Stylistic repetition in Bāṇa's Harṣacaritam and Kādambarī

In 1954 the great and prolific indologist and Indo-European linguist Jan Gonda published a magisterial¹ study on the „Stylistic repetition in the Veda“ with examples from many languages² and countless books and articles quoted. In order to extend the possibility of using the volume it was therefore thought appropriate to add a list of at least the ancient Indian loci in an appendix. Further, this most valuable 400+ page book has no contents the lack of which was deplored by Renou in his review.³ It was made then by Hauschild in his review in OLZ 1961: 628.

Gonda stated the books and articles of his textual quotes mostly in notes bibliographiques (qui) sont une des parures du livre which are, however, occasionally incomplete.⁴ When e. g. after thirteen pages he cites the book B. J. Bijleveld, Herhalingsfiguren (thus, incomplete, p. 93 note 19) again on p. 106 note 49 as Bijleveld, op. cit. ..., one will leaf back and look for the full title, which, however, occurs only on p. 225 note 2. More than once the title of a paper was not mentioned and had to be found out; where it was not possible I put three question marks. To get hold of it with the help of Google was not always possible. As this act is impracticable and troublesome, at my request two students, Olga Kienzler of Lipsic and Viktorie Haldovska of Wuerzburg, therefore kindly made an ordinary bibliography to be appended to this article.⁵

For the present paper the first three chapters of Harṣacarita and 237 pages of the NSP text of Kādambarī as in Smith's edition were examined. With Bāṇa it is noticed that nearly all the letters of the alphabet are used and that sentences may contain various alliterations. Sounds written in Latin script with diacritics such as the three sibilants are put on a par with those without. Assonance of vowels seems to be less frequent than consonants, of the latter particularly c, bh, p, v and s, of ligatures kṣ and pr as can be seen in the specimina of places given in this paper. The translations are generally based on Cowell & Thomas for Harṣacarita and Layne and Smith for Kādambarī, but have often not been followed literally.

Nineteenth century Western Sanskritists such as Albrecht Weber did not value the style of the Indian kāvya. In an instructive article Gwendolyn Layne, whose early demise is here shown a great loss to the study of Indian belles lettres, cites him as writing: „(Kādambarī) compares most unfavourably with the Daśakumāracarita by a subtlety and tautology which are almost repugnant, by an outrageous overloading of single words with epithets: the narrative proceeds in a strain of bombastic nonsense, amidst which it—and if not it, then the patience of the reader -- threatens to perish altogether: mannerism ... is here carried to excess“ (1980: 99).

Several of the phaenomena in Vedic texts are found also in both Harṣacaritam and Kādambarī of the great littérateur and grammarian Bāṇa (last half 6th – first half 7th C.E.)⁶ whose „prose is an Indian wood, where all progress is rendered impossible by the undergrowth until the traveler cuts out a path for himself, and where, even then, he has to reckon with malicious wild beasts in the shape of unknown words that affright him.“⁷ His dreaded long sentences („Langzeilen“)⁸ may call to mind a previous birth of his as a Sumerian, and his near proverbial lexical overload may have been imitated by Māgha (Dundas 2017: xvii). To quote the Indian opinion of Neeta Sharma: „Bāṇa stands unrivalled in the field of Prose Kāvya. Though indebted to Subandhu, Bāṇa rises higher than him on account of his excellent poetic merits.“⁹ Gonda apparently did not give examples from these texts in the book under discussion, the minor ground for the present article, which is meant as addible to a necessary reprint.¹⁰

A distinguished feature of Bāṇa’s prose is hyperbolic: lust¹¹ the size of an elephant (Hcar 37,13f.)¹², man’s chest broad like a rock of Mt Himâlaya (Hcar 61,13)¹³, king holding the whole world in the palm of his hand (Kād 20,1), hundred thousands of female riding elephants stay in front of minister’s gate (Kād 208,4), etc. Exaggeration, though, is of course not alien to the earlier epos either.

Alliteration in Bāṇa’s works¹⁴, as in other literatures, is the clearest stylistic device, and due to the influence of strong emotions a speaker may repeat the same sound or sounds in order to help him regaining his peace of mind or psychical equilibrium. It is not always easy to determine how far an individual case is deliberate or conscious on the part of the speaker. Clear it is with the PM Boris Johnson crying „I’d rather be dead in a ditch“; his loud promise to leave the EU by Oct. 31 „do or die (rather than delay Brexit“ or the House Intelligence Chairman Adam Schiff’s vow to investigate the whistleblower complaint ‚come hell or highwater‘ as a result of an „affekt-motorischen Prozessen“

⁹ Neeta Sharma 1968: 13.

¹⁰ It would be very useful then when the headlines would show the title of the chapter, not that of the book. The editor ought to have comprehended that, but he did not use the volume.

¹¹ Neeta Sharma 1968: 209.

¹² Frequent reference to elephants (as, e.g., Darpaśāta) mentioned by Smith 2009: xx is also characteristic of Bāṇa’s later colleague Māgha (8th century C. E.; Dundas 2017: xxi). -- Bollée 2015: 75.

¹⁴ As to the term „alliteration“ see Gonda 1959: 177 note 1.

which the hearers will no doubt have observed.¹⁵ A conspicuous case of unconscious alliteration is the Bavarian greeting „Grüß Gott“ which is a contraction of „Es grüße Sie Gott“¹⁶ („May God greet you“, originally: „May God encounter you in a friendly way“).

For non-native Sanskrit speakers, as Gonda stated (loc. cit.), it is not easy to judge whether the phenomenon at issue is deliberate or not. The latter may be the case when an alliterated compound is found also elsewhere as stated in dictionaries, e. g. Hcar 14,5 *madhu-mada-mudita*¹⁷-kāminī „a woman exhilarated by the intoxication of wine“ and the figura etymologica¹⁸ at Kād 205,2f. kathāḥ kathayantibhir itihāsan vācayantibhiḥ „(by female ascetics) who tell tales and narrate histories.“ Also Hear 109,20 gr̥hīta-vikata-veśāḥ „(heroes) looking horrible“ though the compound v.-v. is not in Monier Williams (MW); Kād 83,3 āgr̥hīta-dhauta-dhavala-valkalaś ca „putting on a clean white bark garment“ (cf. Kād 197,1) and Kād 166,1 graha-gr̥hitenēva „(girls dancing) as if possessed by the planets“ (cf. Kād 231,3) may belong to this category.

Less evident are Hcar 110,15f. mahato mandalasya madhye „amid a great heap (of ashes)“. because instead of mandala Bāṇa could have used vṛnda, and Kād 28,2f. samāsanna-snāna-samayo „(king) for whom the time to bathe had come“, for āsanna alone would have meant the same.

Of special interest is the mantra¹⁹ Hcar 26,8 Bhagavato bhūr-bhuvah-svas-tritaya-tilakasya „(of Cyavana) the forehead ornament of the vyāhṛti triad earth, atmosphere, sky“. Further Kād 191,5 mada-jala-śabala-śankha-śobhita-śravana-puteṇa „(elephant) with ear-cavities which are decorated with conch shells (stained) with ichor“, because mada-jala occurs also elsewhere (MW), but for alliteration salila instead of jala is expected and the NSP text at Kād 44,2 sura-pati-prārthanāpīta-sakala-sāgara-salilasya „Belonging to the man who drank up the ocean’s water at the request of Indra“ actually has jalasya against salilasya in the commentary thus preventing alliteration. For that reason we may have to read: mada-salila-śabala- at the former locus.

Deliberate alliteration without emotion occurs in the description of a group of beings or things even when they do not move such as forest trees bordered by fullgrown coconut palms, etc. Kād 40,1 atikāthora-nālikera-ketakī-karīra-kesara-parigata-; the blooming flowers in Agastya’s hermitage at Kād 48,3 utphulla-kumuda-kuvalaya-kahlāram or Hcar 54,7f. na garva-gara-guru-gala-graha-gada-gadgadā girāḥ „the voice (of a man unable to wait on a king) with stammering speech throttled by the grave disease of pride.“

¹⁵ Gonda 1959: 177f. – Mr Johnson may have coined the first expression himself in excitement as often occurs with assonance though similar expressions such as to fall or lead into a ditch occur since 1380. The second utterance, however, is proven since 1488 (Oxford English Dictionary 2019; thanks to Gabriele Knappe). Hell or Highwater is also the title of a film by David Mackenzie (2016).

¹⁶ Wikipedia. On sentence contraction see Gonda 1959: 397ff.

¹⁷ Mádati and módate are not related etymologically, yet have the same meaning (see Mayrhofer 1963: 568 and 693).

¹⁸ Gonda 1959: 273ff.

¹⁹ Gonda 1959: 407; do, 1980: 226; Alper 1991: 355.

Examples with moving beings are Hcar 93,4 vihāra-velā-vilole paryatati patnī-jane „wives move around, because for strolling about it was the moment to amuse themselves“; 112,21; or Kād 66,6f. an-upajāta-kesarair iva kesari-kiśorakair „(a man followed by dogs who) were like lion cubs with manes not yet grown.“ The phenomenon under discussion is not due to emotion or excitement here.

With emotion are apparently Hcar 12,13 para-dōṣa-darśana-dakṣā dr̄ṣṭir iva kupitā buddhir na te ātma-roga-dōṣam paśyati „skilled in seeing the faults of others your angry mind, like an eye inflamed, does not perceive the frailty of its own passion“; 13,17 śāpa-śoka-śithilita-hastā „Sarasvatī’s hands are limp with sorrow by the curse“; 14,5f. *kāminī-kopa-kuṭila-kaṭākṣa-kṣipyamāna iva kṣepīyah kṣiti-dhara-śikharam avatarati*²⁰ „(the sun) descends on the peak of the (western) mountain, as if he were thrown down by the angrily bent side-glances of beauties“; Kād 62,1 ākulākula-cārin „wheeling about in confusion“ (of birds).

The latter quote seems to show what Gonda calls „musical effect“ (1959: 179), though the present author is less persuaded by the examples he gives and does not understand of the last instance mentioned the note „Hardly fortuitous is also Rām 2,56,2 śṛṇu śvanyānām / valgu vyāharatām svanam.“ A musical effect or Klangfreude (sound pleasure) would rather pertain to an imitative or sound symbolic purpose the learned scholar mentions on p. 178. Thus Hcar 46,13 writes jhillikā-jhāṅkāriṇī „there was a chirping of crickets“; 84,1 unmada-kokila-kula-kalāpa-kolāhalibhiḥ „(with trees) noisy by masses of excited cuckoos“; 58,18 jhanajhanāyate “camel’s ornaments tinkle“; Kād 83,7 lola-lodhra-lavalā-lavaṅga-pallavaiḥ „(hermitage) with waving leaves of l., l., and l. plants“; 174,3 ghura-ghurāyamāṇa-ghora-ghoṇena śiro-bhāgena „horse’s fierce nostrils made a ghur-ghur snort as it raged“; 175,1f. lākṣā-lohita-lamba-lola-saṭā-saṁtāna- „the waving length of mane red as lac hanging on (horse’s neck)“; 191,2 āsphālita-ghargharikā-ghargharam „sound of the gh. bells when struck“; 215,5 khanakhaṇāyita-khara-khalīnena „causing the horse’s rough bridle bit to produce a khan-khan sound.“

Close to sound pleasure is rhyme Bāṇa seems to have been fond of making various kinds of. Beautiful specimens of it, though not always „a frequent accompaniment of agitation and excitement“²¹, at the beginning are: Hcar 15,13 yāmini-kāmini-karṇa-pura-campaka-kalikā-kadambaka-pradīpa-prakare „lamps like clusters of campaka buds filling the ear of the lady of the night“; 17,16 evam uktā mukta-muktāphala-dhavalalocana-jala-lavā ... pratyavādit „thus addressed she dropped a pearly clear tear and replied“; 19,8 grāha-grāva-grāma-skhalana-mukharita-srotasam „(river) the waters of which were resonant with its tumbling over many alligators and rocks“; 25,16 apahrtahara-huṅkārāhaṅkāro ... yuvā „youth humbles the pride of the defiant roar of Śiva“; 75,12 aṅga-bhaṅga-valana- „bending their limbs in curves“; sapta-sapti-sama „(prince will be) like the sun“; 217,17 kamala-komala-karāḥ „hands soft as day-lotus“²²; Kād 188,4; 150,8 Harṣa-prakarṣam abhisamīkṣya bhū-pateḥ „observing the king’s excess of pleasure.“ An incident is Hcar 80,19 nidrā-vidrāṇa-drona-kula „crows fast asleep“, because nidrā-drāṇa is found also, e.g. in Rājataranginī (MW), but Bāṇa apparently added vi- to rhyme with ni- of nidrā (cf. Hcar 80,19 infra).

²⁰ Here a not even rare phenomenon is visible: that in a succession of assonant words a sound in the middle of the last one starts another series beginning with that consonant or ligature: the kṣ in kaṭākṣa sets off a new row. Thus also Hcar 39,1 vipakṣa.ksobha-ksamah kṣiti-tala-labdhāyatih ... prāvartata-vimalo-vamśah „(from Vatsa) proceeded a prolific stock potent to shake its foes, stretching far over the earth’s surface“; 47,10f. pratiśām āṭikamānā ivōṣareṣu prapā-vāṭa-kuṭi-paṭala-prakaṭa-luṇṭhakāḥ prapakva-kapi-kacchū-guccha-cchaṭacchoṭana-cāpalaiḥ; 50,1f. giri-guhā-gambhīra-bhāṃkāra-bhīṣaṇa-bhrāntayah bhuvana-bhasmī-kara-nābhicāra-caru-pacana-caturāḥ „(winds) the movements of which are terrible as they roused echoes in the mountain caves“; and 72,10f. -srotāṇīśīva sravantau-samasta-saurabha-bhrāntair bhrāmarā-mandalaiḥ „(Harṣa’s feet were) like streams of honey never ... unattended by swarms of bees fluttering bewildered at the sweet odour of the chaplets on the heads of all feudal chiefs“; 85,2 rakṣati kṣitim kṣiti-bhuje „while the king protects the earth.“

Not immediately at the outset of a series are Hcar 13,7 sva-hṛdaye roṣa-doṣa-niṣadye „when you yourself must be a haunt of anger and harm“; 20,10 avani-pavana-vanagagana-dahana-tapana-tuhina-kirāṇa-yajamāna-mayīr mūrtir aṣṭau dhyāyantī „contemplating the eight forms of Śiva: the earth, winds, water, sky, fire, sun, moon and sacrificer.“ Hcar 87,1 shows an a-b-a rhyme: labdha-sādhu-śabdāḥ „(Bāṇa’s cousins) receiving only good words/ whom people call good“ and 115,20 kuntalī kirītī kundalī „hair-lock, diadem, earring“²³ while Kād 234,4 has an a-b-b-a rhyme, quasi-chiasm: vittamada-matta-cittā „(kings’) minds are drunk with pride of wealth.“

Rhyme assisting understanding²⁴ is often seen at case endings, e.g. Hcar 67,10ff. with instr. sing.: śvasantam iva śauryeṇa, mūrcchantam iva madēna, trutyantram iva tārunyena etc.; Kād 180,1 khura-puṭānāṁ raveōa rajo-niruddha-ghrāōa-ghora-ghoṣeōa ca heśitena²⁵ „with a neighing all the more fearful for issuing from nostrils choked with dust raised by the horses’ hooves“; with genitive Hcar 104,20f. dhāma dharmasya, tīrtham tathyasya, kośam kuśalasya, pattanam pūtatāyāḥ, śālā śīlasya ... „an ascetic is a dwelling of dharma, a tīrtha of truth, storegouse of sincerity, a burgh of purity, a hall of high character“; 107,20f. kaṭākṣam iva kāla-rātreḥ, karṇōtpalam iva kālasya, om-kāram iva krauryasya, alam-kāram iva aham-kārasya, kula-mitram iva kopasya „a glance as if of the night of doomsday, as the dark earlotus of death, as the om-kāra (triumphant shout) of pitilessness, the ornament of arrogance, and a family friend of wrath“. Kād 162,10 instances rhyme together with adnominatio: Deva, paśya paśyāsyā kumārasya Rhyme of locative sing. occurs at Hcar 87,4f. vayasi vacasi yaśasi tapasi sadasi mahasi vapusī yajuṣi ca prathamāḥ „(Bāṇa’s cousins) were foremost in years, speech, distinction, ascetism, in the conference, the festival, in person and in sacrifice“; and plural: Hcar 40,8 vahatsu vatsareṣu, vrajatsu vāsareṣu (ab ab scheme) „in the passing of aeons, the going of the years“; 80,19 nidrā-vidrāṇa-drona-kula-kalila-kulāyeṣu kāpeya-vikala-kapi-kuleṣu ārāma-taruṣu „while the trees of the groves stood with their monkeys resting from all (their) tricks and with the nests of the crows with their inmates fast asleep.“ Rhyme with a suffix is found at Kād 197,2 ādhāramayair iva maryādāmayair iva maṅgalamayair iva „by chamberlains who seemed to be pure stability, propriety and auspiciousness.“

²² On the „most prominnt seemingly extraneous factor in Sanskrit poetry, Bāṇa’s included, is the lotus“ see Smith 2009: xx.

²⁴ Smith 2009: xxiii.

²⁵ DS 370 reads khura-rajo and omits ghora before ghoṣeōa though the latter is rather probable because of the alliteration.

Paronomasia and adnominatio are, in a way, close to rhyme as homoioteleuton.²⁶ In the former there is an etymological²⁷, verbal or nominal, relation between the words in question. Thus Hcar 15,3f. kṛta-madhupa-mudi mumudīṣamāne (a-b-b-a rhyme !) kumuda-vane „when the night-lotus bed was about to open²⁸ to the pleasure of the bees“; 46,3 lalātam-tape tapati tapane „as the sun scorching the forehead grew hot“; 71,11 śriyam sthāne sthāne sthāpayantam; 84,13 krātavā kriyā kriyate ? „does the performance of sacrifices proceed without obstacles ?“; Kād 406,2 *citra-karma-kṛta-srama*²⁹; 166,1 graha-gṛhātenēva „girls dancing) as if possessed by the planets³⁰“; 231,3; 193,4 śadhiκaraña-lekhakair ālikhyamāna-śāsana-sahasram „thousand / many edicts were written“ down by the court clerks“; with an adjective 151,5 utsukōtsukam klāmyati me manah „exhausts my all to eager mind“; 197,1 dhṛta-dhauta-dhavala-dukūlōttarāyaiḥ „by chamberlains wearing freshly washed full-length garments of silk.“

Paronomasia with a past and a present participle is at Hcar 58,14 preṣitaiś ca preṣyamānaiś ca preṣita-pratinivṛttaiś ca ... kramela-kulaiḥ „(royal gate was) tawney with troops of camels“ sent or being sent as presents or brought back in return for others sent“: Kād 221,9f. shows the combination of a past participle and a gerund: vidita-veditavyasyādhāla-sarva-śāstrasya „(for you) there is not even little advice that need be given to you who know all there is to be known and who have studied all the manuals.“

A nominal relation with another word between is found at Hcar 10,15 tarjana-taraṅgita-tarjanākam utkṣipanti karam „extending her hand the finger of scorn being scornfully waved“; Kād 39,5 kari-kalabha-kara-mṛdita „(tamāla branches) crushed by the trunks of young elephants.“ Paronomasia and adnominatio join at Hcar 81,6f. śayanōpajoṣa-juṣi jaratā-kathita-kathe śiśayiṣamāne śiśu-jane „the children wished to sleep enjoying a good lying in bed after listening to the stories told by old ladies“; Hcar 49,11 cyuta-capala-cāśa-pakṣa-śreōt-sārita-sṛtayah „(winds) make the roads show rows of falling feathers of moving jays.“

Cases of pseudo-paronomasia³¹ are Hcar 79,3 cakṣuṣah prabhām parivṛtya preṣṭhasya prṣṭhato niṣaṇṇasya Mālava-rāja-sunor akathayat „after turning the brilliance of his eye (Harṣa) said to the M. prince, who was most dear to him and sat behind him“; Kād 46,1 Daśa-vadana-Lakṣmī-vibhrama-virāmo Rāmo „R. who stopped the coquetry of D.’s goddess of fortune“³²; 54,1f. kṣapāḥ kṣapayanti sma „nights are passed“ and 225,5 utpala-vana-vibhrama³³-brahmaṇī-Lakṣmīḥ „Lakṣmī is a bee moving about as a lotus forest“ the words being etymologically different, but the latter locus is volksetymologisch connected.³⁴

Adnominatio is very frequent, so that just a few clear specimina may be adduced. Hcar 22,22 hārīta-haritā ... adhabra-vāsasā „by his undergarment that was green like a pigeon“; 80,20 jarat-taru-koṭara-kuṭī-kuṭumbini-kauśika-kule „owls in their hut in the hollow trunks of old trees“; 93,6f. kṛṣṇājina-jatile jaṭini japati baṭu-jane „young ascetics hairy with a black antelope skin mumbled prayers“; 100,5ff. bhagavati bhaktisulabhe, bhuvana-bhṛti, bhūta-bhāvane, bhava-cchidi, Bhave bhūyastī bhaktir abhūt „(king) had a very great devotion to Śiva the venerable, readily won by respect, upholder of the universe, creator of creatures, annihilator of existence“; Kād 192,4 ujjvala-patṭakambala-paṭa-prāvārita-prṣṭhaiś ca „(palace splendid with horses) the backs of which were covered with blankets of beautiful silk“; 218,8f. -nūpurākulita³⁵-carana-yugalayā kūjat-kalahamṣākulita-kamalayēva kamalinyā „(by a young woman) whose feet had anklets on and who was like a lotus pool encircled by cackling geese“;

227,1 vividha-gandha-gaja-gaṇḍa-madhu-pāna-mattā „(Lakṣmī) intoxicated from drinking ichor from the temples of multiple gandha elephants.“ Sometimes the last word of a phrase has an initial which continues in the next phrase as in Hcar 19,2f. Arundhatī-dhauta-tārava-tvacam. Tvaṅgat-tuṅga-taraṅga-tarat-tarala-tara-tāra-tārakām „the clear stars were tremulous as they crossed the high-leaping waves“; 15,12 tamasi. Tarunatara-timira-paṭala-paṭana-paṭiyasi ... pradīpa-prakare „the many lamps sharply pierced the mass of very soft darkness.“

An extension of alliteration is the repetition of words or phrases at the beginning of a succession of clauses, anaphora³⁶ and the duplication of words and word groups.³⁷ Gonda does not separate them sharply when he treats punah punah and mandam mandam in the second category (Ch. XVI). As they are no rare appearance they are not unfamiliar to Bāṇa either. A few interesting specimina of the former category may suffice. The repeated word, an indeclinable, instr. plur. as adverb, the loc. of a noun or a gerund, may be followed by a word with the same Anlaut: Hcar 112,7 punah punah parīṇkayam „smearing intensely (his shoulders) again and again“; Kād 75,8 muhur muhur mukhena patato muhus tiryā nipatantam ... „(I) kept falling on my face but gradually lurching sideways“; Hcar 60,14 antarāntarā niśpatatām pravīśatām cāntara-pratīhārānām. Kād 148,6-8 has a trilogy: śanaiḥ śanaiḥ ... mandam mandam ... ahar ahāḥ. A string of clauses can begin with adya as at Kād 209,8ff. with a fourfold repetition: tāta ..., adya khalu ... bhuvana-rājya-phala-prāptir upajātā ... adya samṛddhāḥ sarvā guru-janāśīṣāḥ ... adya phalitam karma ... *adya prasannāḥ kula-devatāḥ*³⁸ or 209,11 with kva: kvēdam vayah ? kvēyam a-mānuṣī śaktih ? kva cēdam a-śeṣa-vidyā-grahaṇa-sāmarthyam ? „What a great difference there is between this age of yours and your more than human strength“ the repeated kva denoting a great discrepancy between two objects, actions, etc.³⁹

The locative can be singular or plural: Kād 75,6 pade pade pāpa-kāriṇam utprekṣamāno „imagining (to see) the villain at every step“; 61,8 diśi diśi danta-valabhikābhīr dhavalī-kṛtā „(city) is “whitened in every direction by ivory roofs“; 193,5 sthāna-sthāneṣu baddha-maṇḍalena „(servants ranged) in groups at various places.“ The gerunds⁴⁰ open what could be a b-pāda: 61,8 sthitvā sthitvā samākarnya „pausing now and then ... listening.“ Repetition of an adjective seems not so frequent with Bāṇa as in the Veda⁴¹ and the examples noted are not followed by a word with the same initial: Kād 71,5 an-āśādita-hariṇa-piśitah piśitāśana iva vikṛta⁴²-darśanah piśitārthī „(Śabara) who had not obtained any venison and whose face was twisted grotesquely like a flesheater’s, sought meat“; 180,7 aham-ahamikayā ca prāṇama-lālasāḥ „(princes) desirous of making obeisance (before the others) by saying: „me first, me first !““; 151,5 utsukōtsukam klāmyati me manah „... exhausts my all to eager mind“; 152,4 virala-viralena parijanenānugamyamānah „(king) followed by a very small number of attendants.“ An accumulation of compounds with the same first adjective is Hcar 110,19ff. kṛṣṇōṣṇīṣam kṛṣṇāṅga-rāgam kṛṣṇa-pratisaram kṛṣṇa-vāsasam kṛṣṇa-tilāhuti-nibhena „(magician) with black turban, unguents, amulet, garments.“⁴³ Further Kād 169,2f. sarva-lipiṣu sarva-deśa-bhāṣāsu sarva-saṃjñāsu sarva-śilpeṣu „in all scripts, in all foreign tongues, in all sign languages, in all crafts.“

For a double imperative paśya paśya see above under rhyme.

Duplication of words can be semantical, of complementary words such as Kād 126,1 dhvajānām unnatir, dhanuṣām avanatir vāṇīśānām „raising of banners, bending of bows“; as Hcar 13,1 ārambhe tapo galati, paścāt sveda-salilam „first the fire/energy/effort vanishes, then the perspiration fluid.“ They can also form a paronomastic compound of two nouns as Kād 208,1 *divā-niśam*⁴⁴; or of a noun or an adjective with positive meaning and its negative counterpart as Hcar 10,4 śāpa-śārkā śaraṇāgatair iye surāsura-munibhīḥ „(clasped) by gods, asuras and monks who seemed to have fled in their alarm of the curse“; 164,8 sukha-duḥkhatām darśayatā ... bhavatā „by showing yourself wholly the same in well and woe“; 569,5; and of two beside one another K 166,1 vyapagata⁴⁵-vācyā-vācyā⁴⁶-vivekena „dancing people with lost discrimination between what might be said and what not“; 202,1 kṛtā-kṛta⁴⁷-sukṛta-vicāra-nipuṇam „(palace) like a righteous deed caused good fortune at the beginning, middle and end.“ 162,9 shows a rhyming compound as a complementary wordgroup⁴⁸: śanaiḥ śanair

⁴⁰ Gonda 1959: 325.

⁴¹ Gonda 1959: 328.

⁴² DS 146 reads ivātivikṛta- which disturbs the alliteration.

⁴³ Note Behaghel effect.

⁴⁴ Gonda 1959: 52; 337; 340.

⁴⁵ DS 338; NSP apagata.

⁴⁶ Gonda 1959: 340; 177; 383.

⁴⁷ Gonda 1959: 248.

⁴⁸ Cf. Gonda 1959: 349.

aṅga-pratyāṅgāny asya nirūpayan „(Śukanāśa) very slowly examining it (the child) limb by limb.“

An complementary duplication, a twin formula,⁴⁹ emphatic, affirmation and analytic,⁵⁰ in a royal question to a parrot is Kād 38,6 kā te mālā, kas te pitā.

An accumulation of negations can also illustrate paronomasia as Hcar 100,8f. (akarot.) a-jam a-jaram a-mara-gurum asura-pura-ripum a-parimita-gaṇa-patim (Behaghel effect !) a-cala-duhitṛ-patim a-khila-bhuvana- ... paśu-patiṁ prapannaḥ „(king) was devoted to the Lord of beings, the increase, ageless guru of the immortals, foe of the Demon’s city, the lord of the countless hosts, spouse of Pārvatī, daughter ...“; Kād 50,2 a-gādham an-antaram a-pratimam apāṁ nidhānam ... padma-sarah⁵¹ „the lake of lotusses is a bottomless, endless and incomparable basin of water“. When the negative precedes the affirmative expression the former stands first⁵² at Hcar 12,10 a-sataḥ sato vā „(wise people behold all things as) evil or good.“⁵³ A string of negations with na demonstrate Kād 221,3 na divā na rātrau⁵⁴; 235,3f. na pūjayanti dvijātīn, na mānayanti mānyān, narcayanty arcanāyān, nabhivādayanty abhivādanārthān⁵⁵ „(bad kings) do not worship the Brahmins, do not honour the honourables, do not worship those worthy of worship, do not salute those who deserve to be saluted.“

The opposite is exemplified by Kād 158,5ff. sa-sāmantāḥ sāntaḥpurāḥ sa-prakṛtayah sa-rāja-lokāḥ sa-veśyā-yuvatayah sa-bāla-vṛddhā nanṛtur ... prajāḥ „subjects including feudatory kings, harem inhabitants, citizens, royal servants, courtesan maiden, young and old danced.“; 185,7f. sa-parihāsāḥ sa-viśrambhāḥ sa-saṁbhramāḥ sērṣyāḥ sōtprāsāḥ sābhyaśūyāḥ sa-vilāsāḥ sa-manmathāḥ sa-sprhāś ca „women were full of jests, confidences, confusion, jealousy, argumentation, criticism, coquetry and longing“ (GL 85). For yathā-combinations⁵⁶ see e. g. Hcar 85,4f. yathā-śakti yathā-vibhavaṇ yathā-kālam ca „as far as our powers and wealth permit and in due season“; 37,17f.

Coming now to the employment of the same word in different cases, polyptoton⁵⁷, instances partly combined with rhyme are found Hcar 17,7 kasminn avatīrṣati te puṇya-bhāji pradeśe hr̥dayam ? kāni vā tīrthāny anugrahītum abhilaṣasi ? keṣu vā dhanyeṣu tapo-dhana-dhāmasu tapasyantī sthātum icchasi ?⁵⁸ „On what blessed spot is your heart willing to alight ? Which holy bathing places do you want to favour ? In which fortunate secluded hermit abode would you live the ascetic’s life ?“ and together with responsio⁵⁹

⁵⁸ Gonda 1959: 174: „Kāvya authors ... knew how to vary the more or less symmetric shemata of colloquial usage in an artistic way.“

Kād 164,8 yad vipad vipadam sampat sampadam anubadhnāti „it is true that calamity follows calamity and success follows success.“

Bāṇa may indeed be counted to the circle of kāvya authors in which, as Gonda puts it,⁶⁰ „emotion, phantasy, a sense of beauty, a predilection for striking sound combinations and a tendency to ‘play’ with the elements of speech have come to prevail, the habit of expressing oneself by means of ... assonant word groups is widespread.“ The poet mainly seems to enjoy noticeable conjunctions of syllables to show his profound knowledge of Sanskrit, his conspicuous ability to play with it, his sound pleasure.

The present author wishes Gonda’s work to be reprinted with the missing parts as in this document and herewith allows Messrs Brill to do so.
