Smriti Sanjiban.

Nervous and Mental Overstrain give rise to a wide range of nerve and brain disorders, and frequently lead to complete breakdown of nervous prostration. Unfortunately, ailments of the kind referred to seem almost inseparable from modern conditions of life. Business and professional men, Teachers, Writers, Students, all who bear a heavy burden of responsibility, and those whose social duties make heavy demands on their Nervous and Mental powers, are liable to suffer more or less constantly.

There are innumerable so-called remedies for nervous overstrain that are offered. These in many cases merely exert a stimulating effect on the nervous system and by compelling fresh effort without renewing the nerve-tissue they further strain and injure the nervous system.

SMRITI SANJIBAN GHRITA with the particular elements which are worn away by severe mental effort, and the loss of which leaves the Nervous System weakened and impoverished. SMRITI SANJIBAN GHRITA replenishes the reserve of nerve-power as fast as it is drawn upon.

SMRITI SANJIBAN GHRITA is a Guaranteed Cure for Giddiness, Headache, Brain-fag, Loss of Memory, Weakness of Sight and Hearing, Nervous Debility, Hypochondriasis, Mental and Physical Lassitude, Despondency, Reluctance for Work, Exhaustion and all complaints of the Nervous System.

CRIMINAL BENCH

(Before Justices Henderson and Geldt.)

A RULE DISCHARGED.

Mr. S. Roy appeared in support of a Rule issued on the Deputy Commissioner of Government to show cause why the order of the Sessions Judge dismissing the appeal should not be set aside and appeal directed to be re-heard on the ground that there is no finding as to the acts constituting offence which each of the appellants is convicted of having committed. This rule was issued on the 5th December last by Justices Geldt and Mukherjee. The facts are shortly these. One Hemodhar complained that his bullocks were taken away by Fidelia one of the six petitioners; the Police went to Fidelia's house and got back the bullocks. It was alleged that while the Police were taking the bullocks away the petitioners Fidelia and others came upon them and in their attempt to take back the cattle assaulted one head constable by name Pannua. On the complaint of Pannua, Fidelia and five others were tried by the Extra Asst. Commissioner of Darrang and convicted under Sec. 353 I.P.C. Fidelia was sentenced to 3 months and others to 2 months' similar imprisonment each. These six men were also convicted in a separate trial under Sec. 147 and 342 I.P.C. by the same Extra Asst. Commissioner and were sentenced as follows: Fidelia to 2 months' and others to 1 month's each; and the trying Magistrate, who also tried case under Sec. 147 I.P.C. in the case under Sec. 353 I.P.C. ordered that the sentence under Sec. 353 I.P.C. was to take effect after the expiry of the sentence in the ruling case. The order of the Extra Asst. Commissioner was dated 17th May 1904. When the appeal was made on behalf of the petitioners there were two petitioners one against the conviction under Sec. 147 I.P.C. and the other under Sec. 353 I.P.C. The former was rejected while a rule was issued in the toher under Sec. 353 I.P.C. So their appeal court judgment was dated 18th October 1904.

On the rule coming on, the learned counsel submitted that except against Fidelia and one Bathu, there is no evidence as against the remaining four. And as to that their lordships satisfied themselves in looking into the evidence. But then it was found out that these four men had already served out their total sentence viz. one under Sec. 147 and the other under Sec. 353 I.P.C. So their Lordships discharged the rule saying that no doubt there was evidence against Fidelia and Bathu, but as the remaining four men had already served out their time, there was no use of sending the case back to the Sessions Judge for rehearing the appeal.

ORIGINAL SIDE.

(Before Mr. Justice Woodroffe.)

A DIVORCE CASE.

MABEL CRANENBURGH VS. A. M. CRANENBURGH.

Buckland instructed by Messrs Leslie and Hunt appeared for the plaintiff Mrs. Mabel Cranenburgh. The respondent A.M. Cranenburgh was not present in court nor was he represented by any one. This was the petition on marriage on the grounds of cruelty and adultery on the part of her husband. She also asked for custody of the two children by this marriage one of whom was born on the 4th September 1902 and the other on the 22nd of January last year. The plaintiff in this case is the daughter of the late Mr. D.E. Cranenburgh the well-known pleader of the Calcutta Police court. On the 22nd July 1901 she was married in the United Free Church of Scotland, Calcutta, to A.M. Cranenburgh. On the 16th January 1902 her father, Mr. D.E. Cranenburgh died. Shortly after that the respondent began to ill-treat his wife, the plaintiff. The quarrel began in February 1902. The respondent used to strike the plaintiff constantly. On the 8th August 1902 the plaintiff drew Rs. 60 from the office of the Administrator General of Bengal on account of her share. Her husband pressed her to give that money to him. She refused as her husband would spend the money in gambling. The respondent struck her that time. At that time they were residing at house no 40 Upper Circular Road. In December 1902 they removed from that house. On the 4th June 1903 owing to constant ill-treatment that she was subjected to the plaintiff left the respondent and went with her child to the house of her married sister. The respondent followed her, seized the child and refused to give the child to her. Consequently she returned with the respondent. They went to house No. 14 Upper Circular Road, where her husband's people lived. While there her husband struck her. On the 11th July 1903 the respondent, who was still in debt, wanted some more money from the plaintiff who refused. She then went to her sister's house. The respondent came to her on that day, next day, and on the third day also. On the 13th July 1903 which was the third day she came—there was a scene. The respondent assaulted the plaintiff and tried to take her away, but she refused to go; since that day she had never gone to the respondent. On the 14th July a charge was laid in the Police Court against the respondent, but eventually on the respondent giving an undertaking not to molest her any further the matter was allowed to drop. As regards adultery on the part of the respondent the latter was seen, between December 1903 to January 1904, several times to go to the houses of ill fame. He was also seen coming out sometime later.

Several witnesses were examined after which His Lordship ordered a decree "nisi" and the custody of the children with costs under Scale no 1.

A EDITOR'S OPINION.—John S. was Esq., editor and proprietor "Guardian and Star," Hokitika, New Zealand, said: "I have found Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a very valuable medicine, having received great benefit from its use when suffering from a cold, and as a preventive for croup in children its excellent properties have been testified in my family." CORPORATION OF CALCUTTA.

The eleventh ordinary monthly meeting of the Corporation of Calcutta was held at the Town Hall on Wednesday at 4 p.m. The Honble Mr. R. T. Greer, Chairman of the Corporation presided, and there were about thirty-five Commissioners present.

NEW SUB REGISTRARS.

The proposal from the Magistrate of the 24-Perghannas for a contribution of Rs. 25 a month by the Corporation towards the expense of maintaining Sub Registrars at some of the burial and burning grounds in the Suburban Municipality was carried.

THE VICTORIA MEMORIAL.

One of the items was to consider the Report of the Special Committee appointed to consider the letter received from the Government of Bengal in connection with the preparation of a list of articles suitable for presentation to the Victoria Memorial Hall.

The Special Committee's Report.—The Special Committee having considered the letter received from K. Nathan, Esq., I.C.S., Private Secretary to His Excellency the Viceroy, dated 28th December 1904, unanimously resolved to recommend the Corporation to accede to the invitation of the President of the Victoria Memorial Hall Trustees to lend to the Trustees the marble bust of the Duke of Wellington and the Equestrian picture of Lord Lake, now in the Town Hall, for present exhibition in the Indian Museum and afterwards in the Victoria Memorial Hall. The Special Committee are of opinion that the loan of the bust and picture will create no serious gap in the collection now in the Town Hall.—(Sd.) R. T. Greer (Chairman), W. H. Phelps, K. C. Banerji.

I cannot support this recommendation for several reasons. In the first place I fail to comprehend what "locus standi" Mr. Nathan has in this matter. As I understand the case, the Corporation has referred to us for consideration a communication from the Trustees of the Victoria Memorial Hall: and nothing else is properly before us. We have duly considered the communication from the Trustees and agreed upon a report which was somehow or other published in the "Englishman." No sooner was this done than we are favoured with this letter from Mr. Nathan, but who seeks to induce us to modify our report. The procedure is singular, to say the least of it: and I cannot acquiesce in it. Secondly, I object to allowing any of the pictures and busts in the Town Hall to be exhibited in the Indian Museum. This is an entirely different matter to lending them to the Victoria Memorial Hall. The proposal as it seems to me is altogether premature; and should stand over until the "Twentieth Century Taj" has become a reality. Lastly, I have the strongest aversion to the permanent removal of any of our property from the upper floor of the Town Hall.—H. E. A. Cotton.

Mr. Cotton said that he wanted to draw the attention of the Commissioners as regards the question of procedure adopted in this matter. The motion, as it stood, was very easy to understand. A letter was received from the Government of Bengal. That letter was referred to the Special Committee for consideration. They duly considered the matter and arrived at a conclusion. That report of the Special Committee was attached to the agenda paper of the last monthly meeting. It was drawn up and signed by every member of the Committee. Mr. Cotton wanted to know why that report was not put in. He submitted that after the drawing up of that report their functions had come to an end. The report of the proceedings of the Special Committee, somehow or other found its way into the columns of the "Englishman," newspaper. No sooner was this done than they were favoured with a letter which was to modify their report. This was a letter from the Private Secretary to His Excellency the Viceroy. Mr. Cotton to the letter and said that in the next meeting he would move that the Honble Judges be asked to consider some things of the picture and several documents. The Honble Judges could do what they liked, but the Corporation could not do that. In that letter it was stated that the presentations would be seen by a large number of people at the Indian Museum. He declined to admit that and said that the Town Hall, which was a public place, was also visited by a large number of people. They had agreed to lend two effigies when the "Twentieth Century Taj" had been finished. He submitted that the Commissioners were incompetent to consider the letter. Their report had been set at naught. He then gave the Commissioners a word of warning and asked them to be very careful. If they agreed to the proposal they would find that one by one, everything they had got, would be carried away and there would be nothing in the Town Hall. This was a very dangerous precedent. They were trustees of all these things only and they were representing the people of Calcutta. He submitted that the report be rejected. Mr. Kali Charan Banerji moved that they should accede to the invitation to lend the marble bust of the Duke of Wellington and the picture of Lord Lake to the Indian Museum.

Mr. Cotton asked for a point of order. The Chairman said that Mr. Kali Charan Banerjee could move that the report be adopted.

Mr. Kali Charan Banerji said it was true that when the Special Committee was appointed they were asked to consider the letter received from the Government of Bengal. Their business was to prepare a list of articles and not to consider the letter. When they prepared the list they had no communication at all as to what the trustees of the Victoria Memorial Hall would like to have. In their own motion the Special Committee prepared the list. They had every right to reconsider the list. It was stated by Mr. Cotton that the letter came from the Private Secretary to H.E. the Viceroy. The Viceroy as President of the Trustees expressed opinion of all the trustees through his Private Secretary. The Special Committee considered it a loan; so long it was a loan and not a gift it was in the power of the Special Committee to lend them. As far as the public were concerned Mr. Cotton had said that these exhibits would be seen by a large number of men at the Town Hall, but Mr. Banerjee thought that a large number of people would see them at the Indian Museum. He was sure that the Corporation would proper that the original report should not be taken the same view. It was only right and placed before the Corporation when the second letter had already come. He believed, therefore, that they were quite in order in considering the motion.

The Chairman said that the report had been practically replaced by the subsequent report.

Mr. Apar said that he was in fullest sympathy with the object in view. He said that these articles were in public place and that it was not necessary to transfer any of them to the Indian Museum. He did not think that the Special Committee had any authority to go so far. He found himself in great difficulty. On the one hand, he confessed, he would be sorry to allow those articles to be taken from the Town Hall to the Indian Museum; while on the other hand he felt greater difficulty in refusing the request.

Rai Bahadur Sita Nath Roy supported the motion.

Babu Prys Nath Mullick said that he would not say anything either in favour of the mover nor against Mr. Cotton. He asked them to remember the result when they declined to grant sanction to the covered veranda of the Government House.

Babu Radha Churn Pal said that those articles should be lent by the Corporation. He wanted that the words "but by the Corporation" be affixed in a conspicuous part of those articles.

The Chairman accepted the amendment of Babu Radha Churn Pal and said that a great deal of discussion had taken place and that one important point had been left out. They should remember that it was a memorial to the memory of the late Queen Victoria. It was with that sole object that they were requested to make those small loans.

The motion was then put to the vote and carried.

The meeting was then adjourned to Wednesday next.

WHERE GOVERNMENT HAS A FREE HAND.

It is desirable in our own interests that we should study the policy of the Government in those portions of the Empire where it has a free hand. Not that we hear much grumbling from those quarters, for the very obvious reason that the opportunities for it are not available. It is, in our judgment, most important that we should get insight into the run of genuine thought in high quarters and find out, from plain facts, what our statesmen like doing when they feel sure of their game. The recent decennial Indian census offers us one of those useful opportunities. Three hundred millions of souls, all as easily and recklessly handled as sheep, furnish good practice, and very sound lessons in the fine art of modern government. The revenue from land, during the period dealt with, averaged about £18,500,000 per annum. Customs revenue averaged nearly £4,000,000 and their respective costs of collection totalled up to nearly four millions sterling for land and over £160,000 for the other. The Indian tariff is simple. There is a general duty of 5 per cent. "ad valorem" on imports, Cotton are subject to a special duty of three-and-a-quarter per cent. Iron and steel pay a duty of 1 per cent. Petroleum is charged one penny per gallon. Rice pays an export duty of four pence per hundredweight. This rice duty and the import duty on all cotton goods are the largest items in the Customs revenue, and, because of decrease in the cotton imports from England, it is expected this tax will soon be raised in order to bring in better returns. Indian cotton goods pay excise duty, which is about equally onerous with the import duties levied on British and other cotton manufactures and American cotton, either raw or when turned into yarn, pays its way through the Indian Customs house. The salt monopoly, so stringently carried out by the Indian Government, is the least defensible of all the methods in use for getting at Indian pockets. The profits on the monopoly of salt by the Government in British India averages over five millions sterling per annum; the gross returns of the tax amount to more than six millions a year, but the cost of collection is great, a huge Government department maintained for this purpose consuming annually over £500,000. The chronic poverty of India makes it impossible for natives to procure sufficient salt for consumption, and they are unable to preserve meat and fish as is done in other hot climates. Cattle also suffer from lack of salt. In England we consume 62lb. of salt per annum, per head of our population. The Indian average is under 13lb. per head. Medical opinion goes to show that the indispensable minimum salt consumption should be 25lb. per head of the total population, and it is affirmed that less than this must detrimentally affect health. Scarcity of salt predisposes to leprosy, cholera, and plague, and is very injurious to some animals. Experts maintain that the consumption of salt could be trebled in India, were the duties lowered to a reasonable figure. When Burmah became a British state she had a well-established business and export trade in salted fish; under the evil influence of the salt monopoly, this trade has disappeared and dealings in opium and spirits have in part replaced it. The collection and enforcement of the tax is most harassing as salt is a natural product of India, and can be saved to easily in some districts that it needs continual watchfulness to hinder illicit production. Passing along a high road, cattle will find and lick salt rocks, and in some districts salt is found wherever the shallow surface water has been dried up by the sun. Nevertheless it pays to import salt into India from Great Britain, so high is its artificial price, there and so watchful is the Indian Government. The loss of human and animal life in India from the attacks of beasts of prey is deplorable, as many as 24,576 persons and 96,226 cattle were killed in this way during the last year of the decennial period we are referring to, and this record is by no means abnormal or unusual. Crops also suffer greatly, and much of this evil work could be easily prevented were natives allowed the use of arms but unfortunately this is not the case. Strict Arms Acts are enforced and Indians are now so unpractised that even with free permission they could not do much with firearms for many a long day. Such are some of the main features of commonplace life within our great Indian Empire. Other features are well worth our attention, such as the laws regulating Labour and permitting long hours and employment of children, in a manner quite unknown amongst us at home. Not only do we get insight into study of class rule in subjugated dependencies, but we also find good reason to apprehend the influence of semi-slave cheap labour brought into such close connection as is the Indian labour with our home workers.

INDIAN NOTES.

MAULED BY LEOPARD.

Mr. Gillilan, Manager of the Golden Streams Syndicate Rangoon, has been badly mauled by a leopard at Myittsa, Tavoy. Hearing some noise in his fowl house at night he went out to enquire, and on entering it was attacked by a leopard, which badly lacerated his face, head, and body. When the last mail left Mr. Gillilan was in a serious condition.

"THE MARRIAGE TAX" IN MYSORE.

The Mysore Infant Marriage Regulation was for a number of years left inoperative by the District authorities and it is only lately that cases are being detected with special effort. But the punishments—of fine inflicted in all the cases—were too small to be of any deterrent value and the parties convicted paid fines without a murmur, as a kind of marriage tax. In fact where a parent married his young girl, he would first of all set apart a small sum to pay as fine to the Government. A recent Government order on the subject enjoins on the District authorities to inflict deterrent punishment so as to discourage the tendency of considering the fine as part and parcel of the marriage expenses. It is rather hard to appreciate the spirit of this G.O. Fines are only intended to be levied very sparingly, and in comparatively small sums.

PURCHASE OF GIRLS.

It appears that Brahmins are in the habit of coming to Karachi for the purpose of obtaining girls by purchase, or otherwise, to taking them to their native country. We recently noticed the case of two Kutchi women who were being thus taken away, but gave the men the slip, and being placed before a Magistrate were discharged. We now learn that three Brahmins, who stated that they were residents of Khairpur Nadushah but were going in the direction of Ronri, purchased three girls here on Sunday, the 15th instant, for Rs. 70, Rs. 80 and Rs. 100 each and took them away by the same evening's mail train. A correspondent who happened to be a passenger by the train informs us that he noticed that on arrival at Jangshahi one of the girls was taken out of the train by her relatives, to which the Brahmin objected and attempted to take the girl from them, but they resisted, and the matter was eventually reported to the police who are no doubt enquiring into it. We would draw the attention of the authorities to the case, as this kind of traffic should not be permitted, and there is no knowing what eventually becomes of these unfortunate girls.—"Sind Gazette."

WITHHOLDING OF THE POLICE COMMISSION REPORT.

The Government of India does not yet see the necessity of giving full publicity to the report of the Police Commission presented over by Sir Andrew Fraser. The London Correspondent of the "Times of India" assigns a strange reason for the action of the Indian Government in withholding the report. He says that the report recommends many drastic improvements in the Police Department and to carry out these improvements the expenditure of the Police Department will have to be more than doubled. On the other hand the Government of India is busy in making the North-West frontier of India invulnerable and also in extending the sphere of English influence over countries which lie beyond the Indian frontiers. So all the surpluses which have for a number of years accumulated in the Government of India's treasury will have as a first charge on them the increased military expenditure consequent on the change in the foreign policy pursued by the Viceroy. Little money will thus be left to carry out the various reforms which are suggested by the Fraser Commission. When the Government of India in consultation with Mr. Brodrick have decided upon the exact nature of the improvement to be effected in the Police they will think of giving publicity to the report. Till then it is bound to be concealed in the secret archives of Government. We are indeed sorry that urgent Police reforms which are so vitally concerned with the practical administration of even handed justice should be deferred owing to the ambitious designs of military authorities.—"Maharatta."

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT OF THE COUNTRY.

One of the questions which the new Railway Board may well take up at an early date is the question of rates for goods traffic, as the regulation of these is undoubtedly a great factor in the economic development of the country. A cheap tariff to and from the coast acts as a direct stimulant to both export and import trade. The produce of the soil will find its way to foreign markets more readily if it can be carried at low rates to the big ports, while similarly manufactured goods will be more in demand if the cost of transit inland is lessened. In the matter also of industries which depend on steam-power a lowering of the rates for carriage of coal will have a most beneficial effect. Coal can be produced at the pit's mouth more cheaply in India than in any other country in the world, and yet in districts far removed from the Bengal and other coalfields the price per ton is exorbitantly high. This is entirely due to the railway charges, and until these are reduced no great expansion of the manufacturing industries can take place. India is a country of long distances, and the haulage of coal is an expensive business. Some of the railways even use large quantities of fire coal imported to Bombay and Karachi, a fact which goes to prove that the inland rates of carriage are too high. The Railway Board will not, of course, be in a position to impose terms upon the Traffic Departments of the various lines, but they can deal with the subject on broad principles and initiate a policy of suggestion which may have good results. In this matter of coal, for example, a beginning has been made by the East Indian Railway, which lowered its tariff some months ago. The effect has been a remarkable expansion of traffic, the increased earnings showing how profitable a business is being done. In other lines follow the example that has thus been set the economic effect eventually produced will be very far-reaching.—"Pioneer."

THE BOMBAY EXHIBITION.

The Industrial Exhibition which is being held at B-mbay, and which closes on the 5th proximo, has so far proved very successful, and there is every reason to believe that there will be a large balance on hand. Up to Sunday last the turnstiles showed that 385,000 people had paid for admission, the "gate-money" received amounting to Rs. 1,53,000. It is estimated on a basis of the figures from the opening of the exhibition till a few days ago, that the total disbursements of the Committee, for all purposes connected with the exhibition, will amount finally to Rs. 2,72,700, and this figure may be reduced to Rs. 2,20,800, by deducting the sum of Rs. 51,900, which represents the amount it is hoped to realise by the sale of building materials and so forth. By the middle of this month, the Committee, putting together their gate money and Rs. 32,000 received in the way of donations and Rs. 21,000 paid by advertisers for spaces, were able to show a balance to their credit of about Rs. 4,000. By Sunday night this amount had been increased to Rs. 23,000, all of which reckons as clear profit, and it is now fairly reasonable to suppose that the Committee will be able to close their accounts with nearly Rs. 50,000 in hand.

CAPTAIN RYDER AND HIS PARTY.

When the party under Captain Ryder, which is returning from Tibet via Simla, reaches India, they will have some very valuable information to impart. The party left Simla on the 11th November, Captain Ryder following the Tang-po, while Captain Wood surveyed the trade route, meeting again at Ladum on the 16th. The whole party then followed the river to its source, encountering bad weather in crossing the Miriam La on the watershed. The Manasarovar and Rakas Tal lakes were surveyed and examined. The two lakes are connected by a channel, through which water was not then flowing, but the Tibetans all agreed that for four months of the year there was a good flow. About half a mile below the outlet from the Manasarovar lake, a hot water spring exists which keeps up a constant flow into the Rakas Tal. From the latter lake there is no outflow, but according to native accounts the lake used to flow into the Sutlej, 40 years ago. The source of the Sutlej has, therefore, to be placed some distance west of its position on the old maps. The party then visited Garok, crossing by an easy spash. Owing to the time of year there were very few inhabitants, but the whole village consists of a few hovels, the traders, who visit the place in summer, living in tents. Returning to the Sutlej valley by a pass about 19,000 feet in height, the party followed the river down to British territory, having two bad snow passes to cross. They reached the frontier on the 24th December, when work ceased. The total area surveyed was approximately 40,000 square miles in addition to which a large area of triangulation was completed and many new snow peaks were fixed, none however rivaling Mount Everest as the highest peak in the world.—"I. SUSPENSION OF A RULING CHIEF.

The following proclamation has been issued by the Madras Government: "Whereas the Nawab Syed Fatah Ali Khan Bahadur, O.S.I. Jagirdar of Banganapalle, has, by persistent extravagance, involved himself deeply in debt and impoverished the administration of the Jagir, and has persistently disregarded the advice, remonstrances, and warnings of the Governor of Fort St. George in Council, and has persistently obstructed the proposals for reform in the administration urged on him by the Governor of Fort St. George in Council; and whereas it is provided by the terms of the "Sanad" granted by the Governor in Council of Fort St. George to Hussain Ali Khan, second Jagirdar of Banganapalle and confirmed in that of the Nawab Syed Fatah Ali Khan, that the Jagirdar of Banganapalle is answerable to the British Government for the good administration of the said Jagir, and that if ever it should happen that in consequence of misgovernment, the interposition of the paramount Power should become necessary the Governor of Fort St. George in Council will take such measures as may appear just and proper for restoring order and providing for the security of the people; the Governor of Fort St. George in Council, considering that the misgovernment of the Nawab Syed Fatah Ali Khan should be stayed, and further injury to the Jagir prevented, accordingly, with the concurrence and sanction of the Government of India, and under the terms of the "Sanad" of 1849, and in virtue of the responsibility of the British Government towards the people of the Jagir, hereby declares that the said Nawab Fatah Ali Khan Bahadur is removed temporarily from the direct administration of Banganapalle Jagir, which is assumed by the Governor of Fort St. George in Council. This decision will have effect from the 1st February 1905. During the period for which powers of direct administration are withdrawn the said Nawab Fatah Ali Khan Bahadur will be granted from the revenue of the Jagir such allowance for his personal maintenance and expenditure as the Governor in Council may from time to time determine."

A recent decision by the Mysore Government has done away with the system of remunerating Taluq Sheristadars whenever they officiated for the Sub-Registrars "in addition to their duties" according to the value of the income realised during the period in registering the deeds. The rule now enforced is that a consolidated allowance of Rs. 10 per month may be given to the "in charge" Sheristadar for the extra duties done.

A year ago the Government of the United Provinces acquired for the Provincial Museum at Lucknow a valuable collection of coins belonging to Mr. R. W. Ellis. That collection consisted entirely of coins of the Mughal period. Another portion of Mr. Ellis' collection has just been acquired for the Museum. The new purchase includes coins of the Græco-Bactrian, Saka, and Kushan periods, and comprises four Tetradrachms, 23 Didrachms, 46 Hemidrachms, 14 gold and 218 copper coins. While not such a valuable set as the Mughals, the coins of the new purchase belong to series which are somewhat poorly represented in the Museum collection.

CALCUTTA, FEBRUARY 5, 1905.

FIGHT BETWEEN TWO MOST IMPORTANT INDIAN OFFICIALS.

It is quite possible that the Viceroy and the Secretary of State for India come into collision now and then. This happens frequently when the former is a strong man and the latter weak. But these differences are rarely, if ever, permitted to become public. For, when the most important personage in the world, the Secretary of State for India, quarrels with the other most important personage in the world, the Indian Viceroy, they do not quarrel in the god-like way they ought to do from their celestial position; but they fight just like ordinary men betraying all the frailties of the human race. We have never seen how two lions fight, but we can guarantee that if they fight, they must fight just like two cats.

And thus it is that the "Times" is very much concerned to see that the present difference between the Viceroy and Mr. Brodrick should come to light. The spectacle may not be agreeable to a paper like the "Times," but it is very pleasing to common humanity to see big officials fighting like ordinary people. For it conveys a very useful moral. In India the spectacle is especially pleasing to the people. To them, the fight is something like that of the Moghul with the Pathan.

The quarrel between Mr. Brodrick and Lord Amthill relating to the Tibetan question is perhaps due to the fact that the former has not as yet been able to secure that respect for himself which is due to the position he occupies. Two years ago, when there was a talk of Mr. Brodrick being appointed as Viceroy in the place of Lord Curzon, an official of the highest position wrote to us to say that, the English Government would never commit such an egregious blunder. All the same, he was immediately after installed to a position which is superior to that of the Viceroy. It is also true that, in spite of his average ability, Mr. Brodrick is a man of dogged obstinacy and will not yield a point which he has taken up in earnest. This was quite evident when he, as War Secretary, had a tussle with Lord Curzon through Lord George Hamilton as Indian Secretary of State, with reference to the increase of the pay of the British soldier, in India in which he won.

As regards the present quarrel, we must say, Mr. Brodrick is in the right. It was known to the Government of India as well as to Sir Frank Younghusband that, the British Government had repeatedly declared to the world that, it would never occupy any territory in Tibet. Mr. Brodrick was therefore surprised when he came to see the terms of the Lhasa treaty, specially the amount of the indemnity. He, therefore, hastened to telegraph on the 13th September that the indemnity clause of the treaty was inconsistent with his previous instructions, inasmuch as the method of payment implied the occupation of the Chumbi Valley for 75 years, to which he objected. He suggested a reduction of the indemnity to 25 lakhs payable in three years, but "no troops should remain for the purpose of obtaining more favourable terms." Sir Frank, no doubt backed by the Government of India, deprecated the alteration in the treaty as proposed by the Secretary of State on the ground that, it "would confuse the Tibetans and be likely to defeat the object of the Mission."

The argument of Sir Younghusband was not appreciated by Mr. Brodrick. Indeed, he could not understand why a reduction of the indemnity, instead of pleasing the Tibetans, would confuse them. He therefore again telegraphed to the Government of India on the 3rd of October pointing out that, while the Home Government generally approves Sir Younghusband's convention, it was framed in defiance of express instructions. Indeed, said the Secretary of State, Sir Frank, by accepting the proposal for the payment to be spread over a period of 75 years, had violated a most important part of the instructions, which was that the indemnity should be limited to a sum which the Tibetans could pay in three years, and if the Tibetans were to break the treaty, it would be then necessary to reconsider the policy of the Government which aims at non-interference with the internal affairs of Tibet. Meanwhile, Mr. Brodrick went on to remark, the Home Government "cannot accept the situation created by disobedience of orders by its representative." This was a slap not only in the face of Colonel Younghusband but that of the Government of India.

The Government of India now took the side of Colonel Younghusband and showed some fight. They had of course no option but to carry out the order of the Secretary of State, so, in spite of the emphatic assertion of Sir Frank that, "a smaller indemnity payable in three years would have still left a sense of oppression and would have aroused a nasty racial feeling," they were obliged to send a despatch to the Tibetan Government saying that, their indemnity was reduced to 25 lakhs and that the occupation of the Chumbi Valley was to cease after the payment of three annual instalments. At the same time, one Government of Lord Amthill expressed some resentment at the severe censure passed upon Colonel Younghusband by Mr. Brodrick, and contended that when the valuable services rendered by the Colonel were fully realised, His Majesty's Imperial Government would not withhold from him their generous measure of approval.

In his reply to the above dated the 2nd December, Mr. Brodrick while fully recognising the services of Colonel Younghusband, read the following lecture to the Government of India:—

"The fact that it was necessary to reverse Colonel Younghusband's action in reference to two matters, Mr. Brodrick says, is a sufficient indication of the serious nature of his disregard to instructions. Mr. Brodrick says that His Majesty's Imperial Government on the 3rd August had negatived 'your request for a modification of the previous decision with reference to the trade Agent having access to Lhasa and the prolonged occupation of the Chumbi Valley as they have been inconsistent with the repeated declarations of His Majesty's Imperial Government. In a despatch dated the 5th August I called your attention to the fact that the questions regarding the Indian Frontier Policy are no longer regardable exclusively from the Indian standpoint and that the course to be pursued in such cases must be laid down by His Majesty's Imperial Government alone, and it was essential that this should be borne in mind by those entrusted with the affairs wherein the external relations of India were involved, and not to forget under the pressure of problems on the spot, the necessity of conforming with the instructions of His Majesty's Imperial Government who have more immediately before them the interests of the Empire as a whole."

Here is a most important declaration. Mr. Brodrick says that, it is to be distinctly understood that the Government of India should have nothing to do with questions wherein the external relations of India were involved, and that it is His Majesty's Imperial Government alone which should control such affairs. That being so, are we to understand that this Tibetan expedition owes its origin to the Home Government and not to the Government of Lord Curzon? That the cost of this expedition has been thrust upon the people of India?

We have, in the above, referred to a tussle between Lord Curzon and Mr. Brodrick. This was a triangular fight. Mr. Brodrick, as War Secretary, proposed to raise the pay of the British Army, thereby entailing upon Indian revenues an annual charge of £786,000. Lord George Hamilton, as Indian Secretary of State, at first opposed the proposal, but was ultimately led by the nose by Mr. Brodrick. When Lord Curzon came to know all about the matter, he entered a strong protest on behalf of the people of India. In his telegram dated 8th March, 1902, he expressed "regret that Government of India were not given an opportunity of stating their views before decision was arrived at, and that we received no official intimation until it was on the eve of being announced to Parliament."

In his telegraphic despatch Lord Curzon further protested that "British soldiers are already sufficiently well paid in this country," and that "from the Indian standpoint, we know of no grounds for increasing their remuneration." Lord Hamilton, however, threw Lord Curzon over-board, and agreed to Mr. Brodrick's proposal of settling the question by arbitration, in spite of the Viceroy's strong opposition. The result was that the unfortunate people of this country were sacrificed at the altar of Imperialist greed and selfishness. We expressed our deep gratitude to Lord Curzon at the time for his noble efforts to save the Indians from this heavy military burden.

As regards the Tibet imbroglio, what is the result of it all? The so-called treaty of Lhasa, as we all know, has not yet been ratified, and is not likely to be. So what does it matter, whether the indemnity is reduced or enhanced and made payable for three or seventy-five years? Now suppose the indemnity is not paid, will the Government of India undertake another expedition to exert it? So all this butchery and expenditure of money have served no purpose, and it is now confusion all along the line. The only pleasing feature of the transaction is this quarrel between the Government of India and the Secretary of State and the discomfiture of the London "Times."

POLITICAL AGITATION IN ENGLAND.

As the rulers of India are getting more and more self-willed, the people of the country, who want their grievances removed, are also, in their turn, showing less disposition to appeal to them for redress. Naturally, they are seeking other methods. One of these methods is agitation in England, that is to say, an appeal to the English people, who are the masters of the rulers here. The National Congress has, therefore, made some arrangement to carry out this idea. We have, however, ventured to point out in these columns that there is another method which the National Congress can adopt, with better results, that is to say, the carrying out of an agitation in India. Our best conviction is that an agitation in India is likely to serve the cause of the country better than one in England. In short, if agitation in England is necessary, it is still more necessary in India. Nay, an agitation in England will mean very little, if we can not carry on a systematic and sustained agitation here.

Suppose we have 200 districts in India, and in each district we appoint an agent, and a leader or a committee, for the purpose of teaching the people, that, as British subjects, they enjoy all the privileges of Englishmen; that the Royal Proclamation of 1858 enumerates all these privileges in distinct language; that the terms of the Proclamation are not obeyed for selfish reasons by the rulers sent out here by the English people, and that they should insist that the pledges, given by the Queen in the name of God, should be obeyed. If the people were educated in this way, and if they were to come forward and unitedly demand the rights assured to them by their late sovereign, it would not be possible for those who rule them to treat their request with a light heart.

The Congress leaders have however made no provision for agitation in India. And for this there is good reason. When the illustrious founder of the Congress, Mr. Hume, came to the former Editor of this journal for consultation about this institution, the veteran Indian patriot suggested to him to inaugurate a course of agitation in India and educate the masses. He said that before constructing the top, the base must be erected. The Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale will tell you that, that was exactly the view of our late illustrious countryman, Mr. Ranade. Mr. Hume agreed in this view; but he contended that as English friends of India could not mix with the general body of the people in this country, so what they could do was to take part in the work of agitation in England, and it was not possible for them to render any help as regards the political education of the masses in India.

In this view Mr. Hume was right. As then, so it is now, the Congress is in the hands of some of our illustrious friends in England. They naturally propose works in which they can take a part directly, and hence they have organized a course of agitation in England, and left the work of agitation in India to take care of itself.

Yet we insist that an agitation in India is essential for our salvation. We shall discuss this question in a future issue. Let us to-day see how the agitation in England should be conducted.

We said the other day that thirty-nine millions of Englishmen, out of forty or forty-two in the whole of England, are not interested in seeing India mis-governed. On the other hand, they would gladly render every help in securing for us a really good rule. That they do not help us is due to the fact that they are either ignorant of the real state of affairs in India, or they put absolute trust in the one-sided reports of the Indian officials about the situation here. That being the case, one way to save India from utter collapse is to awaken the leaders of these thirty-nine millions as to the real condition of India, and appeal to them for support. This is a work which has never been attempted systematically or properly.

"Comrade" Humphreys, whose letter we reproduced in these columns from "Justice" the other day, justly observes that India shall get no help from "respectable classes" in England. We have been saying the same thing all these years. Nay we go a little further. It is that India shall get no real help from respectable classes not only in England but also in India. Our educated men, unless backed by the masses, will never be able to make themselves a power likely to exert respect.

We have often pointed out that we get no help from the respectable classes in England. The Tories are candid; they never break any. It is the Liberals who promise much but give nothing. Indeed, we got nothing even from Gladstone. On the other hand it was he who made the Councils a mere farce, and nullified the Parliamentary vote for introducing Civil Service Examination in India. Thus, if we expect any help it must come from the lower millions, not the upper ten; from the ranks to which "Comrade" Humphreys belongs; and, not from the selfish class of which Sir H. Fowler and Co. are members. We of course include our illustrious friends, Mr. Hume, and Sir William Wedderburn and Sir Henry Cotton among the leaders of the lower ten.

Now this is a truth which the ardent patriot, our Grand Old Man, came to realize only lately. Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji followed the respectable classes like a shadow and found that any material help from them was not to be expected. Seeing this he gradually came to mix with Mr. Hyndman. He found the "Democrats" true and sincere men, ready to help the Indians to the best of their power. Well when it was seen that Mr. Naoroji was mixing with the Democrats he was blamed by some of his most respectable friends; they insinuated that age had been obscuring his judgment. That was not it. Experience had shown him that any real solid help from England must come from the social Democrats and not the respectable Liberals, and hence he made a common cause with the Democrats. But let us stop here to-day.

DEPUTATION TO ENGLAND.

About fifteen years ago, the experiment of stamping England by more than half-a-dozen Indian leaders was tried. We had at that time a strong band of Liberal friends like Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Bright, Mr. Bradlaugh, Mr. Cairne and others to back our cause. Yet the Indian orators could produce very little impression upon the minds of the English public. They, however, went to England more in their individual capacity than as accredited representatives of the people. It, therefore, did not matter much whether they were received by the English public with cordiality or any other feeling. It is, however, a matter of great importance if a deputation of representative men are sent to England and they are received with indifference or contempt.

It is for this reason that, whenever the proposal of sending a deputation to England has been made, we have thought it our duty to oppose it. It should never be forgotten that the despatch of Indian delegates to England is our last move,—our trump card as it were—and if the project fail we would find ourselves deprived of the last resource to better our condition. So we contended that this was a step which should never be taken with a light heart, but after great and deliberate preparation.

To send a deputation to England from India, one must first of all get a list of men, who are to be sent, and then they will be even a hearing? Lord Curzon here refused to receive the Congress Resolutions direct from the hands of Sir H. Cotton. What is the guarantee that Mr. Brodrick will acknowledge the representative character of the deputation? And suppose he ignores and humiliates them, what remedy have we? Is this deputation backed by any force which the rulers are bound to respect?

It is quite possible that a few Liberal papers will give the members a sort of welcome, and it is quite possible that they will get an audience here and there to sympathise with their sorrows, and forget all about India the next moment. But beyond that, what good can we expect from a deputation which is not backed by any substantial force?

The members in feeling and eloquent speeches describe the poverty of India. They declare that this country is being exhausted by a systematic course of economic drain. But if their English hearers choose to dispose of the question by the business-like reply namely, "Why should we be there if not for a consideration?" they will be non-plussed.

The members similarly describe the brutal treatment to which the Indians are subjected by low-class Europeans. The English audience express regret at this but, at the same time, if they say that, compared with the blessings which England has conferred upon India, these wrongs do not mean much, the Indian representatives will be silenced.

There is no doubt that several Liberal papers will give the members of the deputation a welcome; but it is equally true the other papers headed by the "Times" will either ignore them completely, or speak of them with contempt. Then, as the Liberal paper, the "Echo," says that, beyond some kind words from a section of the Liberal press, the deputation must not expect anything substantial from the English public, as they will remain too engrossed in their own affairs during the General Elections to find time to hear about India.

When Ram Mohan Roy went to England he was received with respect. So was also Dwarka Nath Tagore. Even Keshav Chandra Sen attracted some sort of attention, because, he was backed by Lord John Lawrence. But now, the Babus, hated as they are with malignant feelings by the vast majority of the ruling caste, have no chance of getting a hearing even from Englishmen at home, unless they have some moral force behind them for their support.

As the members selected for the purpose are all experienced and capable men, it is expected that by stamping England they will be able to do some good. This is not an idle expectation, but let them do all the service they can without calling themselves a "deputation," thereby avoiding the risk of humiliating the nation through them. For, it is plain enough that if they go to England as accredited representatives of India, they will be, in spite of their high position and representative character, sought to be kept down by the ruling caste and humiliated in all possible ways.

To believe that England, if only appealed to, would be moved to do justice to India is mere hallucination. Sir Lewis Mallet said that India would never get anything from England until the present order of things had been changed by a revolution. That was in 1880 when Imperialism had just made its appearance in the ruling country. And now almost every "respectable" Englishman is an Imperialist. The mandate for the salvation of India, even if it comes from England, will scarcely do any permanent good. The mandate for this purpose must go to England from here; and if India is ever strong enough to be able to do so, it is then that this country will have its legitimate grievances removed once for all.

It is quite possible to create a moral force in India which England may feel irresistible. A deputation to England, backed by such a force, will not go in vain. This shows the absolute necessity of the education of the millions in India before the despatch of any deputation to the ruling country. If we can make these millions earnestly demand a privilege, England will be only too glad to comply with it.

If a mandate, backed by the voice of millions, can be sent to England from India, it will produce permanent effect. But if the mandate comes from England, what is the guarantee that it will be obeyed at all? Sir Richard Temple granted a municipal system which enabled the representatives of the ratepayers to control the Calcutta Municipality. It was ruthlessly demolished. Lord Cornwallis made a perpetual settlement of land with the Zemindars of Bengal; it was undermined. Sir Stafford Northcote as Indian Secretary of State established State Scholarships for educating the Indians in England, and his successor withdrew the boon. The late Queen granted all the privileges, which the British citizen enjoys, to the Indians, in a Proclamation in the name of God; but all its terms have been broken one by one.

So if the mandate comes from England there is no certainty that it will be obeyed at all. What gigantic attempts were made to give some higher appointment to the natives of the soil by the Court of Directors and successive Secretaries of State! But they could never have their mandates carried out.

And even if the mandates were carried out in the beginning, what is the guarantee that they would not be disregarded afterwards? Sir Richard Temple permitted public Associations to be represented by counsel in the Legislature; his successor, Sir Ashley Eden snatched away the privilege.

But if India ever becomes strong enough to issue a mandate upon England, the effects of such a procedure are likely to be permanent. An advice comes from an English friend to this effect: "Educate, educate the masses, and give up sound and fury."

It will serve no useful purpose by mincing matters. The Indians are now a nation of beggars, and, this, because, they fritter away their energies which, if properly utilized, would make them respected. The members of the Congress deputation are going to England to beg, and, therefore, they cannot expect a better reception than that is accorded to beggars.

Referring to the observation of Sir H. Cotton in his Presidential address, that "we want more members for India," "Justice" observes:—

"This is all true enough; but what if Sir Henry Cotton and his like doing to change the attitude of the House of Commons towards India, or to increase the number of friends of India there? So far as I can judge they are doing their best to support the Liberal Party, which, with its Asquiths, Fowlers, and Roseberys, is just as opposed to the true interests of India as is the present Government."

Well, if the return of the Liberals to power mean the re-instatement of Sir H. Fowler to the India Office, we would rather have the conservatives than their opponents. On the other hand, the "Indian Sociologist," a little monthly paper, the first number of which has just been issued, says:—

"Among the friends of India in England must be gratefully remembered the name of H. M. Hyndman, founder of the Social Democratic Federation, who, ever since 1873, has persistently pleaded the cause of that unfortunate country, both privately and on public platforms. His numerous articles and papers on such subjects as 'Indian Policy and English Justice,' 'Bankruptcy of India,' etc., have justly entitled him to the gratitude of India. Mr. Hyndman, who is a B.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge, is an active philanthropist. He does not believe in half measures, and maintains that the Indians must learn to rely upon themselves, and organize themselves, apart from their foreign masters, for their final emancipation."

"One cannot forget the remarkable incident at the Mansion House meeting for the Indian Famine Fund some five years ago, when Mr. Hyndman had the courage to defy the resentment of those assembled on that occasion, and to publicly denounce the financial drain to which India is perpetually and remorselessly subjected by its British rulers."

"Mainly owing to his influence, there are found sympathetic references to India and its people in almost every issue of that excellent and widely-circulated weekly paper, 'Justice'; and it is earnestly hoped that all true Indian patriots will mark their appreciation of Mr. Hyndman's services to the country by actively interesting themselves in his successful return to Parliament at the next General Election."

If there is one Englishman in England who loves India for India's sake it is Hyndman. There was another, but he is now in the highest heaven. Need we say that he was William Digby?

The people of Magura, Jessore, are engaged in a work for which the whole of Bengal ought to be thankful to them. They are going to commemorate the memory of Rajah Sitaram, the last of the Bengalees, who had made a mighty effort to secure their national independence, and would have possibly succeeded but for the treachery of one of his countrymen. Very few of our educated men know anything about this great man; we have, therefore, published elsewhere a short account of his life. It will be seen that, he was, in several respects, another Protapaditya, though the latter, of course, was more powerful. We are pained to hear from the leaders of the Sitaram movement that their appeal for help, even to those Zemindars who are now in possession of the territory which belonged to Sitaram, has not been responded to. This shows that, we have arrived at the last stage of worthlessness, and all national sentiment has disappeared from our minds. In other countries they worship their heroes as gods; here they will not honour them even when attempts are made to perpetuate their memory. The movement is in the hands of only a few educated men of Magura, a sub-division not noted for its wealth. These educated men belong to the middle classes, and are not therefore in very affluent circumstances. It, thus, redounds greatly to the credit of this little band of patriots for the noble undertaking they have taken in hand. What ought to have been done was to preserve such remains of the capital of Rajah Sitaram as are still extant. But this means large expenditure of money which is beyond the means of the promoters of the movement. They have, therefore, thought of commemorating the memory of this great Bengalee in an humble way, that is to say, by an annual Industrial and Agricultural Exhibition, with two-fold object in view. First it will remind the people of their last Bengalee King and his manifold good works; and secondly, it will further the cause of industry and agriculture. The date of the ceremony has not yet been fixed. The exhibition will be held either during the Mohurrum or the Good Friday. Any one wishing to know particulars of the movement will please communicate with Babu Bassanta Kumar Bose, pleader, Magura. We wish the promoters every success; and, we have no doubt, success will attend their efforts, when their cause is good.

The Government of Lord Curzon have done much in the way of preserving ancient memorials in this country. We are not aware whether any information relating to Rajah Sitaram and his manifold works has ever been placed before the Viceroy. We dare say His Excellency will be glad to make arrangement for the preservation of such of the works of the last of the Hindu potentates in Bengal as are yet extant. Here is a work for the promoters of the Rajah Sitaram movement. They may make a list of the temples, tanks, and other public works of the Rajah which are worth preserving, and submit a representation to the Local Government through the District Magistrate to take charge of them. They may also publish a list of these works in the press, giving a short description of the condition of each, and in this way interest the general public in their movement. One of the grandest works of Rajah Sitaram was the removal of water-difficulties from the various parts of Bengal by digging large tanks and reservoirs of water. Now if there is a matter in which the whole of Bengal is just now vitally interested it is the supply of good drinking water in rural tracts. If Sitaram could earn the blessings of millions by his beneficent measures in this respect at a time when there was practically no settled Government in the country, and when ferocious bands of robbers and dacoits had everything in their own way, surely, far better arrangements in regard to water supply are expected from the present rulers, who are so enlightened and who have centred more power into their own hands.

But what is the actual situation? Millions and millions drink every day what is absolutely poison, and tens of thousands of them fall victims to cholera and malarial fever by breaking this simple sanitary law. But if they drink foul water and thus bring death upon themselves, it is no fault of theirs. They must drink some liquid substance to quench their thirst, and they have got nothing before them but what is poison. Fancy hundreds, sometimes thousands, have got only a single tank, or a pond or a stagnant "beel" for drinking as well as for bathing, purposes, and also for washing clothes and cattle. Fifty or sixty years ago, they had not to do it. They had then many good tanks, one or more of which they kept separate for drinking purposes. The authorities are fully aware of this terrible state of affairs, but will take no measure to remove it. Their apathy is all the more surprising as they realize the Road Cess with relentless rigour, one main object of which is to supply the people with wholesome drinking water. Sir Andrew Fraser's water circular, though assented with the best of intentions, has proved disastrous, as it is bound to be. We protested with all our might against this measure when it was sought to be enforced, last year, but, public opinion now-a-days has no influence upon the powers that be. Sir Andrew laid it down that, if the people would meet one-third of the cost of digging a tank, the District Board another one-third, his Government would then grant the remaining one-third. But the people already pay a water tax in the shape of the Road Cess which is in the hands of the District Board; why should they then pay over again? The result is that very few tanks were excavated last year, and we expect a terrible water scarcity during the next hot season.

This case of Fidaia and others, which came on for hearing before the Criminal Bench on Thursday and which appears in our columns to-day requires more than a passing notice. From our report we gather that their Lordships (Justices Henderson and Geidt) were disposed to send the case back for re-hearing of the appeal as far, at least, as the four remaining petitioners were concerned. For, as it appears there was no evidence of assault against them, and their Lordships satisfied themselves on that point by looking into the evidence. So, on appeal these four men at least, would have been acquitted, and if the learned Judges who granted the rule, had allowed bail which they refused at the time of issuing the rule, these unfortunate men would not have had to undergo the period of imprisonment, which they have undergone. There is no harm in granting bail and yet our Judges and Magistrates are as a rule, reluctant to grant it. We want to know the number of cases, if any, in which by granting bail justice has been defeated. Arms of law are too long and we are perfectly certain a culprit by simply running away cannot defeat justice. He may delay but can never bail. We ask who is responsible for the injustice and what compensation, if any, is to be meted out to these unfortunate men who were incarcerated for no fault of their own.

AFTER months of careful experiment Major George O. Squier of the United States Signal Corps has discovered that trees may be used to catch wireless telegraph messages and to convey them to an observer standing on the ground. He has found that trees may serve the purpose of Marconi's metal feelers or antennae, as they are called, and that tree trunks, while serving as masts or towers, also serve as wires to bring electro magnetic currents to earth. The healthier the tree the better it serves as a conductor. For highly oscillating currents the leaves of trees or of plants behave precisely as if they were made of metal and they will transmit these oscillations from the ground surrounding them through their leaves. At Fort Mason Major Squier attached his telegraphic apparatus to trees, and communicated with the wireless station on Alcatraz Island, about two miles distant. He also communicated in this way between Goat and Alcatraz islands, a distance of three miles and a half. Major Squier claims great advantages for his system of tree telegraphy in army field operations. He experimented across the bay to determine to what extent electromagnetic oscillations of low frequency are absorbed by vegetation. He used the long distance transmission line of the California Gas and Electric Company, bringing the electric power from Yuba county clear across the State. Two nails were driven into a tree and a telephone was placed in connection between them, the result being that the current flowing through the tree trunk was indicated with great clearness in the telephone. If plants are massed close together a heavy discharge will take place between the nearest leaves. Major Squier found the vegetation was stimulated by a moderate amount of electricity and killed by heavy shocks, the same as animals.

EARL ROBERTS like Kipling and other military lights, would transform all England into a voluntary training camp as a substitute for enforced army service. Because conscription in time of peace is impossible, the Field Marshal would have every able-bodied Englishman, no matter what his station in society, undergo "some kind of military training in youth sufficient to enable him to shoot straight and carry out simple orders, if ever his services are required for national defence." In other words, the Salisbury idea of universal rifle clubs is again revived, only in a less crude form. Kipling's "Army of a Dream," with its schoolboys spending their Saturday afternoons outmanoeuvring and defeating the picked Imperial Guards, is still a bit beyond Earl Roberts's vision, and will, fortunately for England, continue to be of such stuff as dreams—or nightmares—are made of. But England's Imperialists will find much in the noble Earl's views to make them believe that they can indulge in Imperialism at a lower price than Continental nations. For this is what it comes down to. England wants not merely the greatest navy, but an army which will permit of her placing some 250,000 or 300,000 trained troops in an over-sea country as soon as war is declared. But being a shrewd nation, her people naturally resent the idea of being forced to give up one or two years of their lives in drilling that Balfours and Chamberlains may carry out their ideas of territorial aggrandizement across the seas.

THERE are not to our knowledge many Indian gentlemen in England who occupy the Editor's chair, but this week's mail brings us Editor's chair, but this week's mail brings us a copy of a new publication entitled "The Indian Sociologist," which is edited by Pandit Shyamaji Krishnavarma, M.A. The Pandit has resided for some time in London and occupies his retirement with literary work and research. He is well-known as a devoted student and admirer of Herbert Spencer, and it is in order that the teachings of this philosopher may be disseminated, particularly in India that Mr. Krishnavarma has determined to bring out a small monthly publication, which is to be an organ of Freedom, of Political, Social, and Religious Reform. The "Indian Sociologist" will not be identified with any political party in England. It will be guided in its policy by the truths of Social Science, the fundamental truth of which is that "every man has freedom to do what he wills, provided he infringes not the equal freedom of any other man." Pandit Krishnavarma has already founded a Herbert Spencer Lectureship at his own University, Oxford, and the first number of the "Indian Sociologist" contains particulars of a Scheme of "Herbert Spencer Indian Fellowships," by which Indian graduates will be enabled to finish their studies in England. The Pandit evidently wishes to do the utmost during his lifetime for the good of his fellow men and that in a most generous manner. There will be, we doubt not, many Indian graduates who will live to bless the Pandit for his munificent scheme.

HERE is the report of a case which was disposed of by Mr. Bonnard, Second Presidency Magistrate, on Monday last:—
"Mrs. William charged her husband with causing hurt to her by pouring boiling water over her. As the complainant did not press the charge, the Magistrate sentenced the accused to be detained till the rising of the Court and further ordered to be bound down to keep the peace for one year."

The above case very naturally reminds one of the particulars of the Krishnagur torture case, with which it bears resemblance in many points. The accused Chattr Kumar, who belongs to a respectable family, was put on his trial before a Deputy Magistrate for having tortured his wife. While the case was pending, the father-in-law of Chattr Kumar submitted an application to the trying Magistrate, praying to set off the accused on his own recognisance. The Magistrate, however, took this step in the interests of his daughter. Subsequently the accused was sentenced to six months' imprisonment. This sentence was considered too inadequate by the District Magistrate of Krishnagur, and the High Court was moved. The result was, that the original sentence was enhanced to 2 years rigorous imprisonment by the Hon'ble Judges in addition to one year's imprisonment for having tortured his wife on two previous occasions, for which no complaint was lodged in a court of law. The Hon'ble Judges characterized the nature of torture in the Krishnagur case as of "revolting" nature. We don't know what it was, but surely, pouring "boiling water" on a woman's head also constitutes a serious offence. Yet, in one case, one day's detention in Court was sufficient punishment to meet the requirements of justice, while, in the other case, nothing short of two years could satisfy the demands of justice. Why this invidious distinction! All we see is, that the accused in one case is a white man and the accused in the other, is a "native."

SCRAPS.

Our Darjeeling correspondent informs us of the ravages of a wild elephant in the vicinity of Sukna. On the night of the 22nd ultimo, the rogue killed two men. This frightened the people so much that most of the P. W. D. coolies and many others took to flight. Mr. J. H. E. Garrett, Deputy Commissioner, on receipt of this report took immediate measures to destroy the animal, but in vain. It is still at large. The Local Government has offered a reward of Rs. 300 for its destruction.

It is understood that an Agency has been established at Lahore known as the "Appointments Procuring Agency," the object of which is said to be "to secure appointments for persons of all grades and qualifications." As it is possible that the public may have recourse to this Agency in the belief that it will be able to secure appointments for them under Government, the public are warned that no attention will be paid to recommendations made by this Agency in favour of candidates for appointments under the Government of Bengal.

Our Hooghly correspondent says that there is a strong rumour current there that the commissioner's office will be removed from Chansura to Burdwan. Thrice the commissioner's office was removed from Burdwan to Hooghly and as many times it was taken back to Burdwan. It seems the Government is unable to come to any definite settlement as to its location. It depends mainly upon the wish of the authorities, but do they imagine the discomfort and inconvenience of the clerks and amlas not to speak of the public? We hear a memorial has already been submitted to His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor praying not to change the seat of the commissioner. We hope His Honour would interfere and give due consideration to the prayer of the people of Hooghly.

Some of our Magistrates delight in inflicting corporal punishment. In Calcutta we find our Police Magistrates often pass the sentence of whipping sometimes in addition to fine and imprisonment. In Karachi, it seems, they are carrying out this sort of inhuman punishment with a vengeance. The "Sindh" of Karachi says that the Tapadars of the Rohri Division are often subjected to the infliction of a hunter, followed by the use of the foulest language at the hands of a member of the Civil Service. Considering that even in schools the use of rattan is becoming obsolete, it is surprising that some of our Magistrates revive it in the law court. If what our contemporary says be true, the state of affairs in the Rohri Division has already become scandalous and calls for an urgent inquiry by the superior authorities.

DARRING of course coolies and porters, there are very few Indians in the railway service, considering the number of Europeans and Eurasians provided there. In the higher ranks of the railway service the children of the soil are to be found nowhere. In the Locomotive and Carriage and Wagon Department, which employ a very large number of officers and subordinates there is not a single Indian employed on posts carrying a salary of Rs. 240 to Rs. 400. The "Tribune" of Lahore has published a table showing the scale of pay given monthly to Europeans and Indians discharging the same duty in the Locomotive Department. Eurasian probationary firemen get from Rs. 30 to Rs. 50 whereas Indians doing the same work get from Rs. 8 to Rs. 10 a month. Again white firemen get from Rs. 60 to Rs. 70 whereas black or brown firemen get from Rs. 11 to Rs. 15. White shunters get from Rs. 90 to Rs. 100 but in the case of Indians the pay ranges from Rs. 16 to Rs. 19. In the case of drivers the same invidious distinction obtains. A white driver gets from Rs. 100 to Rs. 200 while his black colleague draws only Rs. 30 to Rs. 50 a month. So it is the sin of colour which makes a "native" ineligible to aspire to the pay which his white brother draws. The difference of pay is marked inasmuch as an Indian gets only a quarter of what a Eurasian or a European gets though the work is the same. This is not all. A European driver goes on drawing a still higher rate of emoluments after the expiration of the ninth year of his service, which raises his pay to Rs. 220 per mensem. The "Native's" pay remains stationary at Rs. 50 for all time to come. As a rule, the Native Driver is seldom allowed to draw a salary of more than Rs. 40 per mensem, even after ten long years' hard service which he commences on Rs. 30. Further increase beyond Rs. 40 and up to Rs. 50 is granted only in very deserving cases and that under exceptionally special circumstances. Again in the case of the highly-paid European driver 8 hours on duty are reckoned as equivalent to a day's work, but in the case of the low-paid Indian driver 10 hours count as a day's duty. Such an iniquitous disparity based on racial grounds alone cannot be found in any other department. We fervently hope the attention of His Excellency the Viceroy will be attracted to the above, who lately denied all knowledge of the proceedings of the Delhi Railway conference held in January 1903.

Here is a case hailing from Krishnagur which shows the evils of the amalgamation of the executive and judicial functions in one and the same officer. There was a quarrel between two persons in the course of which one of them brought a "lathi" and aimed a blow at the other. The latter wrenched off the "lathi" from his hand and gave his opponent a severe blow with it. It so happened that this single blow caused the man's death. The poor fellow was subsequently arrested by the police and placed on his trial before a Deputy Magistrate on a charge of murder. The trying Magistrate after taking down deposition of witnesses charged him on a lesser count. This did not satisfy the police who moved the District Magistrate and the latter had no scruple to interfere with the judicial independence of his subordinate and took up the case in his own file. He changed the charge sheet and committed the accused to the Sessions on a charge of murder. At the last Sessions the poor man was unanimously found not guilty by the jury and acquitted by the Judge. Now if the District Magistrate had not interfered the sufferings of the poor man would have ended long before.

Mr. S. Ramiah, a retired Judge of the Travancore High Court, died in Madras on Saturday. He was a Fellow of the Madras University and was highly respected.

THE SUPREME LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

THIRD DAY.

A meeting of the Supreme Legislative Council was held at the Council Chamber, Government House, on Saturday at 11 a. m. His Excellency Baron Curzon, P.C., G.M.S.I., G.M.I.E., Viceroy and Governor-General of India, presided and there were present: His Honour Sir A. H. L. Fraser, K.C.S.I., Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, His Excellency General Viscount Kitchener of Khartoum, G.C.B., O.M., G.C.M.G., Commander-in-Chief in India, the Hon'ble Major-General Sir E. R. Elles, K.C.B., K.C.I.E., the Hon'ble Sir A. T. Arundel, K.C.I.E., the Hon'ble Sir Denzil Ibbetson, K.C.S.I., the Hon'ble Mr. H. E. Erle Richards, the Hon'ble Mr. J. P. Hewett, C.S.I., C.I.E., the Hon'ble Mr. E. Baker, O.S.I., the Hon'ble Mr. Gopal Krishna Gokhale, C.I.E., the Hon'ble Mr. E. Cable, the Hon'ble Nawab Sayid Muhammad Sahib Bahadur, the Hon'ble Mr. H. Adamson, C.S.I., the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur B. K. Bose, C.I.E., the Hon'ble Mr. L. A. S. Porter, the Hon'ble Mr. A. D. Youngblood, the Hon'ble Mr. H. A. Sim C.I.E. and the Hon'ble Nawab Fateh Ali Khan, Kazilbash, C.I.E.

LOCAL AUTHORITIES' LOAN ACT.
1. The Hon'ble Mr. Baker moved that the Bill further to amend the Local Authorities' Loan Act, 1879, be taken into consideration.

He said that at present the borrowing powers of the Rangoon Port Commissioners were regulated by the Local Authorities' Loan Act, which was an Act of this Council. It was now desired to empower the Port Commissioners to borrow money with the Port of their own such as the case of the Port Commissioners of Bombay and Madras. The measure was purely a formal one and it was not necessary to refer it to the Select Committee.

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble Mr. Baker moved that the Bill be passed.

The motion was put and agreed to.

INDIAN UNIVERSITIES ACT.

The Hon'ble Mr. Richards moved for leave to introduce a Bill to validate action taken under the Indian Universities Act, 1904.

He said: The object of the Bill is to set at rest doubts which have been raised as to the validity of the constitution of the Bodies Corporate and Provincial Syndicates of the Universities of India, and the matter is one of urgency for the reason that the work of the Universities is at the present moment at a standstill owing to the uncertainty as to the legal position of the Bodies, and no progress can be made until the legal questions are determined. The purpose and scheme of the Universities Act will be within the recollection of this Council, and in order to explain the difficulties, which make it necessary to resort to legislation, I need only call your attention to that part of the Universities Act which contains what are called "Transitory provisions," that is, the provisions which set up the machinery for establishing the Universities in their permanent form. These provisions will be found in the numerous clauses of sec. 12 of the Act. It will be seen that these clauses regulate the first elections of fellows and the constitution of the first Bodies Corporate of the Universities, and that in clause (p) there is provision made for the appointment of a Provisional Syndicate to conduct the business of the University until permanent Syndicates have been constituted. It is in regard to the last clause and to the manner in which the Provisional Syndicates have been appointed that the present difficulties have mainly arisen, and with the permission of the Council I will state shortly what these difficulties are.

Clause (p) enacts that each Provisional Syndicate is to be appointed by the Senate "in such manner as the Chancellor directs." It makes no other provision as to the election. It does not specify the number of members of the Syndicate; it does not say whether they are to be elected or appointed or not, it leaves everything to the discretion of the Chancellors. The Chancellors have taken the view that the power given to them is sufficient to enable them to deal with these matters, which are indeed in any other construction left unprovided for, and they have issued directions as to the appointment of the Provisional Syndicates including directions to cause the due representation of the faculties. It does not seem possible that any objection can be taken to the substance of these directions, for they follow with same exactness the procedure in force at the time of the passing of the Act, and the procedure which appears to be contemplated in regard to the permanent Syndicate when that is set up. But the question is, whether they are technically ultra vires. The directions given have varied in form. In some cases the Syndicate was to be elected by the Senate sitting together but voting by faculties, in others by the members of the Senate divided into groups according to their qualifications for the purpose of ensuring the proportional representation of the various schools and acting separately. But whatever the difference of form the effect has been the same, namely, to continue the former practice of election by faculties. In accordance with these directions elections were held at all the Universities and except in the case of Bombay were held without complaint.

Provisional Syndicates were constituted, and have been sometime at work preparing the ground for the permanent Syndicates. But this has now unfortunately been stopped. General objection is now taken to the constitution of the Syndicates on the ground that the action of the Chancellors was ultra vires, and that they had no powers to give the directions to which I have referred. In Bombay application has been made to the High Court for an injunction to restrain the Provisional Syndicate from acting in the affairs of the University. In Calcutta a distinguished ex-Judge has lent the weight of his name and authority to a formal protest before the Senate of the University, there are signs that the controversy will soon extend to Madras, Allahabad and Lahore, and that litigation may become general. In the meantime the work of all Universities is at a standstill; valuable time is being lost, and unless something be done and done promptly, the progress of the Universities seems likely to be definitely arrested. It is not for this Council to decide on the legality or illegality of the action of the Chancellors. That depends on technical points of construction, and must be determined, if it is necessary, to determine them, in courts of law. But it is the concern of the Legislature to ensure that the work of education be not indefinitely arrested, and that it be not suffered to remain in a state of paralysis until such time as the resources of litigation are exhausted. It may be said that the decision of the Bombay court would settle the whole question, so that proposal for legislation are premature until that decision is known. But I submit, my Lord, that that is not so. If the question effected Bombay only, the decision of the Bombay Court would determine the matter, that is, if no appeals were lodged against it (and there would be an appeal to the Privy Council), but it would not determine questions in other Provinces, or questions arising on difference of facts. Other actions may be started indeed, it is rumoured that they are to be started before other courts, and litigation may be indefinitely prolonged. So far I have dealt only with the constitution of the Provisional Syndicates, but it is right to call the attention of the Council to the fact that these difficulties of construction which I have discussed are not limited in this effect to the Provisional Syndicates. The same question arises in regard to the election of Fellows to represent the Faculties under clauses (c) and (f). Then again, there are no provisions to secure election by the faculties unless such power is contained in the proviso that the election is to be "in such manner as the Chancellor may direct." These Fellows are to be representative of the Faculties, and it would be certainly most undesirable that the Faculties should be denied any voice in their election. But if the argument against the wider construction of the Chancellor's powers be good in the case of the Provisional Syndicate, it must be good in this case also. The result follows that the Bodies Corporate of the Universities, or, at least of some of them, have never been properly constituted, and that the whole work must be done over again, and the time spent and labour bestowed on them must be absolutely wasted.

My Lord, I have now put before the Council the main features of this unfortunate controversy, and trust that I have convinced them that the matter is one which demands prompt treatment in the public interests. The Bill is a short one, and does no more than validate the action of the Chancellor in regard to the constitution of the Senate and Provisional Syndicates. That action does not effect the ultimate constitution of the bodies of the University; and is of a temporary character only, and if there be dispute as to the meaning of the Act in regard to it, it seems better to do as the Chancellors have done, and to follow the procedure which was in force before the passing of the Act until such time as the Universities are fully constituted. Lord, I beg formally for leave to introduce the Bill.

The Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale said:—
My Lord, I beg to oppose this motion. It was only last night that I received the agenda paper of this meeting, and then I saw that it was proposed to introduce a measure of this kind at to-day's Council. There was, however, no copy of the Bill with the agenda paper—there is no copy even now before me on the table—so I was entirely in the dark until I heard the speech of the hon. member in charge of the Bill, about the precise nature and scope of the proposed legislation. Now, my Lord, I respectfully submit that this is somewhat hard on members of this Council. Now I find myself compelled, if I want to enter my protest at all, to speak just on the spur of the moment, without any opportunity to look up facts and references, relying solely on my mere recollection of things. My Lord, I was one of those who did their utmost last year to prevent the passage of the Universities Bill. But having done that, as soon as the Bill was passed I was among those who recognised the wisdom of the appeal so earnestly made by His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal to both friends and opponents of the measure that they should after that bury their differences and in the best interest of higher education endeavour to co-operate with one another to make the Act a success. I should therefore have been glad, if there had been any occasion for me, to oppose any further proposals of Government in regard to the Universities of India. But as the Government have thought fit to introduce the present measure, and as I disapprove of it most strongly, there is no course open to me but to offer it such resistance as I can. My Lord, I interpret the hon. member's speech as a practical admission that the notification, which the Chancellor in the different provinces have issued, "are" illegal and "ultra vires," and that the action taken under them cannot be sustained. For, if there had been the faintest possibility of the Notifications being upheld by the High Courts, the Government, I am sure, would not have taken this unpleasant and not wholly dignified course of coming to the Legislature to validate what they have done. Now, my Lord, one might easily ask the question how such illegal Notifications came to be issued, for with the resources at the disposal of the various Government in the matter of expert legal advice and in other ways the public have a right, even in this country, to expect work less careless than that. But when a mistake has been admitted in public life as in private life, less one dwells on it the better. But though I do not care to press the question how these Notifications came to be issued, I must protest emphatically against the course proposed to be adopted to set right the illegality that has been committed. I think, my Lord, the only proper course from the supreme Government on this occasion was to call upon the various Chancellors to withdraw these objectionable Notifications and substitute others in their place more in accordance with the law instead of following this plain course, the Government have chosen to come to the Legislature with proposals to remedy, not any defect in the law, but a serious illegality committed in taking action under the law, and persisted in spite of warnings and protests. My Lord, in all civilised countries there is a well-understood and well defined distinction between the Legislature and the Executive Government, and the Legislature is regarded as higher than the Executive. In India, unfortunately this distinction for the most part is only a nominal character, for with the present constitution of the Councils, the Executive Government can get what law they please passed by the Legislature without the slightest difficulty. I submit, however, that it is not desirable, it is not wise that this fact should be forced on the attention of the public in so unpleasant a manner as on this occasion, and I think the distinction becomes a farce; our Legislature is to be thus at the beck and call of the Executive Government, and if it is to be called upon to exercise its powers of legislation to remedy defects not in existing laws but in executive action taken under those laws, my Lord I respectfully but emphatically protest against this lowering of the dignity of the Legislature. Of course there is nothing to prevent the Government legally from coming to the Legislature with such proposals as they please. But I venture to think that there are moral limits on the competency of the Government in this matter. I think that the Government should come forward with proposals of amendment only in the event of the existing law being found so defective as to be unworkable errors in executive action being set right as far as possible by executive action alone. I can imagine a case where, soon after passing a measure, the Government suddenly discovered a flaw, which makes it impossible to carry the measure into practice. In such a case, however, one may regret the necessity of amending legislation, one would be prepared to regard the position of Government with a certain amount of sympathy. But that is not the case on the present occasion. It is not contended that no executive remedy is possible. So set matters right, for, by withdrawing the present notifications and substituting others in accordance with law, the whole difficulty can be got over. The hon. member has told us that this would involve much loss of precious time, and of valuable work already in process of being done. Surely this is not such a calamity as to justify the present proposals. It is true, that those who get into power for the first time often imagine that they must begin their reforming work at once, and that the situation cannot brook a moment's delay. Everyone will not, however, necessarily sympathise with such impatience, and some may even welcome circumstances which necessitate their going more slowly. As regards the fear that in some places examinations will have to be postponed, unless the election of the present Syndicates is validated, even that need not frighten, as much examinations have been postponed in the past on account of the plague and other difficulties, and there is no great harm if they have to be postponed for a time in any place. This year the hon. member has further told us that after all the defects that have been discovered in the notifications are of a purely technical character. Now I cannot subscribe to this view of the matter at all. Take for instance the formation of the Faculties. If this function had been left to the Senate as required by the law—if it had not been illegally usurped by the Chancellors—we should have had the Faculties formed in accordance with some clear and intelligible principle as in old times. But in what the Chancellors have done there is no such clear principle recognisable. Thus in Bombay a man like Mr. Justice Chandavarkar, whom there are few more cultured Fellows—European or Indian—in the Bombay Senate, has been excluded from the Arts Faculty, which after all is the most important Faculty, and relegated to the Faculty of Law, which is made to include every Fellow who has taken the LL. B. degree. So it is not only a mere setting right of technical defect that is involved in this Bill. My Lord, there is another most important question that must be brought to the notice of this Council. I am not sure that I quite followed the hon. member in what he said about the effect of this Bill on the Syndicates, which have been elected under the illegal notifications. I understood him to say, and I speak subject to correction, that the elections could stand. If this be so, I can only protest against what is proposed as a great wrong, at least so far as the Bombay University is concerned. For there the opinion of eminent counsel had been obtained, which declared that the notification was clearly illegal and "ultra vires." This opinion had been forwarded to the University authorities before the elections were held, and the only request that was made was that the elections should be postponed till the Chancellor had reconsidered the whole question in the light of their opinion. An opportunity was thus given to the party that is anxious to introduce the new order of things to set matters right by cancelling the notifications and issuing another in its place. Instead of that, they preferred to hold the elections in accordance with the notification, and now it is proposed to condone the illegality committed with open eyes by means of fresh legislation. My Lord, the unfairness of this arrangement becomes all the more obvious when it is remembered that those who saw the illegality of the notification did not take part in the election beyond entering their protest. They did not allow themselves to be nominated as candidates, neither did they exercise their undoubted right to vote because of the illegal character of the whole proceeding. On the other hand, those who chose to act on the notification acted as though they were determined to carry out their object, whatever the obstacles in their way. Thus a motion for adjournment, which the Vice-Chancellor who presided over the Arts' Meeting, allowed to be put to the Meeting, one day was under exactly similar circumstances ruled out of order the next day at the Law Meeting by the judicial member of the Executive Government, whose interest in University matters was suddenly aroused, and who attended to take the chair, which otherwise would have been occupied by the senior Fellow present, Sir Pherozeshah Mehta. And it is now proposed to support by fresh legislation the illegalities committed in this high-handed manner by those who chose to ignore the warning and opinion of eminent counsel, and it is proposed to furnish those who protested against the illegalities and refrained from being a party to them. I think it is absolutely unjustifiable to disfranchise a large number of Fellows and accept the elections made by a handful of men in each group as made by the Faculties, and once more I protest emphatically against the contemplated wrong. My Lord, there are some of the observations which suggest themselves to me on this occasion. I have been under some disadvantage in having had to speak on the spur of the moment, and I can only trust I have made no mistake in my statement of facts, nor have I employed stronger language than the exigencies of the situation demanded.

The Hon'ble Mr. Richards in reply said that the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale had announced that he had no notice of this motion. That is a matter which would soon be remedied. Before the second reading of the Bill he would have a notice of it. As regards the second point the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale had said that the notifications were illegal. The Hon'ble Mr. Richards protested against it and said that he waited in vain to get a suggestion of the remedy from him. The object of introducing this Bill was simply to put an end to that state of affairs which was now going on. What was to be done at this stage? That was the whole question which the Legislative Council would deal. That was the matter which they would view with the greatest concern. Their object was to save the work of the University.

The motion was put and agreed to.
The Hon'ble Mr. Richards then introduced the Bill and moved that the Bill, together with the Statement of Objects and Reasons relating thereto, be published in English in the "Gazette of India" and in the local official Gazettes.

The motion was put and agreed to.
GOVERNMENT STORES BILL.
Major General Elles withdrew the above Bill.

The Council was then adjourned to the 10th instant.

Collapse of a Rice Stack.—Two women and a man met with a singular accident. It would appear that work was being carried on as usual in a rice depot situated close to the railway lines at Ahiritollah when through the vibration caused by a passing train a large stack of rice in the godown collapsed and the three persons above mentioned were injured by the falling bags one woman so severely as to necessitate her removal to hospital, where her condition is believed to be serious.

Twelve Stripes for Mollah's Shoes.—On Wednesday, Inspector Wisa of the Watgunza Thana charged one Dasmohamed Khan, a Kahluck before Moulvie Serejul Haq, Police Magistrate of Alipore with the theft of a pair of shoes belonging to a "Mollah" (priest) of a local mosque. The accused, one day, attended the mosque to offer his prayer and finding the "Mollah" was deeply engaged in delivering sermons, ran away with his shoes. The accused pleaded guilty and was sentenced to twelve stripes.

The Matla Riot Case.—The case in which one Ramey Mollah, an influential resident of Canning Town and thirteen of his men were charged with being members of an unlawful assembly rioting and causing hurt to some "Chaprasses" of Port Canning and Company in connection with a dispute over a fishery, under circumstances already reported, was concluded before Syed Mohamed Kanan Bahadur, Deputy Magistrate of Alipore. Babu Nundo Lal Mookerjee with Babu Haran Chander Chatterjee appeared for the defence and urged that this case was solely a connected one. The Magistrate accordingly acquitted all the accused.

Saroda Prosad Dass Dhankanal Dispensary, Orissa. Kali Prasanna Lahiri Darbhanga Dispensary. Hira Lal Sinha Second Assistant, Chemical Examination Department.

A Comedy of Errors.—A somewhat funny incident occurred in the Court of a local Magistrate at Alipore on Wednesday. A Cooper of the Calcutta Municipal Corporation connected the Munsiff's court room in the City with a law suit of the Municipal Corporation. The Munsiff mistaking him for Mr. Justice Cooper who has been on inspection duty for some days at Alipore, at once left his "ejlas" and after "salaming" him in a most respectful manner, went down to receive him, when Mr. Cooper not a little surprised asked the Munsiff where his pleader was. The Munsiff then answering his question retraced, in a somewhat embarrassed manner his steps to the "ejlas" and sat down speechless for some minutes.

Weather and Crops in Assam.—The Report on the state and prospects of the crops in Assam for the week ending the 24th January, says:—Slight rain has fallen in all districts except the Garo Hills. Hoeing and pruning of tea continue. Harvesting of late rice has nearly finished. Gathering pulses and cotton and pressing of sugarcane are in progress. The outturn of late rice and cotton generally is good. Prospects of mustard, pulses, and sugarcane are fair. Ploughing for early rice has commenced. Cattle-disease is prevalent in four districts. Prices of common rice are:—Silchar 19, Sylhet 18, Dhubri, Tezpur, and Nowgong 16, Gauhati and Dibrugarh 14, and Sibsagar 12 seers per rupee.

Alleged Fraudulent Transaction.—On Friday before Mr. D. H. Kingford, Chief Presidency Magistrate, Babu Tarak Nath Sadhu on behalf of one Abdul Hakim of the Municipal Market, made an application against Sovan Khan, Anwar and Kaji Rahim Bux, Tarak Nath and four others, under the following circumstances. The facts, as alleged, in the application, are these. On or about the 16th December last, the third defendant Kaji Rahim Bux, being an acquaintance of the applicant, called at his shop and made a proposal to him to the effect that a canal was being excavated by Messrs Martin and Co. If he would desire to take up the work, the defendant (No. 3) could arrange the matter for him. He brought one Anwar as a "Sirdar" who would work under him and introduced the man to the applicant. In this manner, Nos. 6, 7, 8, brought by Anwar and similarly introduced to him as "sirdars" who would bring coolies and for which they were to be paid in advance. Anwar and Savar would also supply coolies. On the 21st January last, Sovan induced the complainant to deliver Rs. 1000 to him in advance. The 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th defendants were alleged to have been paid Rs. 691, Rs. 245 and Rs. 400, respectively by the applicant. Sometime after they bought some coolies and reported to the applicant that the coolies would not work unless they get some more money in advance. On the 28th January 8th, 6th, 7th, and 9th defendants alleged to have been paid Rs. 205, Rs. 275, Rs. 225, and Rs. 205 for which the defendants gave receipts, but since then they did not bring any more coolies and were asking for more monies from the applicant. He prayed in the application that the Court would be pleased to direct the police to take cognizance in the matter. The Magistrate granted the application as prayed for.

Bank Note.—The Bank of Bengal rate for demand loans remains at 6 per cent.

Text Books.—The "Calcutta Gazette" contains the list of text, library and prize books recommended by the Text Book Committee for the approval of Government.

Viceroy's Party.—The party accompanying the Viceroy on his coming tour to Kalabari (Assam) will be:—Lord Lamington, Lieutenant Colonel the Hon. E. Baring, C. V. O., Major A. J. Macnab, Surgeon to the Viceroy, Captain Akers-Douglas, A. D. C. to the Viceroy, Captain H. Moynell, A. D. C. to the Governor of Bombay.

Investiture.—The full dress state party at Government house Thursday night was a very crowded and brilliant affair, and over 1100 persons must have been present. General Macdonald was invested with the K. C. I.E. Messrs. Savage and Hodson were decorated with the C.S.I. and Messrs. Knyvett and Horn, Major Bird and Captain Wilson received the C.I.E. at the hands of the Viceroy. After these honours had been bestowed a number of Indian officers were presented to Lord Curzon. Among those present were the Maharaja Scindia of Gwalior and his suite, Sir Andrew and Lady Fraser, Lord Kitchener, all the high officials of state and a large number of Indian gentlemen.

Cold "Snap" in Calcutta.—The cold wave which had forsaken Calcutta has come back with a backwash giving us again some low temperatures during the past 48 hours. During the 24 hours ending 8 a.m. Thursday, the maximum temperature registered in Calcutta was 69.3 deg., which is 9.4 degrees below normal, and the minimum was 53.9 degrees. In other places also very low temperatures were registered during the same period, the following being some of the minimum readings:—Darjeeling, 26 degrees; Patna 36.5 degrees; Chapra, 38.7 degrees; Motihari, 34.1 degrees; Mozaffarpore, 36.7 degrees; Bhagalpur, 37.7 degrees; Purneah, 35 degrees, which was 3.5 degrees below normal; and Lucknow 34.6 degrees. It is, therefore, evident the abnormally cold spell of weather which has characterized the Indian winter of 1904-05 is not yet over, and the reports of heavy snow in the Himalayas from Dast to West of the range give us promise of a continuance of it.

Suit against the Calcutta Corporation.—The Additional Sub-Judge of Alipore delivered judgment in a contested appeal brought by one Sadaruddin Nascar against the Corporation of Calcutta to establish his right as tenant under the Bengal Tenancy Act to a piece of land measuring about twenty-four "bighas" known as the Diakuria Trenching Ground, on the allegation of his being a sub-lessee under a tenant of the Calcutta Corporation. The lower Court dismissed his suit against which this appeal was preferred. Babu Debendra Chandra Ghose, the senior Government pleader with Babu Narayan Chander Ghose who appeared on behalf of the Corporation contended that under the circumstances of the case, the plaintiff could acquire no right or status under the aforesaid act, and that the law applicable to the case would be the Transfer of Property Act and that the plaintiff was a mere trespasser. The Sub-Judge agreeing with this view dismissed the appeal.

Hooghly Items.—Writes our Hooghly correspondent:—A peculiar kind of fatal disease has appeared in our town. Many fell victims to it and one of the eminent physicians of our town in the person of Dr. Shib Chunder Bhattacharjee, L.M.S. is no more. This melancholy event took place at noon on Wednesday the 1st instant. He contracted the said fell disease the day previous to his death, and succumbed to it the day following. No medical aid available could save him from the cruel hands of death. His death has cast a gloom over the station. He had a large practice. He was very popular with all classes of the community. He was respected to the public by suavity of manner and kindly disposition. Unbounded piety and unstinted charity were a characteristic trait in his character. His death is deeply mourned by all who had the occasion to come in contact with him. We offer our sincere condolences to the bereaved family. In the adjacent little French Colony at Chandernagore some suspected cases of plague are reported to have occurred. Steps are being taken by the authorities there to open a segregation camp.

Attempt at Murder.—On Friday, before Babu Gopal Chander Mookerjee of Alipore one Metoo Sheith of Baladanga was charged with having attempted to take the lives of five persons. It was stated that there was a quarrel between the children of the accused and those of one Bikho Saik upon a paltry matter. Metoo took the side of his children and after having severely reprimanded their opponents suddenly rushed into his own house brought out a sharp "dao" and began to lay about him with the indiscriminate fury of a mad man with the result that in about a minute or two Bikho, his three sons and a nephew lay weltering in their blood with ghastly wounds on their bodies. They were immediately removed to the hospital where their condition became so serious that their dying declarations were recorded; but all of them are however showing signs of improvement. The accused while in the dock made a statement to the Court alleging that the immediate cause of his insane attack was not what the evidence disclosed but the circumstance that the wounded persons had been inhumanly belabouring his wife with clubs and fists after having rendered her stark naked, the sight of which was too much for him to bear and he interfered with the result as above stated. The trial is proceeding.

High Court—Feb. 3.

CRIMINAL BENCH

(Before Justices Henderson and Geidt.)

A RULE MADE ABSOLUTE.

Babus Mammoth Nath Mookerji and Charu Chandra De appeared in support of a Rule obtained by them on behalf of one Mujila Kumari Dasi, whose complaint against Lay Chand and 4 ors., was on the 15th October last dismissed under section 203 by the Chief Presidency Magistrate of Calcutta. The Rule was issued on the learned Magistrate to show cause why the complaint should not be further enquired into, on the ground that the Magistrate was wrong in dismissing the petitioner's complaint, as aforesaid, in the absence of any evidence whatsoever as to the "bonafide" of the alleged claim by purchase which the accused put forward, and under which claim they forcibly entered the petitioner's premises No. 13 Bysack's Lane; and after abusing and criminally intimidating the petitioner broke down a wall and caused mischief thereby of considerable amount. Their Lordships, after hearing the learned Vakils, made the Rule absolute and directed the learned Magistrate below to enquire further into the petitioner's complaint.

A RULE ISSUED.

On the 10th November 1904 one Padma Nath complained against one Balkrishna Behara before the Sub-divisional Magistrate of Bhadrak alleging that on the 4th November Balkrishna and others confined him. The case was tried by an Honorary Magistrate, who convicted Balkrishna under Sec. 347 I. P. C. and sentenced him to one month's rigorous imprisonment with a fine of Rs. 10. An appeal was preferred to the District Magistrate of Balasore who dismissed it. Against that Balkrishna moved this Court. Their Lordships after hearing Babu Dasanathi Sanyal issued a rule on the District Magistrate to show cause why the conviction and sentence should not be set aside. The petitioner was ordered to be released on bail.

A MAINTENANCE SUIT.

One Munjuri applied before the Northern Division Presidency Magistrate claiming maintenance against one Thakur Dass Saha Kalwar alleging that she was his wife and that he refused to maintain her. The Magistrate passed an order allowing maintenance to the woman of Rs. 10 a month. Against that order Thakur Dass moved this Court. A rule was issued which came on for hearing to-day.

Mr. Philip Mortan with Babu Sashi Shekher Bose, appeared for the petitioner. Babu Hara Kumar Mitra appeared to show cause.

Their Lordships after hearing both sides made the rule absolute.

A MISSIONARY CASE.

Babu Hemendranath Sen appeared in support of a Rule obtained by him on behalf of Gadaai Saha and another calling upon the District Magistrate of Murshidabad to show cause why the order passed by him for the prosecution of the petitioners under 193 I. P. Code should not be set aside on the ground that no offence was committed either before him or brought under his notice in the course of a judicial proceeding.

A missionary gentleman, Rev. Atto Stensberg, belonging to the London Mission at Berhampore applied before the Magistrate of the District, Mr. Halifax on behalf of one Harimati who had been converted by the said Mission for the custody of her minor daughter Prodhana who it was alleged being kept away by the father of Harimati. The District Magistrate directed the matter for enquiry to Mr. Mackertish, Deputy Magistrate, and on his finding that the said Harimati had been married with the petitioner Rashbehari, the matter was placed before the District Magistrate. Thereupon the said Magistrate passed an order to the effect that when the girl had been married, she could not be taken away from her husband and ordered that Mr. Stensberg might be informed accordingly. But this did not evidently satisfy the missionary gentleman and he put in another petition to the Magistrate stating that the statement about the marriage was false and pressed for another enquiry. Thereupon the District Magistrate passed an order on the Police that he would hold a local enquiry on the spot and accordingly the Police kept the girl and the petitioner in attendance and the District Magistrate examined some witnesses and came to the conclusion that the marriage had not taken place and that the petitioners had given false evidence before Mr. Mackertish and directed the prosecution of the petitioners and the case was placed in the Court of the Deputy Magistrate of Lalbagh. The petitioners therefore moved the Sessions Judge but he held that the order being one under Sec. 476 Cr. P. Code, the High Court had no jurisdiction to deal with the said order under Sec. 431 Cr. P. Code. It was contended by the learned Vakils that the Magistrate acted wholly without jurisdiction as no offence was committed before him or brought under his notice in the course of a judicial proceeding. He further pointed out that the Magistrate could not possibly have proceeded under Sec. 551 Cr. P. Code as it was not even alleged that the girl was kept away for immoral purposes and then it was submitted that the High Court had jurisdiction to deal with orders under Sec. 476 under Sec. 439 Cr. P. Code and referred to all the cases where it had been so held not only by the Calcutta High Court, but also by other High Courts.

Their Lordships did not accept the view of the Sessions Judge and the Rule was made absolute and the order for prosecution was set aside.

This year's Pearl fishery in Ceylon takes place at Marichchikaddi about the middle of this month. The banks to be fished are the South-West Cheval Paar, which is estimated to contain 3,500,000 oysters, sufficient to employ 200 boats for two days with average loads of 10,000 each a day; the Mid-East Cheval Paar, estimated to contain 13,750,000 oysters, sufficient to employ 200 boats for seven days with average loads of 10,000 each a day. The North and South Moderagam, with 25,700,000 oysters, sufficient to employ 200 boats for thirteen days with average loads of 10,000 each a day; the South Cheval Paar, estimated to contain 40,220,000 oysters, sufficient to employ 200 boats for twenty days with average loads of 10,000 each a day; each boat being fully manned with divers.

N. W. P. HIGH COURT.

DEATH SENTENCE QUASHED.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Knox and the Hon'ble Mr. Justice Blair delivered judgment on Wednesday in an appeal brought by Tika Ram, who had been convicted and sentenced to death by the Sessions Court of Bareilly on a charge of wilful murder of one Lochan. Their Lordships, in giving their decision, pointed out that their difficulties in this case had been much enhanced by the singular procedure adopted by the Sessions Judge in his judgment. More than one-half of his judgment was devoted to matter which may have come out of the police diary, and which the Sessions Judge himself alluded to as "suppositions," and "suggestions" made to him independently of the evidence given in Court. He alluded to a statement made apparently to the police and repeated the day after by one Jaikishan before the Tashildar Magistrate of Bareilly. Jaikishan was sent up as a witness for the Crown, and the Sessions Judge had, under the circumstances, no option but to record his evidence whatever might have been its nature. Their Lordships had caused enquiries to be made of the learned vakils who held the post of Public Prosecutor, as to why the evidence of this witness was not recorded. The reply was that the witness was not examined by the Public Prosecutor for the reasons given by the Sessions Judge in his judgment. Their Lordships had tried to find those reasons, but all they discovered were the following:—"I have not examined Jaikishan as a witness, nor tendered him a pardon as an informer. I have very little doubt that he took a part in the murder just as much as Tika Ram. Therefore, he cannot be accepted as a witness, and it would be useless to make him an informer, as it is evident that he is not willing to tell the whole truth and it would be difficult to place any reliance on what he said. There can be little doubt that he had a 'lison' with Hirma, and had a motive in joining in the murder. There can also be little doubt that he came straight home and told the women what had happened. If he was not an accomplice, but witnessed the murder, why did he not come home and say what he had seen, and have his mother's murderers arrested? Why did he not tell the chaudhurdar what he had seen and why did he maintain silence from the 13th to the 17th? I entirely fail to understand why he was not sent up for trial with the other accused." Continuing, their Lordships stated that it was no part of the duty of a Sessions Judge to decide before a witness had been examined whether he could or could not be accepted as a witness, especially if he had been sent up as a witness to facts of the highest relevance. The officer who had to decide whether a witness in a trial before a Court of Sessions was or was not to be put forward was the Public Prosecutor. The Judge might send for and examine a witness whom the Public Prosecutor did not call, but he was bound to hear a witness put forward by the Public Prosecutor. In this case there was another witness sent up by the Committing Magistrate, viz., Hadgi, who was not examined, and the only reason given by the Public Prosecutor for not examining him was that a witness who had given similar evidence was not believed by the Court of Sessions. In their Lordships' opinions this was, if anything, all the more reason why Hadgi should have been examined. As to that portion of the Sessions Judge's judgment which dealt with the evidence given in Court, their Lordships found that the learned Judge acquitted Dhan Singh, who was put on his trial with Tika Ram for the murder, on the ground that it would have been impossible to convict him on the uncorroborated evidence of Puran, but he convicted Tika Ram because there was (1) evidence as to motive; (2) the evidence of eye-witnesses Puran and Sita Ram, who were unprejudiced; and (3) the partial confession of Tika Ram. As regarded the first, their Lordships were unable to follow the learned Judge and make a distinction between Tika Ram and Dhan Singh. As regarded the second, the evidence taken before the Committing Magistrate was so much in conflict with that given before the Court of Session that it would have been unsafe to place any reliance upon what he said. Their Lordships thought that if Sita Ram had been more fully examined in the Court of Sessions touching the evidence which he had given before the Committing Magistrate he might possibly have furnished some explanation which would have enabled their Lordships to have taken into consideration his evidence given in the Court of Session. Their Lordships did not think that likely, and considered that the only safe way of dealing with his evidence was to reject it altogether. They were very much struck by the similarity between the evidence of Puran and Sita Ram—similarly so great that it raised the doubt whether they were not repeating a story taught to them. As regarded the so-called confession the remarks made by the learned Judge who placed it on the record deprived it of all its evidential value. For the above reasons their Lordships allowed the appeal, set aside the conviction and sentence and acquitted Tika Ram of the offence of which he was charged and directed that he be forthwith released, or, if on bail, his bail be discharged. Their Lordships directed that a copy of their judgment be sent to the Legal Remembrancer for information.

A very gruesome—and, at the same time, a very inconvenient—score is going the rounds in the northern suburbs of Colombo, in Kotabena and Mutwal—in the former in particular. The story is a long one. According to a current rumour there is some insurmountable difficulty in the building of the new graveyard. Every stone and concrete block put down disappears, goodness knows where. Mr. Bostock has had experience of harbour-works before and, so says the man in the street, he knows what is to be done when stones and blocks disappear in that mysterious fashion. It is the work of the devil, and the devil must be propitiated by human sacrifice! There are 117 pillars to be built, says the man in the street, and accordingly 117 human lives must be immolated. Every second man in Kotabena believes the story, and wives and mothers live in trepidation lest their husbands and brothers. Little children who go to school are waited for by their parents with the utmost anxiety, and the scare is working much distress. One awkward result of the scare is that servants will not go out into the boutiques after dusk, the scare has much behind to recommend it to the credulity of the people. In days gone by no big work was undertaken, they say in a whisper, but that what is known as billa was paid.

NEWS OF THE DAY

The project of a light railway to Hazari-bagh seems likely to be considered at once.

His Highness the Maharajah of Mysore will leave Madras by special train from Royapuram on the forenoon of the 4th Feb. for Calcutta.

Mr. V. Nammamaya, Senior Dewan Peishcar, Travancore, has been appointed to act for the Dewan again during the Maharajah's tour to Madras. This is the third time he has been so appointed.

Lieutenant-Colonel C. Herbert, Political Officer with the ex-Amir, has been selected to succeed Lieutenant-Colonel T. C. Pears as Resident at Jarpur when the latter goes to Kashmir to officiate as Resident in April next.

Mr. W.E.T. Clarke, Chief Presidency Magistrate of Madras, proceeds by sea on short leave to Colombo for the benefit of his health, and during his absence Mr. Aziz-ud-din Hussain Sahib Bahadur, Khan Sahib, the Second Magistrate, will act as Chief Presidency Magistrate.

The Amir of Kabul is reported to have recently ordered stock to be taken of the arms and munitions of war in all his arsenals. The results is that he considers sufficient quantities to exist, plus those which his factories can turn out, and that there is no need for further purchases in Europe. His Highness means, therefore, to direct his attention to increasing his military transport.

A Peking letter states that the term of the British-Chinese Agreement concerning the joining of the Yunnan-Burma telegraphs being about to expire, the Waiwipi has notified Sir Ernest Satow, the British Minister in Peking, that Viceroy Yuan Shih-kai, as Director-General of Chinese Telegraphs, intends to send a special deputy to Peking to confer with the British Minister about the matter.

The medals designed for the purposes of the Industrial and Agricultural Exhibition at Bombay are expressive of much of the work accomplished or aimed at by the promoters of the Fair. On one side is a fine female figure representing the Congress, as the patron saint of the institution. On the other is India with Bombay prominently marked, and round this miniature map are represented different sections into which the Exhibition has been sub-divided. The design is ingenious and comprehensive.

Owing to heavy snow the Hurnai line train was detained for 24 hours between Mud Gorge and Kuch Stations, and arrived on the evening of the 30th, instead of on the 29th. Much suffering was experienced by the passengers. Captain Reddie, who had gone to Kuch in the morning, expecting to meet the train returning in the evening to Quetta, was detained at Kuch station for 24 hours in intense cold. Arrangements should be made at Quetta for lighting fires in waiting rooms and opening refreshment rooms at the waiting rooms. The station is only opened before the arrival and departure of trains, an excellent arrangement for the station officials but a cruel one for passengers.

H. E. Tang Shao-yi, special High Commissioner to Lhasa, says the "W. C. Herald" of the 13th January, is residing at 27, Markham Road, which was the residence of the late Mr. Tong Kid-sun. Being a member of the Chinese Educational Mission which went to the United States in the seventies, his Excellency is to be the guest of his schoolmates on Thursday night, the 12th instant, at a banquet to be held in the artistic residence (lent for the occasion) of Mr. Chew, a wealthy Chinese gentleman of leisure, on Range Road, Hongkew. His Excellency Tang Shao-yi is armed with plenary powers from Peking to settle all matters between the Indian Governments and the Tibetan Lamas.

A curious case has been engaging for some time in the Criminal Court at Tist. A Fraulein Ribbes set up in business as a "Nature healer," using simple and ordinary rational means as her entire stock-in-trade. In the course of her practice a child whom she was treating died, and an action was brought against her for man-slaughter. Her counsel a man of extreme ability, argued that in Fraulein Ribbes's methods there was absolutely nothing criminal. She made no pretension to the possession of secret powers, but simply relied on Nature. He pointed out that two of the most notable names in modern German medical science, Drs. Lehmann and Schwenger, were identified with the methods which Ribbes had adopted. Dr. Lehmann was the director of the famous establishment near Dresden, to which the highest in the land resorted, including members of the reigning Hohenzollern family. Dr. Schwenger was Bismarck's body physician. It would, counsel maintained, be a miscarriage of justice to condemn Ribbes for practising the elementary rules of hygiene. The jury acquitted her, and the State was condemned to pay the costs of the action.

When the Empress Eugenie arrived on Tuesday night at the Hotel Continental, and stepped from the electric coupe which had been sent to the station to meet her, a tall and soldierly-looking old man of some seventy years stood, with bare head, and saluted in military fashion, telephones, the "Express" Paris correspondent. In the brilliant days of the second Empire the old soldier formed part of the Empress bodyguard, and it is said that he conceived a strong platonic love for his Sovereign, which made him the butt of his comrades. The Empress frequently visits the city over which she once reigned so brilliantly, but even the newspapers hardly notice her comings and goings. The old soldier, however, never fails in his fidelity, and stands in one of the corridors through which the Empress is bound to pass, so that he may salute his former Sovereign as she arrives at the Hotel Continental. He invariably brings a magnificent bouquet of violets or roses, which are placed in the Empress's drawing-room. The Empress is deeply touched by the old man's devotion, and would long ago have attached him to her household, but he would seem to become a domestic and has always steadily refused to leave Paris. On the boulevards the tall figure dressed in a shabby old cloak and slouch hat, is a well-known character.

NOTES FROM MUZAFFARPUR.

Muzaffarpur, Jan. 29.

PLAGUE.

It is over a couple of months that plague made its appearance in Muzaffarpur, but, as yet, it shows no signs of abatement. It has carried away a very large number of men the majority of them belonging to low class and a certain portion to middle class people. Almost all the gentry of the town have removed to the outskirts and several of the pleaders of the Judge's Court have left the town for their respective homes.

DARBHANGA RAJ CASE.

The 27th of January was the date fixed for the filing of written statement in the big Darbhanga Raj case brought by the widows of the late Maharaja Sir Lachhmesar Singh Bahadur G. C. I. E. against the present Maharaja. An adjournment being applied for on behalf of the Maharaja the District Judge adjourned the case to the 1st of May next.

A DISTRICT JUDGE'S COURT.

It is over a year that the Lieutenant-Governor held out to the people of Darbhanga a strong hope of their being provided with a District Judge's Court at Lacharia Sarai, but people are still in the dark as to when their hopes would be realised. There is a very strong rumour here that one of the Subordinate Judge's Courts at Muzaffarpur would be removed to Darbhanga and hold its sitting there from the 1st of April next in anticipation of a formal sanction from the Secretary of State for the location of a District Judge there and its being made a Civil District. If this is done it would be a great relief to the people and lead them into the belief that the final separation is a matter of time only.

FROM SERVICE TO BAR.

Babu Lakshman Prasad B.L. a rising young junior pleader of the Judge's Court, Muzaffarpur, was offered Sub-Deputy Collectorship in September last. He accepted the Government offer but after having served for a couple of months resigned the post and has now reverted to the bar where he is sure to do well. It is a pity that such deserving men are not taken into the Provincial Executive Service simply for want of a strong recommendation while graduates fresh from College and possessing no knowledge of law, if they can only secure official support, have no difficulty in having access to it.

STUDY OF PNEUMONIA.

BELLEVUE TO PLAY AN IMPORTANT PART IN IT.

The pneumonia commission of the Board of Health, authorized recently by the Board of Estimate to expend $10,000 to secure specific knowledge concerning pneumonia, and to ascertain what measures can be taken to decrease the rapidly growing percentage of deaths by that disease, has mapped out its work in such a way that by the middle of next summer a comprehensive report will be turned in.

The commission, which is headed by Dr. Herman M. Biggs, also includes Drs. Jane-way, Prudden and Holt of this city; Drs. Welch and Osler of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore; John H. Musser of the University of Pennsylvania; Theobald Smith of Harvard and Frank Billings of the University of Chicago. While the greater part of the work is to be done in this city, bacteriologists and pathologists are working along parallel lines in Boston, Philadelphia, and in the Red Cross Sanatorium at Saranac Lake. In this city, data are being secured at the Board of Health laboratory at the foot of East Sixteenth street; at Bellevue, Mount Sinai and the Babies' hospitals, and in Dr. Prudden's laboratory. Twenty men in all are engaged, eight of whom are in the Board of Health laboratory.

The commission expects to learn why the death rate from pneumonia has increased from 7 per cent. twenty years ago to 17 per cent. at the present time, although there has been an actual decrease in fatalities from all other diseases. It hopes to propose measures for the prevention of the disease which will enable the Board of Health to treat pneumonia as scientifically as tuberculosis is now treated.

Probably the most important part of the work is to be done at Bellevue Hospital, where a new pathological laboratory has been fitted up at considerable expense. Dr. Charles Norris, for many years assistant to Dr. Prudden, pathologist at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, was recently appointed pathologist to Bellevue at a salary of $5,000 a year.

Bellevue's contribution to the work of the commission will be to determine the distribution of pneumonia germs after death in the upper part of the nose and head, as well as in the bronchial tubes and lungs and the deeper cavities. Autopsies will be made in every case of death from pneumonia where permission can be secured, and a complete stenographic report of each autopsy will be made. The history of each case will be complete, in order that some idea of the effect of social conditions upon pneumonia can be secured.

Aside from the aid to be given to the pneumonia commission the new Bellevue pathological laboratory is expected to make valuable contributions to medical knowledge in other fields.

In the past, when the cause of death has not been clear, and the course of a disease unusual, the pathological examinations have been made in various medical colleges, and by the members of the Bellevue surgical staff. For this reason the reports have not been as complete as they will be when the examinations are made under the supervision of one pathologist. While the reports at Bellevue will be mainly for the aid of the hospital staff, they will be published by the board of trustees annually.

"The great amount of material available for pathological and bacteriological research at Bellevue has been wasted for many years," said Dr. John W. Brannan, president of the board of trustees. "In securing the appointment of an able pathologist we can now save this to science, and Bellevue can take the part it should have taken long ago in adding to the world's medical knowledge. We will now secure a complete history of every interesting or unusual case where we can get permission for an autopsy."

The Bellevue laboratory occupies two rooms in the old boiler house, and is fitted up with complete bacteriological and pathological apparatus. Besides a stenographer, Dr. Norris will shortly have two assistant pathologists.

SCIENCE FOR LAY READERS.

ARCHAEOLOGICAL EXPEDITION FOR MEXICAN EXPLORATION.

The Government of Mexico is about to send an expedition of archaeologists to explore some ancient ruins of what is believed to be the lost city of Teayo, which was, more than 300 years ago, the capital of the Otomite Kingdom in that country. According to the San Francisco "Call," the ruins were found by a party of Americans who were investigating a report of the existence of coal deposits. When they reached the Otomite territory, they found an Otomite Indian whom they employed as guide. They found no coal where it was said to exist, and they resolved to continue their journey into the wilds for the purpose of seeing what they might discover. Guided by the Otomite Indian, they travelled over mountains and through dense jungles of tropical forests for fourteen days. They came upon a number of small settlements of Otomite Indians, and but for the fact that their guide interceded in their behalf they would have met with a hostile demonstration at the hands of these natives. They were the first white men to penetrate the region, and their appearance was a sensational event to the Indians, who have never submitted to or acknowledged the authority of the Mexican Government over them. The Otomites proudly boast that they are still unconquered.

On the fourteenth day the Americans came within sight of the city of Teayo. The sacrificial tower, which rises to a height of 65 feet, attracted their attention when some distance away from the city. The Otomite guide went forward and obtained permission from the inhabitants of the ruined city for the Americans to enter. They spent several days viewing the ruins of the ancient capital, which in the days of its glory had a population of not less than 500,000 people. They obtained a large number of good photographs of the different ruins and views of the city.

These photographs include hieroglyphics which exist in the city. It is believed that when these hieroglyphics are deciphered they will show that a discovery of great archaeological value has been made. In an interview one of the members of the party of explorers gave the following description of the ruined city:

"The sacrificial tower, which now rises 65 feet above ground, formerly had an altitude of more than 100 feet. It has been reduced in height by the erosion of the centuries. There are great quantities of stones detached from it scattered over the ground at its base. When the great age of this pyramid or tower is considered, it is the best preserved monument of Mexican antiquity known to exist. At the base of the tower the north and south sides are 65 feet wide and the east and west sides are 75 feet wide. A stone stairway 30 feet wide runs up the tower on the east side. It is estimated that at least 40,000 tons of material were used in constructing this monument."

"Another interesting feature of the ancient city is the great central underground chamber. The Otomites constructed underground thoroughfares through all parts of the city, and many of these dark and gloomy passages and chambers are still in a good state of preservation. This system of underground thoroughfares radiated from the sacrificial tower. Many of them are walled with stone, upon which the beautiful work of the sculptor is still to be seen."

"I saw underground chambers which were filled with skeletons of men said to have been the victims of religious rites. The labyrinth of underground passages, chambers, and vaults will probably reveal a great store of information bearing on the past history of the Otomites when properly explored and investigated. One of these subterranean passages runs from the centre of the city to a surface opening in the face of a cliff, seven miles distant. It is said that no one has entered this mysterious passage for many decades. It was used to provide the imperial family a means of exit from the capital in time of emergency."

"The ancient Otomites excelled the Aztecs in sculptural art, as is shown by the splendid expressions of the human face on stones wrought by the Otomites as compared with that of the Aztecs. The tomb of Tachimoc, the last of the emperors of the Otomites, is one of the things of interest which we saw at Teayo. The tomb has a raised cover, upon which two sphinx-like figures stand like guards over the pagan ruler. A cross of mahogany, erected in recent years surmounts the cover."

"At each corner of the paved area over the tomb stands a sculptured stone taken from some ancient lodging place to do honor to the memory of the dead Emperor. One of these stones is eight feet high and is covered with allegorical figures, inscriptions, and hieroglyphics; another of the stones represents a prince, a third a wise man, and the fourth a woman, who is minus her head."

"The Otomites sacrificed the lives of their victims by casting their bodies from the top of the tower through the hole which formed the centre of the structure from top to bottom. The bodies fell into the subterranean passage under the tower. Otomite Indians are of light complexion. In the days of their power they were well advanced in civilization."

FAUNA OF THE FALKLAND ISLANDS.

In the memoirs of the Manchester, Eng. Literary and Philosophical Society Rupert Vallentin, who has spent many years in the Falkland Islands, where he has been an assiduous observer and collector of the fauna and flora, contributes an account of those islands. The author alludes to the celebrated stone rivers, which consist of slowly moving blocks of quartzite between banks of peat, and says that the stones had approximately attained their present position before the formation of the peat, and the "rivers" have been produced by the denudation of the peat. Apparently, the Falklands are by no means the desolate spots imagined, and the vegetation being locally abundant, and the shores of the estuaries and coves in West Falkland being fringed with bushes of the Falkland box, and with the aid of plenty of manure many English vegetables can be grown in sheltered spots. With regard to the fauna, the most interesting statement is the one to the effect that, so far as the author could ascertain, the Falkland Island wolf (Canis antarcticus) is now completely exterminated. This latest addition to the list of animals extirpated in recent years by human agency is the more to be regretted seeing that this wolf, or fox as it is used to be called by the settlers, is an extremely interesting animal from the point of view of geographical distribution, and one that is probably very insufficiently represented in museums. According to Professor Huxley, the Falkland Island wolf is closely allied to the North American coyote, the remarkable feature connected with this resemblance being that either there are no true wolves in either Central or South America.

Birds form by far the most important portion of the terrestrial vertebrate fauna of the Falklands, and among these penguins, of three species, and "mollymauks," or lesser albatrosses, are numerically the most abundant. Mr. Vallentin's article is illustrated by a photograph of a "rockery" of rock-hopper penguins (Eudyptes chrysocome), showing the myriads in which these birds congregate on the coasts, and by a second of a much smaller assemblage of gentu penguins (Pygosceles teniata). An interesting fact in connection with the habits of the rock-hoppers is that the smooth surfaces of the hard igneous rock over which these penguins have passed for generations are not only highly polished, but are marked by irregular groovings made by their claws. These scratches are usually about three inches in length, and may be as much as a quarter of an inch in depth. Apparently such a polished and striated rock surface might well be attributed to ice-action. A striking feature about such a rockery is the number of dying and maimed birds to be met with: such injuries appear to have been inflicted by sea or sea-lions. The enormous number in which the "mollymauks" frequent the Falkland and other Antarctic islands may be inferred from the statement that on one occasion a vessel arrived at the main port with a cargo of 10,000 eggs of this species. Mr. Vallentin found these beautiful birds so tame and confiding that they allowed themselves to be stroked by his hand as he admired the softness of their plumage and its spotless condition. How these birds keep themselves clean amid the liquid filth of a rockery is little short of a marvel.

CATS WHICH APPEARED TO THINK.

According to a correspondent of "Nature" three cats he knew of behaved as if they thought. The first, a large, sleek tabby belonged to a private family living in the city. Between 1888 the owner, Mr. L. S., was surprised by his manservant coming to his office at the back of the house in business hours and asking, "Did you ring, sir?" "No, I have not been into the house, was his answer. This occurred repeatedly. At last the man watched, and observed that, the family being in other rooms, the dining room bell rang, and when he answered it he placed a leather easy chair was so placed that by getting on the seat, and then standing on the arm, she could reach the knob with her front paw; and she continued to practise this accomplishment as often as she was shut up in the room.

The second cat, also a large tabby, lived at Blackheath. Her master often sat up late writing. The cook, a "good old servant," also now and then sat late, sewing or reading, in the kitchen. One night after twelve, Mr. H. F. was interrupted by the cat running into the library (the door being open), meowing and clawing him, then running towards the door, and repeating these acts. He got up and followed the cat, which now ran into the kitchen. The cook was sitting asleep close to the fender, a piece of coal had fallen on her dress, and it was burning. No harm happened, thanks to the cat.

The third was a very small, slight cat, white and tabby, a good mouser and bird catcher, and not at all afraid of a rat. On one occasion the servant, exasperated by the trouble caused by the cat's selection of a birthplace for kittens, drowned them all, for which she was duly rebuked. The next family moved in a suitable corner, but, when two or three days old, disappeared, as well as their mother. As the cat was never allowed to go upstairs, it was supposed that, like another cat once before, she had made a hole in the garden, where she spent most of her time. At dusk the mistress of the house went up to dress for dinner. As soon as she entered her room she heard something fall, and it struck her that the noise was like a cat's jump from a height. Proceeding lightly she found the cat standing by the door. She then saw that the curtains, where folded on the bed, had been a little disturbed, and found three soft white kittens. They were immediately put into a basket with flannel, and set by the kitchen fire, but as soon as the lady had gone downstairs her way back to the bedroom, she selected that room? She was not petted by the lady, nor friendly to her. The house was safe, but waiting at the table, she again while the family were at dinner that they were by the kitchen fire, and she was waiting the usual scraps, she was made in all likely hiding places and were very fond of them. A cat, and though she was fond of them, a long betwixt the poor little creatures in two floor behind the largest folios in the library. The space above the books was so small that it is difficult to think how the cat got in with a kitten in her mouth, or even without it. This was the one room into which the housemaid seldom came, especially in the evening, as the master sat there. He did not pet the cat at any time, and she took no notice of him. But though securely hidden, the kittens could hardly have lived in that odd place; their mother seemed to have overlooked their need of warmth. After this failure she submitted to have them kept in the basket in the kitchen.

HOW WILD BEASTS ARE CAPTURED.

Any young man on the look out for an exciting occupation may be advised to turn his attention to the trapping of wild beasts for exhibition purposes, for there is no calling which offers an equal variety of dangers. And at the same time there is money to be made at it; a good giraffe is nowadays worth anything from £1,000 to £2,000, and a full-grown gorilla would probably be worth twice the larger sum, while hippopotami are quoted at very high prices.

But the capture of such beasts as these is not easy to effect, hence the fancy prices quoted.

The giraffe falls into the professional trapper's hands but very rarely. It is a highly nervous creature, and, being very quick of hearing and fleet of foot, generally succeeds in eluding its pursuers.

In giraffe hunting, trappers generally employ a contrivance of three ropes joined together at one end and weighted at the other. Pursuing the animals out in the open land, the trapper drawn as close to his quarry as the latter will allow, and throws his entanglement in such a way and with so much skill that it winds round the giraffe's long legs and brings it to the ground, when the trapper rides up and secures his victim.

GIRAFFES ARE HARD TO CAPTURE.

Zebras are also caught in this manner, though the lasso used by cowboys is often employed. But the difficulty with the giraffe is to get near enough for the entanglement to be thrown the intervening distance.

Days and weeks trappers often spend in chasing flying giraffes and following their tracks, only to lose their quarry at the critical moment or be forced to abandon the hunt as hopeless.

When, however, a capture is made there is wild rejoicing at the animal repository for which the trapper works, for good giraffes are wanted in all the great zoological gardens of the world.

Contrary to what might be expected, elephants are easily taken by trappers who know how to go about the work, though they are very bad tempered, and not to be trifled with.

The experienced trapper, however, runs little risk. He finds the place where elephants are evidently in the habit of passing or halting, and there, with his assistants, he digs a great hole some twenty feet in diameter and five feet deep, erecting a strong, high, wooden fence all round it, except at one place, where a big gate is hung.

ELEPHANTS ARE EASY PREY.

Then from close beside the gate a long, low fence is built, and in this fence, only a few feet away from the gate of the trap, is an opening just wide enough to enable a horse to pass through.

When a herd of elephants is discovered in the neighbourhood, the trapper rides out to meet them, and inveigles an elephant, generally a bull, to give him chase.

This animal is generally only too willing to do. It chases him at a good hot pace towards the trap, towards which the trapper rides. But when he is right on the gate of the trap, he suddenly swings his horse round and slip, through the narrow opening in the fence, which has escaped the notice of the angry elephant, which, being very much less agile than the horse, cannot, turn in time or stop itself, but plunges into the trap, the gate of which closes quickly after it, and lands it with no little force in the great hole prepared for its reception. And the great experience of Rangas about thirty years my experience goes to show that as far as record for length of this cold weather is concerned, the average temperature recorded on my balcony at the end of November to date is 60.5 degrees F. The highest minimum temperature has been 66 degrees, and on the 22nd December, 25th December, and 30th December. The lowest was this morning, (Feb. 1.) 53 degrees F. Yesterday it was 55 degrees F. I have never known the glass below 55 degrees before.

The weekly crop report of the Punjab states that good rain over the Province. Prices remained unchanged for the most part. Sowing of extra spring crops is in progress in Delhi; also pressing of sugarcane in Jullundur, Ferozepore, Amritsar, Sialkot and wheat-weeding in Jullundur.

Harvesting of toria (Brassic) is going on in Amritsar. Land is being prepared for sugarcane sowings in Lahore. Condition and prospects of standing crops good to average and much improved by the recent rainfall. The outturn of sugarcane is average in Sialkot and fair in Shahpur. Turnips are attacked by "Tela" (an insect) in Shahpur, pans of Multan and in Ferozepore, and spring crops are damaged by hail in Delhi. Cattle generally in good condition. Fodder sufficient in all districts, except in parts of Lahore, Sialkot, Shahpur and Minwali.

Attention was drawn some weeks ago to the rising industry in the preparation of the raw material for popane, derived from the latex of the papaw fruit and tree. There are several plantations in the neighbourhood of Colombo, where the papaw tree is grown exclusively with this commercial object in view. A light long incision is made on the unripe papaw fruit with a bone-bladed knife—metal being objectionable—and the latex, which is emitted at once, is collected in a little metal cup which contains a quantity of water. The latex drops into the water and remains distinct from it. It is then collected, dried, and powdered very fine being taken throughout to keep the product clean and pure. It dries into a brownish odourless powder which is then exported to the chemists in Europe, who derive a large percentage of popane from it. One or two firms in Colombo act as buyers of what there is of the local produce and export it to their agents in Europe.

The gorilla, however—the most fearful beast to be met with in any wilderness—cannot be caught in this way; indeed, it is said that a full-gorilla has never yet been captured alive; certainly no sane man would attempt such a feat.

The few gorillas that are occasionally seen in captivity are the victims of infantile indiscretion or are common baboons. Gorillas fear nothing, which makes them terrible foes; and even when mortally wounded their ferocity, quickness and strength are simply astonishing.

When a wild-beast trapper meets a gorilla, the market value of the beast may occur to his mind, but it does not tempt him to try to make a capture; he exerts all his coolness and daring to mark a vital spot in the beast's huge frame, and while the brute swears rapidly forward to attack him, he shoots it dead. If his aim is bad, the probability is that a human skeleton will mark the place where the encounter took place.

Lions and tigers are frequently captured as cubs, their parents having been killed by hunters.

This is more exciting sport than the alternative method of trapping the full-grown animals, for did beasts, especially those of the cat tribe, are wonderfully brave defenders of their young, and if not hit in a vital part, they will let their young fall into human hands.

IN AMERICA Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a great favorite with the mothers of small children for colds, croup, and whooping cough. It contains no harmful substances and always gives prompt relief. Sold by Smith, Stanistreet and Co., Wholesale Agents B. K. Paul and Co., Abdool Bahaman and Abdool Kareem, Calcutta.

TAKING A LION.

Trapping is always done at night, a hole being dug in the ground with a diameter of some twenty feet and a depth of two or three feet. Over this is stretched a strong net, hidden by brushwood and leaves, and having round its edge a strong elastic band.

Directly the animal walks on to the net and sinks into the hole the elastic band is liberated and immediately closes the net around the animal. In this position the captive is dragged into a strong cage prepared for it, there to await removal at the trapper's convenience.

Catching boa-constrictors is not be lightly indulged in; the risk of being in their vicinity is sufficiently obvious, but the work is neither so difficult nor so dangerous as one would suppose. They are generally made victims of their own faulty digestions.

A tempting bait in the form of a young deer or antelope (natives in India have been known to use their infants for the purpose) is tied in the jungle where snakes are known to frequent.

From time to time the trapper returns until the bait is found to have gone from its place. Then he knows his quarry is as good as taken, for somewhere near he will certainly find the boa-constrictor curled up in leaden slumbers, trying to "sleep off" the antelope, and far too dreamy to attempt to defend itself.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

We understand that no date has yet been fixed for the return of Mr. Dane's Mission from Kabul.

The "Daily Times" of Lahore says that the headquarters of the proposed new Sixth Circle of Inspection in Educational Service will be at Amritsar.

Recruiting in the Punjab during the current cold weather has been generally satisfactory a good stamp of men being obtained for most regiments.

The Head Office of the Bharat Dharam Mahamandal will shortly be opened in Lahore. The posts of a paid Manager and several preachers have been sanctioned by the Executive Committee.

The oldest inhabitants of Simla pronounce the present winter as the most severe for many years. The falling of snow does not seem to cease, although rain, sleet and cutting winds seem to vie in the contest for power. The railway, however, seems to be running with greater success than last year. Great discomfort prevails among the residents from scarcity of fuel.

It would be interesting to have a full and complete account of all the political pensions which are paid in India, and of the reasons in each case for the grant. The total disbursements under this head must be very considerable, for according to the Madras Administration Report the amount of such pensions in that Presidency alone was at the beginning of 1903 no less than Rs. 5,20,529 per annum. This total, ever, had fallen by the 1st January 1904 to Rs. 32,999 per annum.

A light long incision is made on the unripe papaw fruit with a bone-bladed knife—metal being objectionable—and the latex, which is emitted at once, is collected in a little metal cup which contains a quantity of water. The latex drops into the water and remains distinct from it. It is then collected, dried, and powdered very fine being taken throughout to keep the product clean and pure. It dries into a brownish odourless powder which is then exported to the chemists in Europe, who derive a large percentage of popane from it. One or two firms in Colombo act as buyers of what there is of the local produce and export it to their agents in Europe.

MALDA INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Malda, Jan. 23.

The third annual industrial and agricultural exhibition of Malda opened to-day at 2 p.m., under the Presidency of our energetic and popular Dist. Magistrate, Mr. B. De. As usual the riverside Maidan has been secured as the only convenient place obtainable for accommodating stalls and for erecting a huge pandal. For more than a month the Exhibition ground was under the direct and constant supervision of the District Engineer Babu Nagnendra Nath Banerjee and the grand work is now in its completion. The opening ceremony was held under the pandal which is well-decorated with ornamental samianas and formed into a gallery, where more than thousand people can get suitable accommodation. Separate arrangement was made for "Parda" ladies and school boys. The occasion was graced by the presence of Mr. S. N. Huda Dist and Sessions Judge of Rajshahi, the high officials, the leading Zemindars, pleaders, Muktears and others of the District. In fact it was a grand demonstration representing all classes of the community. After the recitation of some benedictory hymns in Sanskrit and Persian language composed for the occasion, Babu Parash Chandra Banerjee, M.A.B.L., Secretary to the Exhibition, read the report in which he dwelt at some length on the utility of the exhibition and other connected subjects. Babus P.K. Raha, B.L., and N.D. Chatterjee translated in Bengali the learned report of the Secretary and explained clearly to the public, the necessity and usefulness of such an institution and the manifold advantages that can be derived from its existence. Babu Radha Mohan Agrawal of Delhi, who is an Upadesak of the Vaisya Mahasava of the United Provinces and who came here on some social and commercial questions, in his able and instructive speech in Urdu kept the audience spell bound for a while. He admitted the superiority of the iron articles of Malda and assured that he would try his level-best to encourage these articles and silk cloths of this District, so that they may get a better market in other parts of the country. The celebrated Malda mangoes and its various preparations, if sent in distant countries will undoubtedly, he said, fetch a good deal of money. After a few more addresses by some gentlemen, the president gave a short reply in which he expressed his delight to find that the Exhibition by its last two years sittings has done considerable progress in the District in matters agricultural and industrial. He informed the audience that fund has already been acquired for establishing a technical school in the town and at the Arapur school, which is the centre of the cocoon-rearing portions of the District a teacher is appointed to practically teach the boys the use of the Microscope in rearing cocoons and a model nursery has been established at Panchanampur for the sale of the best cocoon-worms. He advised the natives of the District to take special care of the Exhibition as upon them mainly rests its durability and success and high officials like themselves are mere birds of passage cannot therefore have any lasting interest over the interest of the District. The audience then declared the Exhibitions open. President proclaimed by the firing of bombs which was then the officials paraded and music. Exhibition ground for a while through the Exhibition exhibits which were looking into the various different parts coming incessantly from the Exhibition Committee of the District. The Exhibition was working energetically to make it a much instructive as attractive as possible. All kinds of domestic and foreign articles were exhibited together with a variety of improved instruments of agriculture and horticulture. The varied products of the field, generally shown on glass-bottles the rich vegetables consisting of the drum-headed cabbages, cauliflowers, turnips, beets, carrots, tomatoes radishes etc and indigenous vegetables of the District and a good collection of timely fruits presented a gay spectacle. The best specimens of embroidery and the cotton and silk clothes, cocoons and silk-threads of every variety, all of this District, together with plantain fibres sent from Barisal and the clothes made out of it were a charming scene to look at. The famous steel-trunks of every shape and size made by Jangli Shah of Berhampur and various other articles made of metal and wood of every day necessity were vividly exhibited. But the most instructive portion of the show is the working of the hand-loom with fine cotton and silk threads. For the entertainment of the visitors, the whole staff of the Minerva Theatre of Calcutta has arrived here and will hold its performance from tomorrow for 3 nights. Besides there will be elephant and horse races, boat and cycle races and cattle and school boys' race during the time and peoples are pouring in from different parts of the District.

PLAGUE EPIDEMIO.

Bankipur, Jan. 28.

Again the whole town is wearing an appearance of gloom and despair. Again the great monster which sweeps away so many souls every year, is making its rapid strides in all quarters of the town. On the east of the Patna College the plague is doing a regular havoc among the people and so in Nayatola and Makhnua. The fishermen in the neighbourhood of the Morapur post office, have left their homes and hearths and settled elsewhere. This morning a dead body was found lying in a drain close to the Morapur post office and it is strange that none turned up to remove it. Is not the local police responsible for such indifference to the safety of the people? Is not the local Municipality equally to blame for such gross negligence in their duties? What are the Municipal Inspectors doing now? Patna is the metropolis of Behar and the seat of the Divisional Commissioner and yet the city is as insanitary as possible. Some quarters are so dirty and congested that they require careful attention of the Municipal officers. In the houses of the poor there are no latrines and in some there are still well-latrines which prove nothing but the repositories of the germs of all epidemics. Let the Municipal and the Police officers forget their days of inertia and shake off their lethargy. Let them be up and doing in right earnest. The rate-payers pay their taxes and yet their grievances are not attended to.

A SENSATIONAL PROSECUTION.

Jaunpore, Jan. 28.

The prosecution of Moulvi Syed Mahmood Ahmed of Delhi under Section 107 of the Cr. P. C. is causing a good deal of local sensation. The Moulvi Shaheb belongs to a most respectable family of Delhi, which had once the honor of giving some very well-known Prime Ministers to the Delhi Emperors. Moulvi Ahmed himself is an under-graduate of the Punjab University and a Jagirdar in the Punjab. He was formerly a Sunni and he has since then adopted Shia faith. He has proved a great champion of the latter creed and has given hard hits to the Sunni religion. Well, sometime ago the Moulvi Shaheb delivered sermons in the houses of certain Shias and in the Imambaras. They so much disturbed the equilibrium of the minds of some Sunnis that they apprehended a disturbance of the peace! And, on the report of a Sunni Sub-Inspector of Police, the local authorities actually instituted proceedings against Moulvi Ahmed under Sec. 107 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. A summons against the Moulvi was issued on the 4th January and was returnable by the 12th instant. But will the public believe me when I say that a warrant of arrest against the Moulvi was issued on the 7th instant? Yesterday Mr. Boys of the Allahabad Bar appeared before the District Magistrate, explained to him the law regarding the issue of processes under the security sections of the Cr. P. C. and got from him an order to the effect that the warrant should remain inoperative till the 13th February next, when Mr. Boys has undertaken to produce the Moulvi Sahib in Court.

A KINDLY PUBLIC OFFICER.

Some months ago a letter from Rai Maya Das, R.B., Magistrate of the First Class and Manager of the Mamdote Estate in the Ferozepore District, Punjab, was received in London, by the proprietors of Mother Seigel's Syrup, in which the writer ordered some of the Syrup to be sent to him at Ferozepore, and mentioned that a boy in the camp had been radically cured of disorders by using the Syrup. The English firm wrote to Mr. Rai Maya Das, asking for some further information.

Mr. Maya Das, in a letter dated London, 2nd, has the pleasure to enclose a certificate from the father of the boy who was completely cured, as it came under my personal observation; therefore I can testify with confidence that the accompanying certificate is a genuine one. It is written in the "Hindustani" language, and I have translated it for you and it speaks for itself.

I have since been recommending this wonderful Syrup to people far and near, for I remain often out in camp. I always travel with a bottle of the Syrup in my box and have already used 9 bottles out of the dozen I bought from you in May last. Both my wife and I (and we have 14 children) use it freely when any one of us is out of sorts, and it acts like a charm. My wife has been suffering from a wheezing cough and catching breath for years together, and she thought it was asthma, but I thought it was the liver, and so gave her a few bottles, and now she is as well as she can be, going easily up and down the stairs—formerly it was a real trial for her to go up a single step.

Please send me this time another dozen or even two dozen, if there is any saving in it. Thanking you in anticipation and also for your past kindness in complying with my request so promptly, I remain, dear Sir, Yours faithfully,

THE CERTIFICATE.

"I, Pir Baksh, of Mamdote, in the Ferozepore district, declare that my son of about 12 years of age, namely, Ghulam Ahmad, was very ill about the year 1901. He was under the treatment of two physicians, namely, M. Khushi Mohammad and Azizuddin, for some time, but was no better. His liver grew worse and he became so weak that the least exertion gave him palpitation of heart, and his motions were frequent and very little at a time. His diet did not agree with him, and at last the boy was skin and bones, and we were in despair, until one day when Rai Maya Das, R.B., Ext. Asst. Commissioner, while out in camp, heard of the child's ailment, and expressed his opinion that the lad was suffering from a bad form of dyspepsia and recommended Mother Seigel's Syrup.

"I began with 10 drops after meals, and by the time we had tried the Syrup for about 20 days the child was improving fast, and after taking 3 small bottles he was quite well. He is now robust and in excellent health and spirits. His younger brother, too, who had had fever, is now being treated the same way and is recovering fast."

It is not often that a public officer or man of standing in a country is willing and kind enough to interest himself in the personal affairs of others to the extent that Mr. Rai Maya Das has done in this instance. He points out the way of relief for all who suffer from indigestion and stomach troubles.

KUMBakonam NOTES.

RAILWAY PROJECT.

Murugasam and Company have organised a scheme for starting a light railway. The proposed project is to construct a 30 inches Government of India standard gauge light railway on the existing Tanjore District Road between Mayavaram (S. I. Ry. Jn.) and Tranquebar (British Land Custom House Nandur) a distance of 23 miles, upon the sole principle of self-help and co-operation without requiring any State guarantee. This will purely be managed, financed and manned by Indians. The nominal capital of the Company is Rs. 7,99,895 divided into 300 shares of Rs. 1,500 each entitled to a fixed rebate of 6 p.c. and 7,777 ordinary shares of Rs. 45 each. Most of the shares are already taken. Messrs. K. Narayanasami Iyer, P. S. T. S., M. C. Krishnasami Aiyar B. A. and C. Murugasam are some of the directors. In Bengal, there is the Bengal Provincial Railway conducted by Indians. There is another similar scheme under consideration in Bangalore. It is impossible to estimate the blessings which this infant enterprise is likely to render by giving fresh impetus to the languishing industries and enterprises, by whipping into activity the apathetic workmen whose conservative habits prevent them from taking to new paths of industry and by inducing them to produce articles which are necessary for the works of this sort. Nobody can boldly assert that by constructing one or two light railways, the proverbial poverty of the workmen can be entirely rooted out, but it may be reasonable to state that they will go to a great extent to ameliorate their present condition by removing that state of chronic despondency which is the root of all misery and affliction. It is to be hoped that the efforts of the Murugasam and Co. will be crowned with unqualified success. Unqualified success can only be the result of willing and ready co-operation, while mutual distrust will prove the worst clog in its wheel, as it will be "the bane of bliss and source of woe."

The Department of Land Records and Agriculture Assam, issue the following forecast of the cotton crop of the season 1904-1905 excluding the areas sown in the Naga and the Khasi Hills for which no estimates are available: the total area sown with cotton in the province during the year is estimated at 32,000 acres. This is about 3.2 per cent. in excess of the area reported in the preliminary forecast dated the 19th August 1904, the excess being due mainly to revised figures received from Sylhet. The season has been generally favourable, and a better outturn than of last year is expected. The crop should be about normal. The gross outturn of uncleaned cotton in the province, excluding the Naga and the Khasi Hills, may be estimated at 28,000 bales (about 14,000 bales of cleaned cotton) against 23,000 bales estimated for last year.

THE MOON'S SURFACE.

PROCESSES OF PHYSICAL CHANGE.

Mr. W. H. Pickering publishes in "Nature" an article of deep interest on the question whether physical changes do or do not take place on the moon's surface. Entirely rejecting the theory of the older school of astronomers, that "the moon is a burnt-out cinder on which nothing ever happens," Mr. Pickering, as the result of observations made in Peru, Jamaica, and California, strongly affirms this conviction that physical changes do occur upon the moon. These changes he classes under three heads—those due to volcanic action, those due to the formation and melting of hoar frost, and those due to vegetation.

First in the order of changes caused by volcanic action, Mr. Pickering mentions Linné, which, prior to 1843, had a diameter of between four and seven miles, as established by the measurements of Lohmann, Madler, and Schmidt. The diameter has now shrunk to three-quarters of a mile, while a new crater has been announced by Klein near Hyginus. The most convincing proof, however, of volcanic change is afforded by the results of independent observations by different men, and extending over a long period, on the floor of Plato. Surveys taken in 1870, 1881, 1892, and 1904, have all shown about 40 craterlets, but on each occasion the appearance of new ones and the disappearance of others previously known to exist, has had to be noted. A study of the floor of the region during the past summer revealed the presence of what appeared to be a large crescent-shaped bank of sand, six miles in length by from one to two miles in breadth. Its height was computed at not far from 1,000 feet. It is the only object of the sort upon the floor. A reference to 42 observations made upon this "floor" between 1879 and 1890, many of them at that part of the day when the sand bank is now most conspicuous, shows that during this long period nothing of the kind existed.

HOAR FROST.

The question of physical changes due to the formation and disappearance of hoar frost is dealt with largely by refuting "a priori" objections as to the possibility of the existence of water vapour upon the moon and the absence of evidence as to erosion taking place. Mr. Pickering points out again that water vapour existing on the moon must always, sooner or later, be dissipated into outer space just as all volcanologists are now agreed that stupendous volumes of water are expelled during terrestrial volcanic eruptions. As to erosion taking place, fairly conspicuous evidence of it exist on the central peaks of Theophilus and Eratosthenes, but the eroded valleys are small, and it requires good atmospheric conditions to observe them. The only strong evidence that water ever existed upon the surface of the moon lies in the dry river beds, of which several are mentioned. One of the clearest proofs that hoar frost exists upon the moon is furnished by the varying forms and dimensions of the air of small craters known as Messier and Messier A. When the sun first rises on them they are of about the same brilliancy as the "mare" upon which they are situated, but three days later they both suddenly turn white, and remain so until the end of the lunation. When first seen the white areas are comparatively large, especially that surrounding Messier itself, but it gradually diminishes in size under the sun's rays. By the eighth day little is left outside the crater itself, while at the end of the lunation only the bottoms and interior of western walls remain brilliant. Linné and Eratosthenes also furnish signs of aqueous congelation.

VEGETATION.

Changes attributable to vegetation are more conspicuous than those of either of the other two and the writer points out that if the explanation of vegetation is admitted, both the other explanations almost necessarily follow. There can, of course, be no free water upon the surface of the moon, but there is yet nothing to prevent it from occurring beneath the surface of the ground, retained by the capillary action of the soil. Since on the earth plants can live on moisture which they have in turn extracted from such a soil, there seems to be no difficulty in understanding how they could live on the moon, in a soil which could thus retain considerable moisture in spite of the low atmospheric pressure. As early as 1837 it was pointed out by Madler that there were two small spots in the crater Alphonsus which always became very dark at about the time of full moon, while earlier and later they were much lighter. A similar observation had been made by him regarding a region just to the south of the Mare Crisium. Little else was known regarding the matter until 1892. Since that date spots presenting these characteristics have been found all over the moon's surface, except in the vicinity of the poles. Dark spaces at other points have been photographed.

Since this dark area cannot be shadow, our only alternative seems to be that we have here a real change in the character and brightness of the lunar surface. Since we do not know of any mineral which gradually darkens as the sun shines upon it, and later fades out again, our only alternative seems to be to call in the aid of vegetation.

THE UNRIVALLED BLOOD PURIFIER & TONIC.

It is a sovereign remedy for the radical cure of all kinds of syphilis, mercurial and other poisonous sores which have their origin in the impurities of blood. As a tonic and alternative it is also highly beneficial to ladies in their weak state after confinement. From the very commencement of its use, the poison will be gradually eliminated from the system, and cheerfulness and vigorous energy will take the place of despondency and lassitude. It may be freely taken at all seasons by young and old of both sexes alike without any apprehensions of bad effect.

RAJA SITARAM ROY.

(Special for the Patrika.)

The people of Magura (Jessore) are just now busy making preparations to celebrate the memory of Raja Sitaram Roy in a befitting style. But who was Sitaram Roy? We can guarantee that many Bengalees have not even heard his name, though he was a Bengalee Kayastha, who fought many a glorious battle against the then ruling Mahomedan houses at the end of the seventeenth century. He was like George Washington, Napoleon Bonaparte or Sivaji, was destined to serve a special purpose, though of course, owing to certain circumstances, the lustre of his glory did not shine out so brightly as that of the three great personalities mentioned above. Aurangzeb was the Emperor of India at the time when Sitaram Roy flourished. It is generally known that owing to the bigotry and retrograde policy of this Mogul monarch, the Marhattas under the leadership of Sivaji, the Sikhs under that of Guru Govinda and the Rajputs under that of Rajsingha rose against him. Inactive and thoroughly domesticated, Bengal also did not sit idle at the time; for, Sitaram stepped forward with his general Menahati to show that peaceful Bengalees may also fight like good soldiers when necessary. Aurangzeb, hemmed in on all sides by hordes of Hindus fighting for their dear country, and his exchequer exhausted, he sent a call after call for money to the then ruling Chief of Bengal, Azimomson and his Dewan Murshid Kuli Khan, who in order to meet this demand, carried their exactions to the extent of veritable looting. It was about this time that Sitaram was born of humble parents and grew up unknown and unnoticed. As he came of years, true patriotism entered into his heart and the desire of his existence was to free his country from Musalman thralldom.

Bengal was at this time ruled by a number of local potentates, who were unscrupulous and the country was given up to rapine, violence and plunder. Sitaram found to his grief that a large number of the formidable dacoits (robbers) carried on their nefarious depredations unchecked, because they had secret connections with the Government officials called the Pundzars, though the main business of the latter was to maintain the public peace. He thereupon went to the Court of Dacca to seek a redress for this unnatural and unholy alliance between the dacoits and the Pundzars and the mitigation of other grievous wrongs done to the people. Being unsuccessful there he repaired to the Court of the Emperor at Delhi, where also his mission proved practically abortive. But it was this visit which turned the whole current of his existence. He saw how even the biggest of the Hindus were humiliated by the lowest of the Mogul officers, and how the good relations between the two races were turned into those of bitter hatred. Humiliated and disconsolate Sitaram returned home, and resolved to throw off Musalman yoke, and this he sought to do by the following manner:—

At the time about which we are speaking there was a great dearth of drinking water in Bengal. And Sitaram secured the permission of the Nawab to dig big tanks and large reservoirs of water. This was only a means to an end. The shrewd Bengalee envisaged twenty-two thousand diggers and ostensibly for the purpose of making tanks but really to throw off Musalman yoke. Sitaram taught them secretly how to fight and roamed with them in various parts of the district, digging tanks wherever there was dearth of water. He gradually got a passion for constructing reservoirs of water. It is said that he daily bathed in a new tank dug by his men. He had two-fold object in view. One was to remove forever water-difficultly from Bengal; the other was to free Bengal from Musalman rule.

It was reported to the Nawab that Sitaram was teaching his men the art of warfare and an explanation was demanded of him. But he had no difficulty in removing all suspicion from the Nawab's mind. He said his object was to suppress the dacoit bands. As a matter of fact, he freed his part of the country of these terrible pests, who had established a reign of anarchy and lawlessness and made the lives of people utterly miserable. By suppressing these dacoits not only did he bring peace and prosperity to the land, but secured a large amount of wealth which they had robbed from others.

Previous to these incidents, Sitaram while very young, had suppressed and killed a turbulent Pathan rebel on behalf of the Nawab and got the whole Pergunah of Naldi from the Emperor of Delhi as a reward. But his real intention could no longer be concealed. He was proclaimed as a rebel, and about the year 1700 A.D. he came into actual collision with the combined forces of the Pundzars of Bhuna and Jessore. After inflicting upon them a signal defeat in an open engagement, he declared himself as an independent King of that part of Bengal. By and by all the adjoining Zemindars acknowledged him as their king and swore allegiance to him. It was in this way that within a short time he became the master of 44 Pergunahs, and his kingdom consisted of the whole of the Districts of Khulna and Jessore and parts of Faridpur and Backergunge. He built his capital at Kanungur, and a fort which was well-fortified by deep and spacious ditches and strong ramparts, and filed with guns and ammunitions. To please his Mussalman subjects and show that he would make no difference between Hindus and Mussalmans, he named his capital subsequently as Mahamadpur, after the name of a local Mussalman saint. A strong detachment of the Nawab's army was subsequently detached to put down Sitaram under the command of a well-known Mogul general. But within a short time the whole Mussalman force was annihilated by Sitaram and the Mogul General killed. A haughty Mahomedan commander named Abu Tarp with a few detachments of the Imperial army sent by the Emperor from Delhi met the same fate at the hands of the well-known Bengalee General of Sitaram, Menahati (Mirinoy). This third defeat threw the whole country into the greatest possible consternation possible. After this we find a very elaborate preparation on the part of the then Nawab Murshid Kuli Khan, to put down Sitaram. For several years, Sitaram fought with the troops of the Nawab and worsted them in many a battle. At last his valiant General fell at the hand of an assassin, employed to do this horrible act, it is said, by a powerful Hindu Zemindar, at the instigation of the Nawab. Subsequently Sitaram himself fought in the battle-field, and the last hope of the Bengalee nation was extinguished.

NOTES FROM CUTTACK.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Cuttack, Jan. 28.

AN EXTRAORDINARY ACT.

A local Deputy Magistrate, whose name is well-known in connection with the case of Mr. Harris, which came for hearing from the High Court, has made his presence felt within the short time he has been here. His latest act deserves more than a passing notice. The other day, while he was holding his Ijlas, a certain man was chosen to arbitrate and bring about compromise in an assault case in which some of his neighbours were involved. The noise caused by their conversation so far disturbed the equilibrium of the mind of the Magistrate that he sent a peon and had the arbitrator arrested. The latter was then sent to the Police lock-up, where he was detained for about 3 hours. He was then brought up before the court and tried on a charge of causing interruption. His defence was that he was acting as an arbitrator outside the court and did not cause any interruption to the Court. The Court however found him guilty and sentenced him to a fine of Rs. 10.

HUMAN SACRIFICE.

A rumour being prevalent that a certain Tributary Chief of Orissa had sacrificed about 36 human beings before a goddess in fulfilment of a certain vow he had taken, an enquiry was made by the Commissioner of Orissa, assisted by the Magistrate of Puri and the Deputy Commissioner of Angul. The result is that no evidence in support of the allegations was forthcoming.

VISIT OF THE HON'BLE JUSTICE PRATT.
The Hon'ble Justice Pratt was here on a tour of inspection. He expressed his desire to see the leading Indian gentlemen of the station. So a number of gentlemen had interviews with him.

The case has been transferred from the Ken drama Sub-division to the head-quarter where it is now on the file of Mr. Montion Deputy Magistrate.

COMMERCIAL NOTES.

According to an official report the chrome deposits lately discovered in the Pishin and Zhob districts of British Baluchistan are being opened up for export, the output obtained in 1903 having amounted to 284 tons. Larger quantities are however now being raised, and in the first six months of 1904 the output was as much as 1816 tons.

At the Nadiad Government farm in the Bombay Presidency the crop being mainly dealt with is tobacco with a view to improved cultivation in the district, experiments in rotations and manures to secure the largest yield are in progress and a curing house is to be provided to see what can be done in obtaining a better quality of leaf for export.

According to a recent official report asbestos has not yet passed beyond the prospecting stage in India, although attempts have been made in recent years to work the deposits in the Ajmer-Merwara district, Rajputana, the Garhwal district in the United Provinces and the Hassan district in the Native State of Mysore.

Important experiments are being made in the production of rubber and fibres at the Government plantations at Benhope, Burilvar and Kallar in the Madras Presidency, where their cultivation has attracted much attention from planters and others in Southern India who have taken up the exploitation of these products in addition to tea, coffee and cinchona.

In connection with agricultural development in Burma the authorities propose to start and Irrigation Farm near Mandalay, which, it is hoped, to make eventually the centre for an agricultural school where young Burmans might be trained and subsequently qualify for farm managerships. The idea is a good one and its carrying out ought to prove of great benefit to the Province.

In the Bombay Presidency a considerable extension is anticipated in the number of cotton ginning and pressing factories owing to the continued prosperous state of all industries connected with cotton. Most cotton growing districts are possessed of these factories, but in several parts of the Presidency they are reported to have been enabled to cope with the local trade and the number of these factories has therefore increased or is likely shortly to increase in Khandesh, Nasik, Sholapur and Hyderabad all important cotton centres.

There was a large export trade in stick lac from Burma in December, 3,452 cwts. of the value of Rs. 1,44,911 having been sent out of the Province, practically the whole of which, or 32.2 cwts. came to British India, or 32.2 cwts. came to British India. The whole of the jade exports of December, amounting to 136 cwts. of the value of Rs. 25,000, went to foreign ports out of India. Teak was exported to the quantity of 13,476 cubic tons of the value of Rs. 12,66,823, of which India proper took 9,320 cubic tons and foreign ports 4,022 cubic tons.

The opening of new cotton presses and ginning factories in the Central Provinces has received an immense impetus.

Although we have not met a hard-boiled carry, ing the Penal Code under his arm yet, says the "Calcutta Weekly News," we have heard of a purdahnashin Hindu lady, who managed to keep possession of all her lands, and much more in spite of the mighty rivers of Eastern Bengal and the hardly less potent provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure. It is said of this lady that once, when she got into trouble and happened to engage an eminent counsel, she treated him to a disquisition on secs. 107, 145 of the Code and suggested to him her defence. We have been also told that the common riot in Backergunge and some other Eastern districts of Bengal swears by the sections of Act VIII of 1855 and the Criminal Procedure and Penal Codes. Having regard to these, the day, when the hard-boiled carry will carry a copy of the Penal Code under his arm, may not be far off.
