible. With regard it the latter province, it was suggested that the existing experimental stations did not meet the needs of the plains districts which form the larger part of the province, and it would be of great advantage if experiments could be carried on in such districts.

One of the most urgent matters, in the opinion of the conference, in connection with lindian agriculture, is the provision for tobacco curing by the most modern and best methods, lindian agr culture, is the provision for tobacco curing by the most modern and best methods, and a suggestion received its approval that the need of a tobacco expent and a chemist to deal with this matter was an urgent one. Until such a man is available it is not likely that any useful results in this direction will be obtained.

Cons dering the large scheme of agricultur investigation in progress in the Central Prvinces, it was also considered that expositions are urgently needed there.

After considerable further technical discu

sion, the queston was raised as to the possibi-lity of the extension of jute altivation in India, which from the point of view of the Owing to the lack of an organ sed agratural department it was not deemed possion make attempts to extend jute cultivations.

The second day's proceedings dealt with the exceedingly important subjects of irriga-tion, of improvement in cattle breeding, and of culture. With regard to cattle breeding the almost complete failure of nearly every attempt be import high class stock from abroad was pointed out, and there was a general consensus of opinion that much more was likely to be done by selection from the indigenous breeds, whether milk or draught experiments made up to date, to transfer calle from one province to another as a rule, as they nearly always throve less well, and this was especially the case with draught

The principal feature of the day's proings related however to conton culture. The most complete experiments on the subject were reported from Bombay, where indeed extensive attempts have been and are being extensive attempts have been and are being made to improve the local cotton by selection from existing plants, by hybridising various ladian cottons by crossing Indian cottons with types from Egypt and America, and by directly introducing cotton from these countries. It is well known that the introduction of exotic varieties into Indian culture has not been attended, hatherto, with success in any district. Experiments were however reported which indicated that Egyptian cotton chould be fully tested for possible growth in Sind, and it was noted that no less than a thousand acres will be experimentally sown in that district in 1905. district in 1905.

CHOWKIDARI SYSTEM.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Dacca, Jan. 9.

The Chowkidari system is being now organized under a new scheme promulgated by Savage, Commissioner on special duty, in the district of Dacca. In persuance of which Babu Barada Prasad Ganguly, Deputy Magistrate on special duty, visited Subhadya on the 29th December 1904, and requested the villagers there to hold a public meeting to nominate a president of the committee of the Subhadya Union. A public meeting was accordingly held at Subhadya on 1st Jan. last and Babu Parbati Nath Das, a retired last and Babu Parbati Nath Das, a retired Sub-Inspector of Police, was elected under the new scheme and the proceeding of the meeting was submitted to the Magistrate. Babu Jogendra Kumar Bose, Deputy Magistrate, Dacca, came to Subhadya on the 8th Jan. 1905, to select a president of the Subhadya Cnon, when a public meeting, in which above 50% villager representink all creeds and classes attended, was held at his instance. Babu Jogendra Kumar Bose asked if the villagerits wanted Kumar Bose asked if the villagers wanted to suggest unanimously any name to be appointed president. The vilagers suggested the name of Babu Parbati Nath Das, who commanded confidence of the public. Babu Jogendra Kumar Bose then asked if there were any candidates for the post of the president. Babu Sarada Kumar Roy of Subhadya voluntarily offered himself as a candidate for the post, but no one voted for him except own cousin, Babu Dakhina Charam Roy Then votes for Babu Parbati Nath Das were taken and the whole assembly excepting Babu Sarada Kumar Roy and his cousin, voted in his favour. Babu Jogendra Kumar any able person to hold the post of the president, when names of Babu Aditya Charan Chakralbarty, Babu Abhoya Charan Mitra, Babu Paresh Nath Ghosh and Munshi Golam Mustafa were suggested by the public. But the majority of the villagers informed Babu Jogendra Kumar Bose in unmistakable terms that they wanted Babu Parbati Nath Das above all, as they expected honesty and impartiality from him and added that they wished that no Government officer be select ed as president of the Committee. Babu Jogendra Kumar Bose left the meeting saying that he would consider this matter and submit his report within three days. The public are awaiting anxiously to know the relic are awaiting anxiously to know the result. So we see this system will do more harm ultimately than good as it will foster quarrels among the influential willagers. Moreover in a village, it is scarcely possible to find an impartial, educated man for the purpose. Educated men of to-day prefer a own life. They will not agree to serve the Government gratis living in the village, their ultimate object being to earn money living in towns. Zemindars will no doubt be found in sufficient numbers but also the people can scarcely place confidence in them. So ple can scarcely place confidence in them. So another engine of oppression is going to be introduced under the new Choukidary system.

THE ENCYCLOPÆDIA BRITANNICA UP-TO-DATE.

The bringing up to date of the "Encyclipaedia Britannica" is an event which, under any conditions, would attract attention, for the great library (of which the first Edition appeared in 1768) has taken its page as a public institution whereever the English language is read. There were, however, certain curoumstances attaching to the new issue which have made its production a subject of unprecedented interest. There was, in the first place, the interest which every one feels in looking forward to an authoritative record of the events, personalities, discoveries and unovements of his own day-matters of the utmost interest, matters recorded here for the first time. Then again the contributors who, under he editorship of Sir Donald Mackenzie Wallace, collaborated upon the task, were men of the highest standing in public estimation—the dinner to which Sir Donald Mackenzie Wallace invited the Prime Min ter and other guests to meet the contruirs was acknowledged to be the most brillant gathering our time has witnessed. But there is a further reason for the extent to which the appearance of the new issue has accurated public attention. Sold by "THE aroused public attention. The attention, therefore, aroused by the publication of the work was no merely abstract interest, but rather, a personal interest about something which each individual might possess if he chose.

It is this special offer at less than half price and for easy instalments which "THE TIMES" announces in India to-day. As has already happened elsewhere, "THE TIMES" will shortly withdraw in India also from the business of distributing the recently completed work direct to the public—and the price will then be more then doubled. Readers of this paper, therefore, who would like to learn this paper, therefore, who would like to learn fully what the new work is, while it is still to be subscribed for at the special rate, should not fail to read the announcement which appears on another page.

FAREWELL DINNER TO SIR EDWARD | carried him through so many triumphs, and

On Thursday evening His Excellency the Viceroy entertained the Hon'ble Sir Edward Law to a farewell dinner on the occasion Law to a farewell dinner on the occasion of the resignation by the Hou'ble Member of his seat as Finance Member of the Governor-General's Council. The Lieutenant-Governor, the Commander-in-Chief, Sir Charles Rivaz (Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab), and many of the leading officials and members of the mercantile community were present as well as a number of ladies. After dinner when the health of the King-

After dinner when the health of the King-Emperor had been drunk, His Excellency the Viceroy proposed the toast of Sir Edward Law in the following speech:—

Your Excellency, Your Honours, Ladies and Gentlemen,—The strains of the beautiful song to which we have just listened, Schubert's immortal "Adieu," lead me by a Schubert's immortal "Adieu," lead me by a matural transition to the toast of the evening. How quickly our official generations in India come and go may, I think, be illustrated by our experience of tonight. Scarcely six years ago I was entertaining a company in this hall, some of whom are perhaps present here now, to bid an official goodbye to that capable financier, Sir James Westland. Only a year after I was offering a similar farewell to his successor Sir Clinton Drawking. And now we are here again. Drawkins. And now we are here again to extend the righthland of friendship and farewell to our distinguished guest, Sir Edward Law, who, after empleting almost a full term of service in India, is about to retire. To have emjoyed official relations, as I have done, with no fewer than five Finance Ministers—for Mr. Finlay, and now Mr. Baker, must be added to my list makes me feel incredibly old (laughter) from the official point of view, and at the same time reminds me that in addressing Sir Edward Law this evening I may almost say to him "Moriturus to saluto."

Ladies and Gentlemen, there is one feature in which Sir Edward Law has been singularly unlike his predecessors. Since first a Finance Member was appointed in India, he is the only Minister from the outside who has spent anything like his full term of office in this country. Mr. Massey and Lord Cromer, who each stayed the best part of three years, come a respectable second. But the rest are comparatively speaking nowhere. I regard this fact as a testimony both to the interthis fact as a testimony both to the interest which Sir Edward Law has taken in his work and to the success which has attended

him. (Applause.)
There is another respect in which our guest has enjoyed an almost unique position. He has been in closer touch with Commerce (hear, hear) than any Finance Minister of modern times—as indeed any Member for a Department that bears the name, or till late— Department that bears the name, or tall lately bore the name, of Finance and Commerce ought to be Sir Edward Law has been almost as well known to the merchants, let us say of Karachi and Bombay, as he has been to those of Calcutta (applause), and it may be said with truth that the mercantile community throughout the country have appreciated has frank accessibility, his shrewd acumen lassed upon no common experience of men —Based upon no common experience of men and Governments—and his invariable and

Then there is another point. Sir Edward
Law has taken a very genuine and consistent interest in the development of the natural resources of India—in indigo cotton, sugar, jute, and tea; in the manufacturing industries of this country, such as iron and steel, which he has done his best to promote; in railway progress; and last but not least, in that which is the staple industry of the millions of India, namely, agriculture. Now it may perhaps soom to some of rout here. it may perhaps seem to some of you here present a rather curious thing to claim that a Finance Minister should take an interest in objects not purely financial in their chathat is not the case. The Finance Minister in India, who merely devotes himself to figures and to book-keeping, will never leave his mark upon the history of this country; and it is because Sir Edward Law has not looked at his work in India through the looked at his work in India through the narrow spectacles of the accountant but from the wider standpoint of the statesman and man of affairs, that he has attained the success which he has achieved. (Applause.)

I have much to say tonight about pure finance. That is a tolerably stiff dish at any time, and I conceive that to serve it up between a dinner and a dance would be positively inhuman. (Laughter.) None the less, we all know that Sir Edward Law's term of office has synchronised with a period of stability in our national resources, of pros-of stability in our national resources, of prosof stability in our national resources, of pros-perous budgets and reduced taxation, of ex-ansion in the principal sources of revenue, and of a steady strengthening of our finan-cial reserves. He made a speech himself only the other day to the Conference of the Chambers of Commerce here in which he showed how broad is the basis upon which in his judgment the finance and the credit of this country ought to stand; and it is no exaggeration to say that Sir Edward Law has done much by his own labours to realise has done much by his own labours to realise has done much by his own labours to realise his own ideal. (Hear, hear, and appliause.)

Ladies and Gentlemen, there is one presence the loss of which tonight we all deplore and that is the beautiful and accomplished lady, if I may so speak of her, who has shared her husband's labours in India, and who has brightened our dull Northern wits with a more than Athenian vivacity and grace. (Applause.) I request Sir Edward on my behalf and on that of many others, to convey to her our tender and respectful messages of to her our tender and respectful messages of good-will and farewell. (Hear, hear and ap-

I have sometimes heard our guest talk darkly about dim days in the past, I believe in the early seventies, in which he is alleged to have been a somewhat rowdy gunner sub-altern in Calcutta. (Laughter.) I do not know whether concrete evidences of this strange metempsychosis will ever find their way into the Galleries of the Victoria Memoway into the Galleries of the Victoria Memorial Hall. (Laughter.) These stories, however, though they find little confirmation in the present tastes and pursuits of Sir Edward Law (except that I see he is rarely absent from a race-meeting) (laughter) have never created in me any surprise, because they only illustrate that alertness of temperament and versatility of intellect which have in the past carried him through so many triumphs, and will, we hope, lead him to further successes after he has left us.

It is, I am sure, the sincere hope of all the ladies and gentlemen seated at this table, and of many others outside who are included in the ranks of his personal friends, that such successes, and that much future happiness, may lie before him wherever he may be, and it is with these hopes for his future and with grateful remembrance of the future and with grateful remembrance of the service that he has rendered to India, and of the friendship that he has given to those who have been his colleagues in the work of Government that I ask you, Lalies and Government, to join with me tonight in drinking his very good health. (Loud applause.)
The Honble Sir E. Law responded to the toast as follows:—

Your Excellency, Ladies and Gentlemen-When I was a small boy it was impressed upon me, perhaps somewhat vigorously, that little boys might be seen, but should not be heard—and seen as little as possible. I have always been anxious to convince myself of many merits and graces, but even though I have listened with much gratitude to His Excellency's flattering remarks, I fear that I am unable to find a sufficient reason for quitting that path which was laid out for me in my boyhood. Therefore I must not be in my boyhood. Therefore I must not be seen too long upon my legs this evening, nor shall I be heard annoyingly and feebly struggling to express my thanks. I must endeavour to convey in the simplest and shortest words my deep sense of gratitude to His Excellency for the very kind manner in which he has proposed my health and of the numerous friends seated at this table for the manner in which they have received it. I will only add that I have been much touched by His Excellency's kind reference to my by His Excellency's kind reference to my truly better half. I wish she were here this evening. Had she been present I know that she would have experienced a special feeling ofpleasure at what His Excellency has been good enough to say, and she would most certainly have desired me to express our gratitude for the great kindness which we received from Her Excellency Lady Curzon on the occasion of my wife's serious illness and on many other occasions. I am truly glad to think that His Excellency is now relieved of the prolonged strain of anxiety by Lady Curzon's recovery. (Applause.)

STRAY NOTES FROM ASSAM.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Sylhet, Jan. 8. SIR HENRY COTTON AT GAUHATI. The approaching visit of Sir Henry Cotton at Gaulhati is not likely to be attended with any extraordinary upheaval of popular enthusiasm and the reunion will most probably be a very tame affair. Although diligent attempts have been made to secure the attempts have been made to secure the attempts of leaves of a leaves of the secure of t tendance of a large number of Indians of light and leading and personally known to the ex-Proconsul, there is hardly any prospect the ex-Proconsul, there is hardly any prospect of a respectable and representative gathering from all parts of the Province. There is an impression among the local public that the Administration of Assam would not countenance the demonstration in progress and those who will take part in it may be brought to book in some shape or other, and this rumour has in some shape or other, and this rumour has chilled the enthusiasm of a good many friends and admirers of Sir Henry who would otherwise have flocked in large numbers to accord a hearty welcome to the popular exruler of the Province. So far as Surma Valley districts are concerned, Silchar is helding an Industrial Exhibition holding an Industrial Exhibition at the present moment, and the cream and intelli-gence of the district are deeply absorbed in making the Exhibition an unqualified success. Mr. Kamini K. Chanda was invited to join but he being the Vice-Chairman of the Exhibut he being the Vice-Chairman of the Exhibition Committee cannot absent himself from the station without upsetting the existing arrangements. The Raja of Sylhet and a few other leading gentlemen of the district were invited but they have treated this summon to duty with supreme indifference, and not a single gentleman of rank and importance is likely to undergo the faitigue and exposure of a journey to Gauhati when there is no alluring prospect of personal gain, save and except the prerogative of shaking hands with an ex-Governor shorn of his official potency and power.

ASSAM RURAL POLICE.

The fiat has gone forth from the capital of the Province that village community should be formed, and the present system of village Punchayet should be overhauled by introducing the elective system of recruitment and inducing the leading men of the locality to go in for these situations so that the rural police of Assam may be an efficient the rural police of Assam may be an efficient organisation for dealing with the suppression of local crime. Mr. A. Majid of the Assam Commission has been specially deputed to the Assam Valley districts for looking into the possibility of enlisting the co-operation of the village Chowkidari Union for settling of local disputes and the disposal of smaller and less important matters. The idea appears to be to place the village Police and Chowkidars under the supervision of the Revenue officer, and thus do away with the necessity for securing village inspection by Revenue officer, and thus do away with the necessity for securing village inspection by the regular Police. The election of Punchayets seems to be in progress, and an Assistant Commissioner has been deputed to hold local meetings of the tax-payers and obtain the votes of the majority in favour of the intending Punchayets. Your local correspondent had the singular good luck of attending one of these and meetings beneath attending one of these moly-meetings beneath the village Banyan tree under the blue canopy of the midday firmament, when the Assistant Commissioner unacquainted with the manners, customs and even the dialect spoken by the electors, takes his seat in this meeting and asks the electors through his Amla who fulfills the double functions of an interpreter and a ministerial officer, to sig fy their consent by raising their hands great bustle and confusion takes the deliberations and the Huzoor with the result of this grand caer campaign. The upshot of this fusy stration is that the leaders of the value community fight shy of the elective and rerecruitment takes place from the dregs ar dross of the ommunity whom the Government seeks get rid of by this process of elimination or election!

Diego Garcia, where the "Japanese Fleet" somewhat vague term—is reported to have arrived, is the largest islands of the Chagos Archipelago, a group of islands in the Indian Ocean south of the Laccadives and Maldives. If the Japanese are concentrated in any force at this point, their object may possibly be to prevent a junction between the two now united squadrons under Admirals Rozhdestvensky and Foelkersahm and that under Admiral Bostrovosky, last heard of at Port Said. But the story of their presence there, though it seems to have alarmed the Russian Admiral, is probably only an idle rumour based on the ingenious calculations of some amateur strategist. The Chagos Islands are a British possession, and it is to be presumed that the British Government have taken measures to prevent a breach of its neutrality, at this and other points of the Indian Ocean, by either beiligerent, especially as the Archipelago lies on the Baltic Fleet's most direct course to the Far Bast. From the Chagos Islands to Batavia (Dutch) is 2,090 miles; Batavia to Saigon (French) 1,100; Saigon to Formosa (Japanese) 1,000; Formosa to 1zu Islands (off Japan) ,400; and the Izu Islands to Vladivostok 1,000. Even if, however, the Baltic Fleet succeeds in evading the attentions of the Japanese fleat for some time to come it is quite evident that the rest of its journey is not going to be altogether "plain sailing."—"Pioneer."

In deciding whether a note or report should be published in bulletin or ledger form, the principle to be followed is that what is published for the information of the reader should go into the Ledgers, while what is circulated in order to obtain further matter for the information of the writer should go into the Bulletins.

21. Proposals have already been submitted to the Government of India recommending that the publication on Entomology known as "Indian Museum Notes" should be given up in favour of a somewhat similar publication, to be entitled "Notes on Entomology.' and to be edited by the Entomologist to the Government of India. It is intended that this publication should be a common medium for the publication of the results of work done in India by the Government Entomologist, by provincial officers and by private contributors.

25. The varying local conditions make it impossible to lay down any definite scheme, but the followitg measures have been suggested, some of which may be found suit-
